10.051 COMMODITY LOANS AND LOAN DEFICIENCY PAYMENTS

Marketing Assistance Loans (MAL's) and Loan Deficiency Payments (LDP's)

FEDERAL AGENCY:
Farm Service Agency, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

OBJECTIVES:
To improve and stabilize farm income, to assist in bringing about a better balance between supply and demand of the commodities, and to assist farmers in the orderly marketing of their crops.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

DIRECT LOANS; DIRECT PAYMENTS WITH UNRESTRICTED USE

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Commodity loans and loan deficiency payments (LDPs) give farmers a means of promoting more orderly marketing. Loans to producers may be "nonrecourse" which means that producers have the option of forfeiting the collateral to CCC at loan maturity in full satisfaction of the loan obligation; or "recourse" for low quality grain, or non-ginned seed cotton, which means that producers must repay the loans by maturity. "If market prices are above the support level, producers may repay their loans at the original loan principal plus interest and market their commodities. When market prices are low, most nonrecourse commodity loan repayments are less than the original loan principal plus interest. Eligible commodities for loans are produced and harvested wheat, corn, grain sorghum, oats, barley, rice, peanuts, upland cotton, extra-long staple cotton, soybeans, crambe, canola, flaxseed, mustard seed, rapeseed, safflower, sunflower seed, sesame seed, dry peas, lentils, small and large chickpeas, graded and ungraded wool, honey, and sugar. LDPs are offered for produced and harvested wheat, corn, grain sorghum, oats, barley, upland cotton, rice, soybeans, crambe, canola, flaxseed, mustard seed, rapeseed, safflower, sunflower seed, sesame seed, peanuts, dry peas, lentils, small and large chickpeas, graded and ungraded wool, unshorn pelts, honey, hay, and silage. If the loan repayment rates for these commodities are less than the established loan levels, producers may, for most commodities that are eligible for a nonrecourse loan, agree to forego such loan and elect to receive an LDP. The LDP payment rate equals the amount by which the loan rate exceeds the loan repayment rate in effect at the time the LDP application is approved, or the delivery date, or date sold or date beneficial interest is lost, as applicable. The 2016 Consolidated Appropriations Act authorized producers the option of a commodity certificate exchange as a nonrecourse loan repayment mechanism. Effective for crop years 2015 through 2018, in situations when the loan rate exceeds the exchange rate, producers may opt to purchase a commodity certificate from the local FSA office and immediately exchange that certificate for their outstanding loan collateral.

Applicant Eligibility:

Owner, landlord, tenant, or sharecropper on an eligible farm that has produced the eligible commodities or, in the case of sugar, a processor or refiner who meets program requirements as announced by the Secretary.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Owner, landlord, tenant, or sharecropper on a farm that has produced the eligible commodities, meets program requirements as announced by the Secretary, and maintains beneficial interest in the commodity. State and County governments may be eligible for MAL's and LDP's when they have a share in produced and harvested eligible commodities on land they own, if the benefits or payments are used to support public schools.

Credentials/Documentation:

The commodity must be produced and harvested by the producer, and the producer must meet program requirements as announced by the Secretary. Requirements include a record of the farming operation on file in the FSA county office and a complete acreage report to account for all cropland on the farm must be submitted for the applicable crop year. This program is excluded from coverage under 2 CFR 200, Subpart E - Cost Principles.

Preapplication Coordination:

Preapplication coordination is required. Environmental impact information is not required for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

Application Procedures:

This program is excluded from coverage under 2 CFR 200, Uniform Administrative Requirements, Cost Principles, and Audit Requirements for Federal Awards. In the case of warehouse-stored commodities, producer or Cooperative Marketing Association presents warehouse receipts to the FSA county office (warehouse-stored peanut loans may be made through Designated Marketing Associations). In the case of farm-stored commodities (including sugar), producer/processor or Cooperative Marketing Association requests a loan at the FSA county office.

Award Procedure:

Applications are approved by the FSA upon determination that applicant and commodity are eligible.

Deadlines:

Jan 31, 2018: Deadline for crop year 2017 peanuts and wool. Deadline for the year following year in which crop is normally harvested if as follows: Mar 31 - MAL's and LDP's are available for wheat, barley, oats, canola, flaxseed, crambe, rapeseed, sesame seed, and honey; May 31 - MAL's and LDP's are available for rice, corn, grain sorghum, cotton, soybeans, safflower, sunflower seed, mustard seed, small and large chickpeas, lentils, dry peas, and cotton; and Sept. 30 - Loans are available for sugar.

Eligible drought situations for water enhancing measures must be determined by the Deputy Administrator for Farm Programs, FSA.

Applicant Eligibility:

Any agricultural producer who as owner, landlord, tenant, or sharecropper on a farm or ranch, including associated groups, and bears a part of the cost of an approved conservation practice in a disaster area, is eligible to apply for cost-share conservation assistance. This program is also available in American Samoa, Guam, Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.

- An irrevocable letter of credit from a financial institution in an amount sufficient to protect CCC's interest for each year the loan has an outstanding balance.
- Facility Loan Terms. The following are the terms for farm storage facility loans: A 15 percent minimum down payment is required for regular loans and 5 percent for microloans; thus, CCC's loan is limited to 85 percent (for regular loans), or 95 percent (for microloans), of the net cost of the eligible storage facility and permanent drying and handling equipment (subject to the applicant's storage needs test). The down payment cannot include any trade-in, discount, rebate, deferred payment, or post-dated check. Loan terms available are three (3), five (5), seven (7) years, ten (10) years or twelve (12) years depending on the amount of the loan. Interest rate is fixed for the loan term based on the rate in effect during the month the loan is initially approved. The interest rate is equivalent to the rate of interest charged on Treasury Securities of comparable term and maturity. Loans are to be repaid in equal amortized annual installments. Loan will not be disbursed until after the purchase or the facility has been erected and inspected with the exception of one (1) qualifying partial disbursement, once 50 percent of the facility has been completed at a maximum amount of 50 percent of the approved loan amount, not to exceed $250,000. Cost of Obtaining a Loan. Each applicant will be charged a nonrefundable $100 application fee. CCC will pay all collateral lien searches and recording fees for filing Form FCC-1 and credit reports. Financial and technical assistance are available to participants to assist in the establishment of a long-term resource conserving cover.

Applicant Eligibility:
An individual, partnership, association, Indian Tribal ventures corporation, estate, trust, other business enterprises or other legal entities and, whenever applicable, a State, a political subdivision of a State, or any agency thereof may submit an offer to enroll acreage.

Beneficiary Eligibility:
If their offer is accepted for enrollment, an individual, partnership, association, Indian Tribal ventures corporation, estate, trust, other business enterprises or other legal entities and, whenever applicable, a State, political subdivision of State, or any agency thereof may earn benefits.

Credentials/Documentation:
The land must be owned or operated for not less than 12 months prior to the close of the signup period, unless the land was acquired by will or succession or FSA determines that ownership was not acquired for the purpose of placing the land in the CRP. This program is excluded from coverage under 2 CFR 200, Subpart E - Cost Principles.

Preapplication Coordination:
Preapplication coordination is required. An environmental impact statement is required for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

Application Procedures:
2 CFR 200, Uniform Administrative Requirements, Cost Principles, and Audit Requirements for Federal Awards applies to this program. FSA has three methods for enrolling acreage in the CRP. One method is a continuous signup process where acreage suitable for certain environmental priority practices, including but not limited to grass waterways, riparian buffers or filterstrips, and acreage within wellhead protection areas may be offered and accepted without going through a competitive offer process. The second method is similar to continuous signup and is available only in distinct geographic areas. These areas are targeted by FSA and State governments under partnership agreements. The third method is to offer acreage during a general signup period where eligible offers to enroll highly erodible and other environmentally sensitive acreage are submitted and ranked competitively based on an environmental benefits index. Regardless of the method of enrollment, the local FSA office that serves the area in which the farm or ranch is located will provide the maximum payment rate CCC will accept to enroll certain acreage in the program. Producers may submit a rental rate per acre offered that may be equal to or less than CCC's maximum payment rate.

Award Procedure:
FSA will notify persons whose offers are determined acceptable as soon as practicable after the close of the signup.

Deadlines:
Contact the headquarters or regional office, as appropriate, for application deadlines.

Range of Approval/Disapproval Time:
From 7 to 120 days.

Appeals:
Producers may appeal any determination to county FSA committee, State committee, or National Appeals Division. Matters that are generally applicable to all producers are not appealable.

Renewals:
Not Applicable.

Formula and Matching Requirements:
This program has no statutory formula. This program has no matching requirements. This program does not have MOE requirements.

Length and Time Phasing of Assistance:
Annual rental payments will be made for 10-15 years. If cost-share assistance to establish the appropriate cover was requested, a payment will be made after the practice is successfully established according to applicable guidelines. FSA may provide certain incentives for restoring wetlands or other lands. See the following for information on how assistance is awarded/released: Annually and based on performance.

10.072 WETLANDS RESERVE PROGRAM (WRP)
FEDERAL AGENCY:
Natural Resources Conservation Service, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:
Food Security Act of 1985 (This program was repealed by the Agricultural Act of 2014, effective February 7, 2014. Therefore, no new enrollments are authorized for this program after that date.), Title XII, Part Subtitle D, Section 1237, Public Law 99-198, 99 Stat. 1504, 16 U.S.C. 3831.

OBJECTIVES:
To assist landowners in restoring and protecting wetlands on eligible lands on which they agree to enter into a permanent or 30-year long-term easement (30-year contract for Indian Tribes), or a restoration cost-share agreement with the Secretary. The goal of WRP is to maximize wetland functions and values and wildlife benefits on every acre enrolled in the program.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:
Cooperative Agreements

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:
Eligible landowners may offer farmed wetlands, prior converted wetlands, wetlands farmed under natural condition, former or degraded wetlands on lands that have been used or are currently being used for the production of food and fiber, including cropland, rangeland and forest production land, lands substantially altered by flooding, certain riparian areas, along with certain adjacent areas. The goal of the WRP is to achieve the greatest wetland functions and values, along with optimum wildlife habitat on every acre enrolled in the program. At least 70 percent of the wetland and upland areas will be restored to the natural condition to the extent practicable; the remaining 30 percent of the project area may be restored to other than natural conditions. Enrollment options include permanent easements, 30-year easements, restoration cost-share agreements, and, for acreage owned by Indian Tribes, 30-year contracts. To be eligible for participation, land must be restorable and be suitable for wildlife benefits. Participating landowners must comply with the terms and conditions of their easement, agreement or contract for the duration of the document. For easement projects, landowners shall ensure the easement is superior to the rights of all others and shall agree to implement a wetland restoration plan designed to restore and maintain the easement area. Landowners must agree to a permanent retirement of crop acreage bases, allotments, and quotas to the extent that the sum of the crop acreage bases and allotments will not exceed the remaining cropland on the farm.

Participating landowners receive financial and technical assistance to install necessary restoration practices as follows:
- Permanent easements: Easement duration is in perpetuity. Landowners receive an easement payment after the easement is filed. In addition, NRCS shall share the cost of carrying out the establishment conservation measures and practices, and the protection of wetland functions and values, including necessary maintenance activities, to the extent that the Secretary determines that cost-sharing is appropriate and in the public interest.
- 30-year easements: Easement duration is 30 years. Landowners receive an easement payment after the easement is filed that is equivalent of 75 percent of the value for a permanent easement and up to 75 percent of the eligible restoration costs. Restoration cost-share agreements: Restoration cost-share agreements are made available to participating landowners as an alternative mechanism to restore wetlands without requiring the participant to sell an easement. Agreements are generally for a 10-year period, although longer agreement periods may be required for unique projects that are funded at a higher level. There is no easement payment; however, NRCS pays up to 75 percent of the eligible restoration costs.
- 30-year contracts: Acreage owned by Indian Tribes can be enrolled through the use of a 30-year contract which shall be equivalent in value to a 30-year easement.

For both permanent and 30-year easements, WRP pays for all the overhead costs associated with recording the easement in the local land records office including recording fees, charges for title abstracts, surveys, appraisal fees, records searches, and title insurance associated with acquiring an easement. These overhead costs are generally not paid to participants but are provided directly to the vendor performing the service. Therefore, payments appearing on USAspending.gov will be reflective of payments to participants and payments to vendors for services associated with restoration and management activities and administrative costs associated with recording an easement.

Eligible applicants must be in compliance with the highly erodible land and wetland conservation provisions in 7 CFR part 12 and the Adjusted Gross Income provisions in 7 CRP part 1400. They must be the landowner of the eligible land being offered for participation. For easement applications, the applicant must have owned the land for the 7-year period prior to the time the land is determined eligible for enrollment unless it is determined that the land was acquired by will or succession as a result of death of the previous owner; the ownership change occurred due to foreclosure and the owner of the land immediately before foreclosure exercises a right of redemption from the mortgage holder; or the land was acquired under circumstances that give adequate assurances, as determined by NRCS that such land was not acquired for the purposes of placing it in the program.

Applicant Eligibility:
An individual landowner, partnership, association, corporation, estate, trust, other business or other legal entities and Indian Tribe. This program was repealed by the Agricultural Act of 2014 (2014 Farm Bill), effective February 7, 2014. Therefore, no new enrollments are authorized for this program after that date. 10.087 BIOMASS CROP ASSISTANCE PROGRAM (BCAP)

Federal Agency:

Farm Service Agency, Department of Agriculture

Authorization:

Objectives:

The purpose of BCAP is to encourage the production of biofuels. BCAP accomplishes this by providing funding for agricultural and forest land owners and operators to receive matching payments for certain eligible material sold to qualified biomass conversion facilities for conversion to heat, power, bio-based products, or advanced biofuels. It also provides funding for producers of eligible crops of renewable biomass within specified project areas to receive establishment payments and annual payments.

Types of Assistance:

Direct Payments with Unrestricted Use

Uses and Use Restrictions:

BCAP is intended to encourage the production of biofuels by assisting agricultural and forest land owners and operators with the establishment and production of eligible crops in selected project areas for conversion to bioenergy, and with the collection, harvest, storage, and transportation of eligible material for use in a biomass conversion facilities.

Applicant Eligibility:

To be eligible to enter into a BCAP contract for the purposes of receiving an annual payment or establishment payments, a person or legal entity must be an owner, operator, or tenant of eligible land within a project area. Eligible land must be agricultural land or nonindustrial private forest land. Eligible agricultural land includes cropland; grassland; pastureland, rangeland, hayland, and other land on which food fiber, or other agricultural products are produced or capable of being legally produced for which a valid conservation plan exists and is implemented. Ineligible land is as follows: (1) Federal lands; (2) State-owned, municipal, or other local government-owned lands; (3) Native sod; and (4) Land that is already enrolled in CCCs CRP, Wetlands Reserve Program, or Grasslands Reserve Program. Eligible crops for annual and establishment payments are renewable plant materials such as feed grains, other agricultural commodities, or other plants and trees, and algae; waste materials... including vegetative waste, materials, such as woods wastes and wood residues, animal waste and byproducts, such as fats, oils, greases, and manure, food waste, and yard waste. Ineligible crops are any crop eligible to receive payments under Title I of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (See 8-LP, paragraph 126 and 7-CN for Title I commodities); and any plant that is invasive or noxious or has the potential to become invasive or noxious. Eligible materials for matching payments include various types of renewable biomass collected or harvested directly from the land in accordance with an approved conservation plan, forest stewardship plan, or an equivalent plan before transport and delivery to the biomass conversion facility. Materials will only be eligible if USDA determines that there is no higher value use for that material within a reasonable distance of the biomass conversion facility.

Matching payments are not available for the following products: (1) Material that is whole grain from any crop that is eligible to receive payments under Title I of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 or an amendment made by that title, including, but not limited to, barley, corn, grain sorghum, oats, rice, or wheat; (2) material that is miso; (3) certain oilseeds such as canola, crambe, flaxseed, mustard seed, rapeseed, safflower seed, soybeans, sesame seed, and sunflower seeds; (4) pulse crops such as small grain, dry beans, dry peas, lentils, lupin peas, dry edible peas, dry edible beans, dry edible lentils, flax seeds, lentils, and navy beans; and (5) cotton boll fiber; (2) Animal waste and by-products of animal waste including fats, oils, greases; and manure; (3) Food waste and yard waste; and (4) Algae.

All eligible material must be harvested or collected directly from the land by the eligible material owner according to a conservation, forest stewardship, or equivalent plan and be separated from the higher value product before the point of delivery. Woody biomass harvested or collected outside of project area contracts is limited to eligible material resulting from preventative treatments to address fire fuel load reduction, insect or disease outbreaks, or restore ecosystem health. Woody biomass harvested or collected outside of project area contracts is limited to eligible materials that do not have an existing market for non-biomass use and cannot be co-mingled with higher product value materials. Eligible material owners, for purposes of the matching payment, means a person or entity having the right to collect or harvest eligible material, who has the risk of loss in the material that is delivered to an eligible facility and who has directly or by agent delivered or intends to deliver the eligible material to a qualified biomass conversion facility, including: (1) For eligible material harvested or collected from private lands, including cropland, the owner of the land, the operator or producer conducting farming operations on the land, or any other person designated by the owner of the land; and (2) For eligible material harvested or collected from public lands, a person having the right to harvest or collect eligible material pursuant to a contract or permit with the US Forest Service or other appropriate Federal agency, such as a timber sale contract, stewardship contract or agreement, service contract or permit, or related applicable Federal land permit or contract, and who has submitted a copy of the permit or contract authorizing such collection to CCC. Eligible facilities are biomass conversion facilities that convert or propose to convert renewable biomass into heat, power, bio based products, or advanced biofuels and have been approved for the BCAP program by the CCC.

Beneficiary Eligibility: Owners and operators of agricultural and non-industrial private forest land will receive the ultimate benefits because it will provide financial assistance to establish, produce, and deliver biomass feedstocks. Eligible material owners who are the person or entity having the right to collect or harvest eligible material, who has the risk of loss in the material that is delivered to an eligible facility and who has directly or by agent delivered or intends to deliver the eligible material to a qualified biomass conversion facility.

Credentials/Documentation: In order to enroll land in BCAP, the participant must enter into a contract with the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC). Acceptance or rejection will be at the sole discretion of the CCC, and offers may be rejected for any reason as determined appropriate to accomplish the purposes of BCAP. Contracts will be for a term of up to five years for annual and non-woody perennial crops and 15 years for woody perennial crops; or time period may vary due to type of crop, agronomic conditions, and other factors. Eligible material owner who enter into a contract with CCC may receive matching payments up to a period of two years following the first payment for the delivery of eligible material to a qualified biomass conversion facility. This program is excluded from coverage under 2 CFR 200, Subpart E - Cost Principles.

Preapplication Coordination: FSA prepared a Final Programmatic Environmental Impact Statement (PEIS) for BCAP and NOFA and was published in the Federal Register on June 25, 2010 (75 FR 36382). On September 15, 2011, FSA published the BCAP interim rule (76 FR 56949). The BCAP interim rule provided FSA with the authority to prioritize establishment and annual payments (BCAP project areas) and if sufficient funding remains, to consider applications for matching payments. The interim rule also enables prioritization of spring project area proposals if eligible requests exceed available funding. Future funding for BCAP could make such prioritizing unnecessary. An environmental impact statement is required for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

Application Procedures: This program is excluded from coverage under 2 CFR 200, Uniform Administrative Requirements, Cost Principles, and Audit Requirements for Federal Awards. In order for a delivery of eligible materials to a biomass conversion facility to qualify for a BCAP payment, the biomass conversion facility must be qualified for BCAP. To become qualified, the biomass conversion facility must enter into an agreement with CCC, through the FSA State office in the State where the facility is physically located. For any facility, whether or not yet in operation, the entity requesting that a facility become qualified must provide proof of all applicable Federal, State, local, and Tribal permits and licenses required for operation or proof of application completions or letters of renewal submissions from the applicable governmental entity. Applicable permits and licenses may include, but are not limited to, business licenses, air quality permits, water discharge permits, storm water permits, or Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives registrations.

Each biomass conversion facility must enter into a separate agreement with CCC regardless of whether a single owner has multiple facilities. CCC will issue a unique facility identification number to each qualifying biomass conversion facility. Eligible material owners must apply at an FSA county office and receive approval for that application before delivering the eligible biomass material to the qualified biomass conversion facility. Application must include the following based on information obtained from contracts, agreements, or binding letters of intent: (1) An estimate of the total dry tons of eligible material expected to be sold to the qualified biomass conversion facility; (2) The type(s) of eligible material that is expected to be sold; (3) The name of the qualified biomass conversion facility that will purchase the eligible material; (4) The expected, fair market, per dry ton payment rate the owner plans to receive for the delivery of the eligible material; (5) The date or dates the eligible material is expected to be delivered to the qualified biomass conversion facility; (6) A new or amended conservation plan, forest stewardship plan, or equivalent plan. Eligible material owners who deliver eligible material to more than one qualified biomass conversion facility must submit separate applications for each facility to which eligible material will be delivered. In order to enroll land for Establishment and Annual payments, the participant must enter into a contract with CCC. Only the owners, operators, or tenants of eligible land within a project area that will actually perform the work specified in the contract are eligible to apply for the program. The contract is comprised of: (1) The terms and conditions for participation in BCAP; (2) The conservation plan, forest stewardship plan, or equivalent plan; and (3) Any other materials or agreements determined necessary by CCC.

Award Procedures: Contract approval for matching payments is subject to availability of funds and to eligible material owners completion of required conservation plan, forest stewardship plan or equivalent plan; presentation of proof of material ownership; and compliance with all eligible material provisions. Eligible material owners accepted into the program will receive their matching payments after they provide CCC documentation of deliveries to qualified biomass conversion facilities. Establishment payments will be made based on a determination by CCC that an eligible practice or an identifiable portion exists. Eligible practices are practices specified in the conservation plan, forest stewardship plan, or equivalent plan that meet all standards need to cost-effectively establish annual crops, non-woody perennial crops, and wood perennial crops. Payments will not be more than 75 percent of the cost for establishing a perennial crop for seed and stock costs; planting costs, cost of site preparation for non-industrial forest land; could include but not limited to site preparation for non-tree planting and supplemental or temporary irrigation. Annual payments will be calculated on a per acre basis using market-based rental rates. Rental payment rates will be based on average soil rental rate for cropland and all other agricultural land; marginal pastureland; and for forest land. The first year’s payments will be made as an advance in an amount equal to 50 percent with 30 days of contract approval, with the remaining 50 percent being paid within 30 days of the first-year contract anniversary date. Annual payments for subsequent years will be made within 30 days of the contract anniversary beginning with the second-year contract anniversary. If BCAP participants collect both annual and matching payments for their crops, they are subject to a reduction in their annual payment. The size of the reduction depends on the end use of the biomass being delivered to a biomass conversion facility. The annual payment will be reduced by: 1 percent if the eligible crop is delivered to a biomass conversion facility for conversion to cellulosic biofuels as defined by 40 CFR 80.1401; 10 percent if the eligible crop is delivered to a biomass conversion facility for conversion to advanced biofuels; and by 25 percent if the eligible crop is delivered to a biomass conversion facility for conversion to heat, power, or biobased products.

Deadlines:
Contact the headquarters or regional office, as appropriate, for application deadlines.

Range of Approval/Disapproval Time:
Not Applicable.

Appeals:
Determination may be appealed in accordance with the administrative appeal regulations at parts 11 and 780 of 7 CFR. Determinations by the Natural Resources Conservation Service may be appealed in accordance with procedures established under part 614 of 7 CFR.

Renews:
Not Applicable.

Formula and Matching Requirements:
Statutory Formula: Title 7, Part 1450. Matching Requirements: Matching payments may be available for the delivery of eligible material to qualified biomass conversion facilities by eligible material owners. Qualified biomass conversion facilities produce heat, power, biobased products, or advanced bio fuels from biomass feed stocks. Matching payments will be made at a rate of $1 for each $1 per dry ton paid by qualified biomass conversion facilities up to $45 per dry ton. Payments are paid within 30 days after the request for payment by the eligible material owner is submitted to the FSA county office, including submission of sales invoice(s) issued by the qualified biomass conversion facility. MOE requirements are not applicable to this program.

Length and Time Phasing of Assistance:
There are no restrictions place on the time permitted to spend the money awarded. Method of awarding/releasing assistance: lump sum.

Reports:
No program reports are required. No cash reports are required. No progress reports are required. Biomass Conversion Facilities agree to develop and maintain a BCAP Purchase List of all renewable biomass purchases and include purchases from both eligible material owner and sellers not participating in BCAP. No performance monitoring is required.

Audits:
This program is excluded from coverage under 2 CFR 200, Subpart F - Audit Requirements. BCAP is a program operated by the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC), and therefore is included in the CCC annual audit. All CCC audit procedures apply to BCAP.

Records:
Producers enrolling in all types of BCAP contracts may be reviewed or audited by FSA as appropriate. Recipients shall retain records which include spreadsheet, books, papers, records, contracts, scale tickets, settlement sheets, invoices, written price quotations, or other documents related to BCAP. 10.093 VOLUNTARY PUBLIC ACCESS AND HABITAT INCENTIVE PROGRAM (VPA-HIP)
FEDERAL AGENCY:
Natural Resources Conservation Service, Department of Agriculture AUTHORIZATION:
OBJECTIVES:
The primary objective of the VPA-HIP is to encourage owners and operators of privately-held farm, ranch, and forest land to voluntarily make that land available for access by the public for wildlife-dependent recreation, including hunting or fishing, under programs implemented by state or tribal governments.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:
Formula Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:
The funding provided by the VPA-HIP will help states and tribal governments address many issues that can greatly increase access and recreational experiences. Grant recipients will be able to use the funding to provide higher rental payments, provide technical and conservation services to landowners, and increase acreage enrolled for public access. Twenty-six states have public access programs for hunting, fishing, and other related activities. These programs provide rental payments and other incentives, such as technical or conservation services to landowners who allow the public to hunt, fish, or otherwise appropriately recreate on their land. Section 726 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012, effectively ended any new obligations, or modifications to existing obligations, under VPA-HIP. Only state and tribal governments are eligible to directly receive VPA-HIP grants.
Applicant Eligibility:
Only States and Tribal governments are eligible for VPA-HIP. An eligible State government means any State or local government, including State, city, town, or county government. An eligible Tribal Government means any Federally-recognized Indian tribe, band, nation, or other organized group, or community, including pueblos, rancherias, colonies and any Alaska Native Village, or regional or village corporation as defined in or established pursuant to the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1601-1629H), which is recognized as eligible for the special programs and services provided by the United States to Indians because of their status as Indians.

Beneficiary Eligibility:
The beneficiary eligibility is extended to the public for the purposes of expanding existing public access programs or create new public access programs or provide incentives to improve habitat on enrolled program lands. Proposals for grant money should be submitted to the local State or Tribal governments by owners and operators of privately-held farm, ranch, and forest land. An eligible owner is one who has legal ownership of farmland, ranchland, or forestland. An eligible operator (individual, entity, or joint operation) is one who is determined by the FSA county committee to be in control of the farming, ranching, or silvicultural operations on the farm. For the purposes of receiving grant money, an appropriate wildlife habitat should be suitable or proper, as determined by the applicable State or tribal government, to support fish and wildlife populations in the area. An eligible farmland or ranch land means the sum of the Direct and Countercyclical (DCC) cropland, forest, acreage planted to an eligible crop acreage and other land on the farm. Eligible forest land is at least 120 feet wide and one acre in size with at least 10 percent cover (or equivalent stocking) by live trees of any size, including land that formerly had such tree cover and that will be naturally or artificially regenerated. 10.098 REIMBURSEMENT TRANSPORTATION COST PAYMENT PROGRAM FOR GEOGRAPHICALLY DISADVANTAGED FARMERS AND RANCHERS

(RTCP)

FEDERAL AGENCY:
Farm Service Agency, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

OBJECTIVES:
The intended goal of the program is to provide direct reimbursement payments to a geographically disadvantaged farmer or rancher who transports an agricultural commodity, or inputs used to produce an agricultural commodity during a fiscal year. Input transportation cost are transportation costs of inputs used to produce an agricultural commodity including, but not limited to, air, ocean, and land freight of chemicals, feed, fertilizer, fuel, seeds, plants, supplies, equipment parts, and other inputs.

The Farm Service Agency (FSA), Deputy Administrator for Farm Programs (DAFP) administers RTCP. The program will be carried out in the field by FSA State and county committee and FSA employees. State and local governments and their political subdivisions and related agencies are not eligible for RTCP payments.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:
RTCP provides monetary assistance to geographically disadvantaged farmers and ranchers by reimbursing them for a portion of the transportation cost of their agricultural commodity, or transported inputs used to produce an agricultural commodity during the fiscal year. The payments provided by RTCP are intended to offset a portion of the high cost of transporting inputs for production purposes and transporting products to markets.

The types of transportation rates used to determine reimbursable amounts are:
(1) Actual transportation rates which are based on the actual costs incurred by the applicant and must be determined in all cases from verifiable records.
(2) Fixed transportation rates are determined by FSA and will establish per unit transportation costs for each eligible commodity or input used to produce the eligible commodity.
(3) Set transportation rates are established for those transportation costs that are not on the FSA list of fixed rates and for which a actual rate cannot be documented. They will be set by FSA based on available data of transportation costs similar commodities and inputs.

Applicant Eligibility:
To be eligible to receive program benefits, a geographically disadvantaged farmer or rancher must:
(1) Be a producer of an eligible agricultural commodity in substantial commercial quantities
(2) Incur transportation costs for the transportation of the agricultural commodity or input used to produce the agriculture commodity
(3) Submit an application for payment during the specified period applicable for each fiscal year.
(4) Be in compliance with conservation and wetland protection requirements on all their land
(5) Be a citizen of or legal resident alien of the U.S.

Eligible commodities include any agricultural commodity (including horticulture, aquaculture, and floriculture) food, feed, fiber, livestock (including elk, reindeer, bison, horses, and deer), insects or products thereof.

Beneficiary Eligibility:
The U.S. farmers and ranchers outside the continental U.S. receive the ultimate benefit from the program because they operate at a competitive disadvantage relative to farmers and ranchers in the continental U.S. This disadvantage is due to the high cost of transporting agricultural commodities from those areas to markets in the continental U.S. and in other countries, and the high cost of transporting agricultural inputs to those areas.

Geographically disadvantage farmers and ranchers located in Hawaii, Alaska, Persons applying for RTCP payments must maintain records and accounts to document all eligibility requirements for three years after the date of payment to the producer.

Account Identification:

Eligibility reimbursement amount will be calculated by multiplying the number of units of the reported transportation amount times the applicable non-foreign area cost of living allowance or post differential (COLA).

Contact the headquarters or regional office, as appropriate, for application deadlines.

Range of Approval/Disapproval Time:

Not Applicable.

ELAP Livestock Indemnity Program-2014 Farm Bill; 10.110 Emergency Assistance for Livestock, Honeybees and Farm-Raised Fish Program-2014 Farm Bill

10.110 EMERGENCY ASSISTANCE FOR LIVESTOCK, HONEYBEES AND FARM-RAISED FISH PROGRAM-2014 FARM BILL (ELAP)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

Farm Service Agency, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

The Agricultural Act of 2014 (The 2014 Farm Bill), Title I, Part III, Section 1501.

OBJECTIVES:

ELAP provides emergency assistance to eligible producers of livestock, honeybees and farm-raised fish who have losses due to an eligible adverse weather or eligible loss condition, including blizzards, disease (including cattle tick fever), water shortages and wildfires, as determined by the Secretary, that occurs on or after October 1, 2011. ELAP covers losses that are not covered under the Livestock Forage Program (LFP), and Livestock Indemnity Program (LIP).

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Direct Payments for Specified Use

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

ELAP is a permanent disaster program and provides retroactive authority to cover eligible losses back to October 1, 2011. Public Law 113-79 authorized up to $20 million of Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) funds in a fiscal year for ELAP. ELAP begins October 1 of the fiscal year and ends September 30 of the fiscal year. There are four categories of livestock losses covered by ELAP, livestock death losses caused by an eligible loss condition; livestock feed and grazing losses that are not due to drought or wildfires on federally managed lands; losses resulting from the additional cost of transporting water to livestock due to an eligible drought; and losses resulting from the additional cost associated with gathering livestock for treatment related to cattle tick fever. Recipients of ELAP payments may receive a pro-rated reduced payment should the total annual national demand for ELAP exceed $20 million in a fiscal year.

Applicant Eligibility:

To be eligible for benefits, an individual or legal entity must be a citizen of the United States (U.S.); Resident alien; Partnership of citizens of the U.S.; or Corporation, limited liability corporation, or other farm organizational structure organized under State law. The eligible applicant must have legal ownership of the livestock on the day the livestock died and must be a producer or contract grower of livestock, honeybee, or farm-raised fish that assumes the production and market risks associated with the agricultural production of crops or livestock on a farm and that meet the requirements to receive ELAP payments. Starting with the 2012 program year (October 1, 2011), an eligible livestock producer who certifies they are socially disadvantaged, limited resource, or a beginning farmer or rancher, will have their payments for livestock losses under ELAP based on a national payment factor of 90 percent.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Eligible producers of livestock, honeybees, and farm-raised fish will receive the ultimate benefits from ELAP. An eligible livestock producer, honeybee producer, and eligible farm-raised fish producer may receive payments for eligible losses based on a national payment rate.

Credentials/Documentation:

No Credentials or documentation are required. This program is excluded from coverage under 2 CFR 200, Subpart E - Cost Principles.

Preapplication Coordination:

Preapplication coordination is not applicable. Environmental impact information is not required for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

To apply for ELAP, the participant must have suffered an eligible livestock, honeybee, or farm-raised fish loss. The eligible producer must submit a Notice of Loss and a completed application to the FSA administrative county office that maintains the participant's farm records for the agricultural operation. For livestock feed, grazing, and death losses and losses resulting from the transporting water and gathering livestock to treat for cattle tick fever the applicant must submit a completed Emergency Loss Assistance for Livestock application, for honeybee fee, colony, hive, or farm-raised fish feed or death losses, the applicant must complete a Emergency Loss Assistance for Honeybees or Farm-Raised Fish Application; a report of acreage (if applicable); a copy of the participant's grower's contract (if a contract grower); other supporting documents required by the Farm Service Agency (FSA); and a farming operating plan.

OBJECTIVES:
The ARC program is similar to the previous Direct and Counter-cyclical Payments Program (DCP) and the Average Crop Revenue Election (ACRE) which were repealed by P.L. 113-79. ARC provides income support to eligible producers of covered commodities.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:
The Agricultural Risk Coverage-County Coverage (ARC-CO) provides revenue less coverage at the county level for selected covered commodities on a farm. The Agricultural Risk Coverage-Individual Coverage program provides revenue loss coverage at the farm level for all acreage devoted to covered commodities across all of a producer’s ARC-IC farms.

ARC is a revenue-based program that is designed to cover a portion of a farmer's out-of-pocket loss (referred to as "shallow loss") when crop revenues fall below benchmark revenue levels, with the benchmark revenue based on either county level historic revenue for ARC-CO or the individual farm's historic revenue for ARC-IC.

Applicant Eligibility:
An eligible producer is eligible to enter into a contract if 1) the owner of the farm has an ownership of a crop and assumes all or a part of the risk producing a crop that is commensurate with that claimed ownership of the crop; 2) a producer, other than the owner, on a farm with a share-rent lease for such farm, regardless of the length of the lease, if the owner of the farm enters into the same contract; 3) a producer, other than an owner, on a farm who rents such farm under a lease expiring on or after September 30 of the year of the contract in which case the owner is not required to enter into the contract; 4) a producer, other than an owner, on a farm who cash rents such farm under a leasing contract expiring before September 30 of the year of the contract; 5) An owner of an eligible farm who cash rents such farm and the lease expires before September 30 of the year of the contract, if the tenant declines to enter into a contract for the applicable year.

ARC-CO payment calculation is based on base acres including any base acres attributed to a covered commodity from generic base acres based on P&CP or eligible subsequently planted crop acreage. Payments are triggered when actual county crop revenue of a covered commodity is less than the ARC-CO guarantee for the covered commodity. ARC-IC payments are triggered when the actual crop revenue, averaged across all covered commodities planted or eligible subsequently planted crop acreage on the ARC-IC farm, is less than ARC-IC guarantee, averaged across those covered commodities planted or eligible subsequently planted crop acreage on the farm.

10.114 COTTON TRANSITION ASSISTANCE PROGRAM (CTAP)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

Farm Service Agency, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

The Agricultural Act of 2014, Title I, Part II, Section 1119, Public Law 113-79.

OBJECTIVES:

CTAP is a temporary program that provides payments to producers on farms for which cotton base acres were in existence as of September 30, 2013.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Direct Payments with Unrestricted Use

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

CTAP is intended to be a transition for producers on farms with upland cotton base acres that were in existence as of September 30, 2013, between the previous Direct and Counter-Cycle Program (DCP) payments and the new Stacked Income Protection Plan (STAX) which is scheduled to be made available to most cotton counties in 2015 crop year. CTAP is authorized for all counties and farms having cotton base acres in the 2014 crop year; however it will only operate in the 2015 crop year in counties where STAX is not yet available. STAX is specified in Section 11017 of P.L. 113-79. Similar to DCP, producers do not have to actually grow or harvest upland cotton to be eligible for CTAP.

CTAP payments will be made to eligible producers on or after October 1 of the crop year when upland cotton is or ordinarily would have been harvested. Similar to DCP, payment eligibility is based upon the number of upland cotton base acres, which are not required to be planted to cotton.

Applicant Eligibility:

An eligible producer for CTAP is required to be a person or legal entity which is actively engaged in farming and otherwise eligible to receive payment. CTAP payments in each of the 2014 and 2015 program years are limited to $40,000 per person or legal entity, similar to the $40,000 per person or legal entity limitation to applied to DCP under The Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008, P.L. 110-246. A person or legal entity is ineligible for payments if the person's or legal entity's average gross income (AGI) for the applicable compliance program year is in excess of $900,000. If a person with an indirect interest in a legal entity has AGI in excess of $900,000, the CTAP payments subject to AGI compliance provisions to the legal entity will be reduced as... calculated based on the percent interest of the person in the legal entity receiving the payment.

Beneficiary Eligibility:
The Farm Service Agency (FSA) will provide adequate notice to producer about the new CTAP regulations so they will be ready to begin sign-up for CTAP. Payments will process as soon as possible after October 1, 2014, as soon as the application period closes. Therefore, to begin providing benefits to producers in a timely fashion, the final rule is effective when published in the Federal Register.

Credentials/Documentation:
An eligible producer on a farm is required to provide a copy of their written lease to the county committee and, in the absence of a written lease, is required to provide the county committee a complete written description of the terms and conditions of any oral agreement or lease. This program is excluded from coverage under 2 CFR 200, Subpart E - Cost Principles.

Eligible producers may apply for CTAP by completing CCC-957 application and providing supportive and necessary contractual documents to the FSA county office. For 2014 CTAP applications must be submitted by September 30, 2014 and for 2015 CTAP, by July 31, 2015. The Farm Service Agency (FSA) will provide adequate notice to producer when the application period closes. Therefore, to begin providing benefits to producers in a timely fashion, the final rule is effective when published in the Federal Register.

Deadlines:
Contact the headquarters or regional office, as appropriate, for application deadlines.

Range of Approval/Disapproval Time:
From 15 to 30 days. Each eligible producer on a farm may apply for and receive CTAP payments determined to be fair and equitable as agreed to by all producers on the farm and as approved by the county committee. CTAP payments will be determined based on shares recorded on the application for CTAP payments for the particular program year.

Appeals:
Generally, participants receiving an adverse program determination have 30 days from date of receipt to file an appeal of that decision. A participant may seek reconsideration and appeal review of any individual program eligibility adverse determination made in accordance with the appeal regulations found in 7 CFR, parts 11 and 780.

Renewals:
Not Applicable.

Formula and Matching Requirements:
Statutory Formula: Title 7 CFR, Chapter 1412, Part E, Public Law 113-79. Matching requirements are not applicable to this program.

10.116 THE MARGIN PROTECTION PROGRAM

FEDERAL AGENCY:
Farm Service Agency, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

OBJECTIVES:
MPP-Dairy offers a protection plan which provides payments to dairy operations when the difference between the all-milk price and the average feed cost falls below a certain, producer selected, dollar amount. Producers will be eligible for a basic level of margin protection for a small administrative fee, and be able to purchase greater coverage for a premium. The Secretary of Agriculture (Secretary) will use administrative fees collected to cover administrative costs incurred to carry out the margin protection program.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:
Milk is produced in all 50 states and the maintenance and expansion of existing markets for dairy are vital to the welfare of milk producers in the United States (U.S.). The dairy industry has experienced dramatic structural changes at all levels of the marketing channel that have directly affected milk prices, dairy product sales, farm incomes, and other direct aspects of dairy profitability and volatility. Low margins have been a producer complaint for some time. In addition, low prices, high production costs, and oversupply have been issues for the dairy industry in recent years. In order to address these concerns, MPP-Dairy was included in P.L. 113-79 to replace existing dairy price and management program.
income support programs. The MPP-Dairy program is much like an insurance program in that the dairy operation selects a level of coverage, and pays a premium based on the amount of coverage (and an administrative fee). As is customary with other insurance or insurance-like programs both agricultural and otherwise, the regulations only provide for coverage prospectively and contemplated that a party's level of coverage will remain unchanged unless during a designated enrollment period the party makes a different election. The amount of coverage chosen by producers in a participating dairy operation requires two selections. One is the margin trigger and the second is the amount of milk covered (which is based on a history of production).

Applicant Eligibility:
All dairy operations in the U.S. shall be eligible to participate in the MPP-Dairy program to receive margin protection payments. A dairy operation must produce milk from cows in the U.S. and must be commercially marketing milk produced at the time of enrollment and continue to market milk for the duration of the program. A dairy operation may participate in the MPP-Dairy program or the Livestock Gross Margin for Dairy (LGM-Dairy) but not both. LGM-Dairy is operated by the Risk Management Agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA). However since the MPP-Dairy program is made available after potential applicants under MPP-Dairy have applied for coverage under LGM-Dairy, for the open enrollment period established for the 2014 and 2015 calendar year coverage only, a producer with coverage under LGM-Dairy that would like to participate in the MPP-Dairy program must register to participate in the MPP-Dairy program during the open enrollment period established for calendar 2014 and 2015 and agree not to extend or obtain new LGM-Dairy coverage.

Beneficiary Eligibility:
The ultimate benefit of the MPP-Dairy program will help protect farm equity and reduce financial losses that occur during times of low margins.

Credentials/Documentation:
To participate in the MPP-Dairy program, an eligible dairy operation must have a production history determined for the dairy operation; register to participate during a designated enrollment period announced by the Farm Service Agency (FSA); pay a $100.00 administrative fee annually for the duration of the MPP-Dairy program; select a coverage level ranging from $4.00 to $8.00 per cwt, in $.50 increments; and select a coverage percentage of dairy operation's production history ranging from 25 percent to 90 percent, in 5 percent increments. For an existing dairy operation FSA will determine the production history from the highest of the 2011, 2012, and 2013 calendar years. For a new dairy operation (in operation for less than one year), FSA will determine the production history by either the volume of the actual milk marketings for the months the participating dairy operation has been in operation extrapolated to a yearly amount or an estimate of the actual milk marketing of the participating dairy operation based on the herd size of the participating dairy operation relative to the national rolling here average data published by USDA. This program is excluded from coverage under 2 CFR 200, Subpart E - Cost Principles.

Preapplication Coordination:
Preapplication coordination is not applicable. Environmental impact information is not required for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

Application Procedures:
This program is excluded from coverage under 2 CFR 200, Uniform Administrative Requirements, Cost Principles, and Audit Requirements for Federal Awards. A dairy operation must submit an accurate and complete contract to participate during the application period. The contract is prescribed by the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC). Producers may obtain such contract in person, by mail, or by facsimile from any county FSA office. The form may be downloaded at http://www.sc.egov.usda.gov. Contract offers must be received at FSA by the close of business on the last day of the open enrollment period.

Award Procedure:
An eligible dairy operation must complete and submit a contract; agree with all terms and conditions in the contract; comply with instructions issued by or for CCC; provide proof of milk production commercially marketed by all persons in the dairy operation; and provide any other supporting documentation to any county FSA office. Producers must certify to accuracy and truthfulness of the information in their contracts and supporting documentation.

10.200 GRANTS FOR AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH, SPECIAL RESEARCH GRANTS

Special Research Grants (SRGP)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

Section 2 (c), Public Law 89-106, 7 U.S.C. 450(i)c, as amended.

OBJECTIVES:

To carry out research, to facilitate or expand promising breakthroughs in areas of the food and agricultural sciences of importance to the nation and to facilitate or expand on-going State-Federal food and agricultural research programs.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

PROJECT GRANTS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Grant funds must be used for allowable costs necessary to conduct approved fundamental and applied research, extension and education objectives to address food and agricultural sciences. Awards are generally limited to high priority problems of a regional or national scope. NIFA has determined that grant funds awarded under this authority may not be used for the renovation or refurbishment of research, education, or extension space; the purchase or installation of fixed equipment in such space; or the planning, repair, rehabilitation, acquisition, or construction of buildings or facilities.

Funds may not be used for any purposes other than those approved in the grant award documents.

Funds shall not be used for tuition remission.

Indirect Costs are generally not allowable for this program.

Generally, there are no matching requirements associated with Special Research Grant programs and matching resources will not be factored into the review process as evaluation criteria.

Please refer to RFA, Part IV.D. Applications Funding Restrictions for specific details.

Exceptions to the general rules, as related to Indirect Cost and matching requirements, are indicated below, as deemed appropriate and necessary.

The following programs are EXCEPTIONS to the general rules:

(1) Critical Agricultural Materials (Pub. L. 95-592)
(2) Federal Administration - Research
(3) Pest Management Alternatives (aka PMAP)
(4) Supplemental and Alternative Crops (7 U.S.C. 319d(c)).
(5) Policy Research Centers (Section 1419A of 7 U.S.C. 3155) and
(6) Rangeland Research

For the above-referenced EXCEPTIONS to the general rule, [i.e. #s (1) thru (5)], the following provisions are applicable:

Section 720 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012 (Pub. L. No. 112-55) limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

Special Note on Indirect Costs as in-kind matching contributions:

Indirect costs may be claimed under the Federal portion of the award budget or, alternatively, indirect costs may be claimed as a matching contribution (if no indirect costs are requested under the Federal portion of the award budget). However, unless explicitly authorized in the RFA, indirect costs may not be claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution, unless the total claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution does not exceed the maximum allowable indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. An awardee may split the allocation between the Federal and non-Federal portions of the budget only if the total amount of indirect costs charged to the project does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. For example, if an awardee's indirect costs are capped at 30 percent pursuant to FY 2012 appropriated funds, Section 720 of the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug...
Program Descriptions 44 October 2017

Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2012 (Division A of Pub. L. 112-55), the awardee may request 15 percent of the indirect costs on both the Federal portion of the award and as a matching contribution. Or, the awardee may request any similar percentage that, when combined, does not exceed the maximum indirect cost rate of 30 percent.

Exception 6:
For the Rangeland Research program the following provisions are applicable: Per 7 CFR 3401.5, Indirect Cost is allowable if the award is made to a Federal lab. Pursuant to Section 1480 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 as amended (7 USC 3333(b)(1)), applicants are required to provide 50 percent matching funds from non-federal sources for all proposed Federal funds sought in the application. Non-federal matching contributions, such as cash and third party in kind, are accepted under this program as qualified by 7 USC 3015 and 7 USC 3019. Foregone indirect costs cannot be used as part of the required match. Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:
Special Research Grants: State agricultural experiment stations, all colleges and universities, other research institutions and organizations, Federal agencies, private organizations or corporations and individuals having a demonstrable capacity to conduct research activities to facilitate or expand promising breakthroughs in areas of the food and agricultural sciences of importance to the United States.

Beneficiary Eligibility:
For Special Research Grants: State agricultural experiment stations, all colleges and universities, other research institutions and organizations, Federal agencies, private organizations or corporations and individuals having a demonstrable capacity to conduct research activities to facilitate or expand promising breakthroughs in areas of the food and agricultural sciences of importance to the United States.

Credentials/Documentation:
The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;

(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

All projects must report annually into REEport. An annual Progress Report is due 90 calendar days after the award's anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day of which the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period. The following information, when applicable, must be included in the Project Modifications section of the annual Progress Report:

1) A comparison of actual accomplishments with the goals established for the reporting period (where the output of the project can be expressed readily in numbers, a computation of the cost per unit of output should be submitted if the information is considered useful);

(2) The reasons for slippage if established goals were not met; and

(3) Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

c. Final Technical Report

The Final Technical Report is required within 90 calendar days after the expiration or termination of the award. The Final Technical Report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments made only during the final reporting segment of the project. In addition to supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:

- Identify equipment purchased with any Federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

Financial Reporting:

An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period.

A final Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due 90 days after the expiration date of this award. The report must be submitted to the Awards Management Division (AMD) as a pdf attachment to an email sent to awards@nifa.usda.gov.

Fiscal Year 2016: The following represents accomplishments for active Programs:

(B) Global Change Ultraviolet Radiation Monitoring and Research Program (GC/UV-B):

The program made one (1) competitive award to operate and manage USDAs ultraviolet radiation climatology network, and to conduct, in collaboration with another institution, research on ultraviolet radiation effects on agriculturally relevant crops and integration of crop models. Coupling with economic models, effects research and simulations enable us to project regional and national climate change impacts on agriculture. The program maintained high data collection rates, model runs were made for corn, and work with crop simulations continues. Economic analysis modules have been coupled with the integrated assessment framework.

The amount available to fund proposals was $1,305,147.

(D) Minor Crop Pest Management Program Interregional Research Project #4:

Applications were received from four (4) regional centers and the National Headquaters Office. A diverse panel reviewed the applications and recommended funding each of the proposals received. A total of five (5) awards were made. Funds support research on pesticides for use in specialty crops and minor crops.

(F) Special Research Grants Program Potato Breeding Research:

For the Fiscal Year (FY) 2016 grant cycle, $1,848,966 was available to fund proposals submitted to this program.

In 2016, four (4) proposals were submitted and they were reviewed in the same panel with canola proposals. There were ten (10) panelists.

Funds were available to support all four (4) awards.

The funding ratio for this program is 100%.

Funded projects will support potato (Solanum tuberosum L.) research that focuses on the development and testing of superior potato varieties for commercial production.

POLICY GUIDE
EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:
Fiscal Year 2016: The following represents examples of funded projects for active Programs:

(B) Global Change Ultraviolet Radiation Monitoring and Research Program (GCUV-B):
The USDA has long been concerned about high levels of ultraviolet radiation from the Sun, which are known to have harmful effects on agricultural crops, rangelands, forest ecosystems, humans, and livestock. The purpose of this program is to support research which:
- generates an uninterrupted stream of climatology data;
- determines mechanisms and symptoms of plant and animal response; and
- applies tightly integrated crop and climate models to assess regional and national impacts (both biological and economic) of multiple plant stressors.

(D) Minor Crop Pest Management Program Interregional Research Project #4:
This project continued support for four (4) regional Centers plus a National Headquarters Office. Since the plant protection industry has little economic incentive to develop registrations for specialty crop chemicals, IR-4 develops the data that provide legal, effective, safe and IPM-compatible pest control agents for minor and specialty crops. Without this program, many specialty crops could no longer be produced in the US or would be greatly compromised in cost and quality. This projects objectives for minor and specialty crops are to obtain pesticide clearances for food uses, further the development and adoption of biostatistics, and conduct research to protect ornamental crops.

(F) Special Research Grants Program Potato Breeding Research:
Potato Variety Development and Improvement in the Northwest

The objective of this research is to release and commercialize new potato varieties that will directly benefit all segments of the Northwest potato industry and indirectly benefit all US producing regions. The strategy is to identify traits, make crosses, and apply selection pressures that will increase the probability of developing varieties that can be produced and utilized more efficiently than existing varieties. Appropriate breeding goals include high yield, improved processing quality, genetic resistance to major pests and diseases, higher levels of resistance to stresses, increased nutrient use efficiency, improved human nutritional value, and high tuber quality. An additional environmental benefit comes with reduced use of pesticides, water, and fertilizers, which are normal by-products of improved varieties. This major objective is accompanied by myriad minor objectives involving germplasm enhancement, germplasm production, selection procedures, disease and stress screening, variety trial design and conduct, seed increases, management studies, and commercial evaluations. Each objective is to be carried out by the Northwest institution(s) best equipped to complete the associated tasks. A heavy element of interdependence among all institutions is essential in achieving the outlined objectives.

Potato Breeding and Cultivar Development in the Southwest

The Southwestern Regional Potato Cultivar Development Project was initiated by several universities to meet the unique needs of the Southwest potato industry. Crosses and original selections are made in Colorado and Texas followed by formal regional evaluation trials in all three (3) states. Breeding stocks and advanced selections are openly shared with more than a dozen other states. Promising selections from the Project are further evaluated in the Western Regional Trials which include seven (7) Western states. Specific goals and objectives are developed and constantly reevaluated based on extensive stakeholder input. Since the inception of the Southwestern Regional Potato Cultivar Development Project in 1997, 48 new cultivars and clonal selections have been released or co-released with other institutions which make up substantial and increasing portions of the regional potato acreage and have become important contributors to the economies of the states. Of newly released cultivars since 1997, and ranking in the top 50 cultivars that were accepted for seed certification in the US in 2015, cultivars developed by the Southwestern Regional Potato Cultivar Development Project ranked second among the regional projects.

Development Of Multifunctional Potato Cultivars With Enhanced Quality, Disease And Pest ResistanceNorth Central Region

Potato production is in the North Central US is vital to the regional economy and plays an important role in the national potato supply. In 2015 the four (4) states of Michigan, Minnesota, North Dakota, and Wisconsin accounted for 22% of the US acreage, with a farm-gate value of $856 million. All sectors of the potato market are present in this region, dominated by fry and chip processing markets, with a successful fresh market and expanding specialty market niches. Changes in climate, consumer preference, production economics, and environmental regulations require continual innovation in the potato industry, and plant breeding leading to variety commercialization is critical to meeting these evolving demands. This proposal, which is a joint effort of the potato breeding and genetics programs at four (4) North Central land-grant universities. There are four (4) specific objectives are detailed as follows:

(1) to identify new varieties with superior agronomics and end-used quality via hybridization and selection;
(2) to screen elite germplasm for resistance to key pests;
(3) to use genetic markers to improve breeding efficiency; and
(4) to transfer new varieties from the breeding programs to the commercial sector.

The four (4) project directors and their collaborators have the requisite experience, facilities, and stakeholder relationships to successfully complete these objectives.

The expected outcomes from the one-year grant include the release of new varieties, the selection of new breeding lines, new markers for marker-assisted selection, and preliminary data on the feasibility of using genome-wide marker analyses for improving variety development.

Potato Breeding and Variety Development for Improved Quality and Pest Resistance in the Eastern United States

This is an integrated, seven-state (Florida, Maine, North Carolina, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Virginia) potato breeding and variety development project for the eastern U.S. Four (4) states maintain breeding programs. Collaborative multi-site selection, evaluation, and variety development work is conducted in all states. Breeding objectives and priorities are determined from stakeholder input. The overall goal is to develop attractive, productive, disease- and insect-resistant potato varieties that can be employed by small and large potato producers to enhance marketing opportunities, farm sustainability and profits. The specific objectives are:

(1) Improve productivity and quality for important eastern U.S. markets by developing and releasing superior potato varieties using conventional and marker-assisted potato breeding methods;
(2) Reduce the impact of economically important biotic and abiotic potato production constraints by breeding and developing improved potato germplasm;
(3) Select widely-adapted potato varieties by screening yield, quality, and pest resistance traits at multiple eastern locations;
(4) Facilitate commercial adoption of improved new varieties by coordinating initial commercial trials and by developing production management recommendations; and
(5) Enhance the availability and use of project-related, research-based information through the use of digital media. Development of varieties with resistance to important diseases such as late blight, scab, potato virus Y, early blight; and golden nematode is a long-term priority.

The project focuses on classical breeding techniques, but also includes development and use of marker-assisted selection for key traits. Our selection procedures utilize diverse eastern growing conditions to select potato germplasm with resistance to pests, heat stress, and stress-related defects.

(H) Special Research Grants Program Aquaculture Research (aka Aquaculture Centers):

Development and Management of Canola in the Great Plains Region

The long-term goal of this project is to facilitate the adoption of winter canola into cropping systems of the Southern Great Plains (SGP). The project will focus on the high priority areas of developing and testing of superior cultivars, improving methods of production, and transferring new knowledge to producers. New cultivars developed under SGP conditions will possess enhanced winter survival, higher yield potential, greater oil content, and herbicide tolerance. To date, the project has released a new variety of winter canola called Torrington, a variety that yields 9.7% greater than the most widely grown cultivars in the SGP.

Two (2) additional cultivars will be considered for full release in 2017. The project tested 48 varieties in FYs 2015/16, including 23 that are commercially available, and 36 in the FYs 2016/17 season. Project results can be found at http://www.agronomy.k-state.edu/services/crop-performance-tests/index.html. In addition the team has conducted seedling studies and harvest management studies that have been published as an extension bulletin to help farmers with their management. The team has communicated these results through 19 individual events in both Oklahoma and Kansas that reached 925 people.

Improving Canola Production and Production Systems with Genetic and Agronomic Advances to Increase Canola Acreage in the Pacific Northwest.

Pacific Northwest (PNW) dryland agriculture is dominated by small-grain cereals due to high dryland wheat yields. This project will aim to increase canola production in this area since it can lend sustainability to a current system of monoculture cereal production, with some of the highest canola yields in the US. This project will develop genetically superior cultivars, identity and quantify economic and rotational benefits of integrating a canola rotation, identify management strategies, conduct surveys for the impact of blackleg disease, and produce a manual for PNW canola production. To date the team has identified and field evaluated just over 3000 genetic lines and regionally tested seven (7) advanced lines.

The spring canola cultivar empire was released and foundation seed was produced for cultivars that is a fry oil and three (3) new winter cultivars with high herbicide tolerance. The team has tested 74 regional cultivars throughout four (4) states.

The four (4) projects funded in the 2016 competition include:

(1) Why has U.S. Aquaculture Struggled Economically? Identifying Key
Current and Future Determinants of Economic Sustainability;
(2) Improving Aquaculture's Value through Enhanced Nutrient Management;
(3) Identification of the risks of emerging Flavobacteria to early life stages of farmed salmonids and development of improved control strategies; and
(4) Validation of markers and marker-assisted selection of hard clam for resistance to QPX disease.

Executive Order Public Law 87-778 (76 Stat. 806, 16 U.S.C. 582a, et seq.) signed into law on October 10, 1962 is also known as the McIntire-Stennis Cooperative Forestry Research Act. 16 U.S.C 582a thru a-7.

OBJECTIVES:
The purpose of this funding is to increase forestry research in the production, utilization, and protection of forestland; to train future forestry scientists; and to involve other disciplines in forestry research. Funding should also address the high priority issues described in the current M/S Strategic Plan: Sustaining Healthy and Productive Forests: An Investment in Americas Competitive Position in the Global Marketplace: (1) science of integration; (2) forest ecosystem services; (3) human attitudes and behaviors; (4) conflict, uncertainty, and decision-making; (5) technological advancements, productivity, and forest applications; and (6) urban ecosystems.

The McIntire-Stennis Cooperative Forestry Research Act (M/S) grant is used to assist all states in carrying out a program of state forestry research at state forestry schools and colleges and developing a trained pool of forest scientists capable of conducting needed forestry research, which should include:

(1) ecological restoration;
(2) catastrophe management;
(3) valuing and trading ecological services;

(5) technological advancements (biotechnology, nanotechnology and geospatial technology), productivity, and forest applications; and
(6) urban ecosystems.

Funding is provided to the States through a formula-based allocation process which depends on several factors. First, a base amount (approximately $25,000) is allocated to each State; however, this base amount is excluded from the formula. The balance of funding to each State is determined through a ranking process and dependent upon the following three factors:

(1) forty percent of the remaining balance is allocated based on the area of non-Federal commercial forest land;
(2) forty percent is allocated based upon the volume of timber cut annually from stock; and
(3) twenty percent is allocated based on the total expenditures for forestry research from non-Federal sources.

Funds are then distributed to the eligible State-certified Institutions within the State as determined by the Governors designee. Applications may be

2 CFR part 200, Uniform Administrative Requirements, Cost Principles, and Audit Requirements for Federal Awards and 2 CFR part 400 USDAs Uniform Administrative Requirements, Cost Principles, and Audit Requirements for Federal Awards apply to this program.
SPECIAL NOTE:
Please refer to the Capacity, Competitive, and/or Non-Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs) for further specific and pertinent details. The most current RFAs are available via:

Award Procedure:
Funding is provided to the States through a formula-based allocation process which depends on several factors. First, a base amount (approximately $25,000) is allocated to each State; however, this base amount is excluded from the formula. The balance of funding to each State is determined through a ranking process and dependent upon the following three factors:

(1) forty percent of the remaining balance is allocated based on the area of non-Federal commercial forest land;
(2) forty percent is allocated based upon the volume of timber cut annually from stock; and
(3) twenty percent is allocated based on the total expenditures for forestry research from non-Federal sources. Funds are then distributed to the eligible State-certified Institutions within the State as determined by the Governors designee.

Applications are subjected to a system of peer and merit review in accordance with section 103 of the Agricultural Research, Extension and Education Reform Act of 1998 (7 U.S.C. 7613) by a panel of qualified scientists and other appropriate persons who are specialists in the field covered by the proposal.

Within the limit of funds available for such purpose, the NIFA Authorized Departmental Officer (ADO) shall make grants to those responsible, eligible applicants whose applications are judged most meritorious under the procedures set forth in the RFA.

Reviewers will be selected based upon training and experience in relevant scientific, extension, or education fields, taking into account the following factors:

(a) The level of relevant formal scientific, technical education, or extension experience of the individual, as well as the extent to which an individual is engaged in relevant research, education, or extension activities;
(b) the need to include as reviewers experts from various areas of specialization within relevant scientific, education, or extension fields;
(c) the need to include as reviewers other experts (e.g., producers, range or forest managers/operators, and consumers) who can assess relevance of the applications to targeted audiences and to program needs;
(d) the need to include as reviewers experts from a variety of organizational types (e.g., colleges, universities, industry, state and Federal agencies, private profit and non-profit organizations) and geographic locations;
(e) the need to maintain a balanced composition of reviewers with regard to minority and female representation and an equitable age distribution; and
(f) the need to include reviewers who can judge the effective usefulness to producers and the general public of each application.

Evaluation Criteria will be delineated in the Request for Applications (RFA).

Length and Time Phasing of Assistance:

MS funds are expected to be fully expended in the fiscal year (FY) of appropriation; however, funds may be carried forward one (1) additional fiscal year (FY). These carryover funds must be fully expended by September 30 of the following year. No prior approval to carryover these funds is required from NIFA. Method of awarding/releasing assistance: quarterly.

SPECIAL NOTE:

Please refer to the Capacity, Competitive, and/or Non-Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs) for specific and pertinent details. The most current RFAs are available via: https://nifa.usda.gov/program/mcintire-stennis-capacity-grant

RFAs are generally released annually. Hence, the RFAs provide the most current and accurate information available. Any specific instructions in the Capacity, Competitive, and/or Non-Competitive RFAs supersedes the general information provided in the CFDA database. See the following for information on how assistance is awarded/released: NIFA utilizes the Automated Standard Application for Payments (ASAP), a secure, web-based electronic payment and information system that allows federal agencies to administer funds. Currently, ASAP is the only payment source for new NIFA grantees.

Reports:

Grantees are to submit initial project information, annual summary and final reports through NIFAs electronic, Web-based inventory system that facilitates both grantee submissions of project outcomes and public access to information on Federally-funded projects. The details of the reporting requirements are included in the award terms and conditions.

The following is a description of project data reporting requirements through the REEport system (located at http://portal.nifa.usda.gov) as well as the SF-425 reporting requirements:

1. Financial Reporting

A Financial Report shall be submitted to NIFA through REEport annually for all eligible projects from the preceding fiscal year. A Financial Report is also required for expenditures on all State projects that are to be included in the non-Federal funds and matching funds computation. Reports shall be made on the federal fiscal year basis.

Financial reporting via the SF-425, Federal Financial Report is due to the Capacity Grants Branch of OGFM on December 31 for the period October 1 through September 30, on an annual basis, until the award is closed out.

NIFA uses the SF-425, Federal Financial Report to monitor cash.

McIntire-Stennis funds are expected to be fully expended in the fiscal year of appropriation; however, funds may be carried over for up to one year after the end of the year for which they were appropriated. No prior approval is required to carry over funds for one additional year; however, no additional carryover requests may be considered or approved, as no legislative authority to do so is provided.

2. REEport Reporting

Institutions should submit a project proposal through the REEport systems. The Essentials of a McIntire-Stennis Proposal guideline document can assist you in developing the format of your proposal. The guideline can be found at http://nifa.usda.gov/resource/mcintire-stennis-project-proposal-essentials under the Resources section or on Appendix B in the RFA.

The following is a description of project data reporting requirements through the REEport system (located at http://portal.nifa.usda.gov) as well as the SF-425 reporting requirements:

Institutions must submit a REEport Project Initiation which includes the Project Description; Project Classification; Assurance Form; and Project Proposal through the REEport System prior to the initiation of each capacity-funded project. The project must undergo a review process and be approved before it is incorporated into the Program of Research.

Each institution shall submit a REEport Progress Report annually for each eligible project. All Progress Reports from institutions are based on the federal fiscal year and shall be submitted by March 1 for the preceding fiscal year (FY).

A Final Report shall be submitted to NIFA through REEport for each completed or terminated project. Such reports shall be submitted at the same time as are progress reports on active projects and should include a summary of accomplishments for the entire life of the project.

See http://nifa.usda.gov/program/mcintire-stennis-capacity-grant for additional details of annual, final technical and financial reporting requirements.

Instructions for using the REEport system are included on the NIFA web site at: http://nifa.usda.gov/report-resources-land-grant-partners.

Two (2) Programs are funded under CFDA 10.203. Specific Objectives are as follows:

(A) The Hatch Act of 1887 (Regular Research)
The Hatch Act of 1887 provides the basis for Federal funding for agricultural research activities at the State Agricultural Experiment Stations in the 50 States, the District of Columbia, and the Insular Areas. State Agricultural Experiment Stations are eligible for funds appropriated under this Act according to the following formula: The previous year's base plus the current year increase as follows:

Three percent (3%) for Federal Administration,
Twenty percent (20%) equally,

These funds are designated as the Multistate Research Fund, State Agricultural Experiment Stations. Funds are allocated on a prorata basis and allocations are adjusted to support national and regional projects. These projects and their associated budgets are reviewed and approved annually.

The 25 percent applies to any amounts appropriated above the level of funding in 1955 (the base year).

In addition to the uses applicable to the Regular Research funds, Multistate Research funds must be used for cooperative research employing multidisciplinary approaches in which a State agricultural experiment station, working with another State agricultural experiment station, the Agricultural Research Service, or a college or university, cooperates to solve problems that concern more than one (1) State. These funds are known as the Hatch Multistate Research Fund (MRF).

RESTRICTIONS:

(A) The Hatch Act of 1887 (Regular Research)

In accordance with section 1473 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 3319), indirect costs and tuition remission are unallowable as Hatch MRF formula grant expenditures.

Section 3(d)(1) of the Hatch Act of 1887 (7 U.S.C. 361c(d)(1)), with regard to institutions in the 50 states, no allotment shall be made to a State under subsection (b) or (c), and no payments from the allotment shall be made to a State, in excess of the amount that the State makes available out of non-Federal funds for agricultural research and for the establishment and maintenance of facilities for the performance of the research. However, section 3(d)(4) of the Hatch Act of 1887 (7 U.S.C. 361c(d)(4)) provides that Effective beginning for fiscal year (FY) 2003, in lieu of the matching funds requirement of paragraph (1), the insular areas of American Samoa, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, Micronesia, Northern Marianas Islands, and the Virgin Islands of the United States shall provide matching funds from non-Federal sources in an amount equal to not less than fifty percent (50%) of the formula funds distributed by the Secretary to each of the insular areas, respectively, under this section.

The Secretary may waive the matching fund requirement of fifty percent (50%) for any fiscal year (FY) if the Secretary determines that the government of the insular area will be unlikely to meet the matching requirement for the fiscal year (FY).

Section 7403 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 amended section 3(d)(4) of the Hatch Act to subject the District of Columbia to the same matching requirements as the insular 1862 Land-Grant Institutions upon enactment (May 22, 2008).

NIFA may consider and approve matching waivers submitted by State Agricultural Experiment Stations in the Insular Areas and the District of Columbia.
Applicant Eligibility:

(A) The Hatch Act of 1887 (Regular Research)

Hatch Act funds are provided for agricultural research on an annual basis to the State Agricultural Experiment Stations (SAEs) which were established under the direction of the college or university or agricultural departments of the college or university in each State in accordance with the act approved July 2, 1862 (7 U.S.C. 301 et seq.); or such other substantially equivalent arrangements as any State shall determine.

Award recipients may subcontract to organizations not eligible to apply for funding provided that such arrangements are necessary to complete the project.

(B) The Hatch Act of 1887 (Multistate Research)

Hatch Act funds are provided for agricultural research on an annual basis to the State Agricultural Experiment Stations (SAEs) which were established under the direction of the college or university or agricultural departments of the college or university in each State in accordance with the act approved July 2, 1862 (7 U.S.C. 301 et seq.); or such other substantially equivalent arrangements as any State shall determine.

Award recipients may subcontract to organizations not eligible to apply for funding provided that such arrangements are necessary to complete the project.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Funds under the Hatch Act are allocated in accordance with the statutory formula stated in the Act to the State agricultural experiment stations of the 50 States, the District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Micronesia, and Northern Mariana Islands. These institutions have been identified and declared eligible by their respective State Legislatures.

Credentials/Documentation:

Credentails/Documentation (083):

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

A Southern Region study was conducted to improve disease resistance and fruit quality in peaches using traditional breeding and molecular approaches because the perfect peach - consistently exceeding consumer expectations with satisfying appearance, aroma, flavor, shelf life, and texture and meeting industry needs for durable disease resistances - remains elusive. This work lead to the development and application of DNA tests, which, when combined with phenotypic data, have facilitated breeding programs combining horticultural quality with leaf resistance to bacterial spot and fruit resistance to brown rot. A Western Region project studied Staphylococcus aureus (S. aureus) colonization and infection in horses and cattle. Investigators examined how different strains of S. aureus isolated from mastitic cows impact the outcome of mammary gland infection. This led to a better understanding of what virulence factors are used by S. aureus to cause disease, which will guide future vaccine designs.

A project from the North Central region investigated novel methods for soybean genetic improvement and genomic analysis. Researchers discovered new Quantitative Trait Loci (QTLs) for soybean seed protein and oil content, and one (1) of the QTLs greatly influences seed protein content.

A new project was initiated in FY 2016. The project will:

a) develop chemical ecology tools and information to support sustainable agriculture by reducing damage by pests in crops such as potatoes, brassicas, cucurbits, apples, blueberries, and sweet corn, while maintaining pollinator health in agricultural systems;
b) define variability of chemically mediated interactions between pests, crops, and beneficial organisms in terms of plant chemistry, species interactions and landscape factors in the Northeast;
c) characterize the non-target effects of pesticides on pollinators and natural enemies of pests;
d) assess the impact of domestication on plant and animal chemical ecology in agricultural fields and identify unifying patterns of human and natural selection on chemical interactions of crop plants;
e) establish a chemical ecology analytical facility for the Northeast to allow researchers ready access to equipment and technical expertise; and
f) use extension to facilitate adoption and awareness of science-based chemical ecology tools to support sustainable production.

Examples of research on continuing projects in FY 2016 include:

(1) A project will include:
   a) evaluation of microbial species with potential for biological control of soil-borne plant pathogens;
   b) validation of new collection, detection and diagnostic protocols;
   c) assessment of responses to sub-inhibitory fungicides in fungal plant pathogen populations;
   d) population genetic analysis of P. capsici using SNP database;
   e) data analyses, publication of scientific reports and outreach materials;
   f) progress reports at APS national and regional meetings as well as in the annual project meeting; and
   g) development and delivery of extension education and outreach materials.

(2) A project will continue:
   a) residue removal data collection including animal performance and subsequent yield;
   b) establishment of experiments that compare modified intensive-early stocking of rangeland with breeding cattle vs. continuous stocking of breeding cattle;
   c) experiments evaluating modified intensive-early stocking vs. continuous stocking of breeding cattle and influence of grazing strategies on grazing land productivity, harvest efficiency, and health;
   d) experiments evaluating inter-seeding annually into cool-season and warm-season grass pastures to evaluate how weather variability influences results;
   e) evaluation of forage yield, forage quality, animal performance, and subsequent crop yield from forage crop use;
   f) evaluation of calf health, reproductive performance, cow body condition score, and calf performance from confined cow sites; and
   g) dissemination of information via Extension efforts. Fiscal Year 2017: (A) FISCAL YEAR (FY) 2017 HATCH REGULAR RESEARCH:

Investigators in the Western Region are working to connect water quantity and water quality considerations in water-scarce regions of the arid southwest.

Researchers have completed a detailed analyses of water policies, including such topics as groundwater governance in the United States, the use of grey water by the building/engineering industries, and the detection of antibiotic resistance in environmental matrices, such as recycled water and grey water. This work will help to develop guidelines for the future matching of water supplies to appropriate uses.

(B) FISCAL YEAR (FY) 2017 HATCH MULTI-STATE RESEARCH:

New projects initiated/renewed in 2017 include the following:

(1) The project will:
   a) conduct multidisciplinary conventional and molecular marker-assisted breeding, germplasm enhancement, and early-generation selection research to improve potato productivity and quality for important Eastern U.S. markets.
   This will help develop new potato varieties with improved disease and insect resistance, resistance to internal heat necrosis, improved processing or fresh market characteristics, and enhanced nutritional quality will be released, providing growers with better marketing opportunities and/or improved resistance to pests;
   b) use novel and improved potato germplasm to reduce the impact of economically important potato pests in the Eastern US. This will increase adoption of new, high quality, pest resistant varieties, leading to increased profitability, greater worker safety, and reduced pesticide load in the environment and human diet;
   c) evaluate yield, quality, and pest resistance of preliminary and advanced potato breeding lines in experimental- and commercial-scale trials at multiple Eastern locations to aid industry adoption of new varieties. Multi-site evaluation and selection process will result in the release of new, broadly adapted potato varieties that will be stress tolerant and suitable for use in a changing climate; and
   d) provide timely and relevant information to stakeholders through various means including the maintenance of a project website and a web-based potato variety production information to growers, allied industry members and consumers will be further developed and strengthened.

(2) The project will:
   a) develop new technologies for characterizing fundamental nanoscale processes;
   b) construct and characterize self-assembled nanostructures that will lead to development of tools and products and benefit different aspects of agriculture and biological engineering research;
   c) develop devices and systems incorporating microfabrication and nanotechnology;
   d) develop a framework for economic, environmental and health risk assessment for nanotechnologies applied to food, agriculture and biological systems;
   e) develop/improve education and outreach materials on nanofabrication, sensing, systems integration and application risk assessment; and
   f) improve academic-industry partnership to help move the developed technologies to commercialization phase.

Examples of research on continuing projects in FY 2016 include:

Program Descriptions October 2017

New projects which will begin in 2018 include:

(a) develop new technologies for management of flies (biting and nuisance) in organic and conventional animal agriculture systems. This include in-depth evaluation of the natural repellents used on livestock and further understand of how flies respond to repellents. Develop and evaluate recognition software to estimate fly population densities on livestock. Provide recommendations for alternative bedding materials to minimize fly development and optimal trapping strategies for target species;

(b) detect insecticide resistance and develop management strategies. Produce research and extension publications describing the mechanism(s) of resistance to insecticides in house flies, stable flies, and horn flies. A database of resistance mechanisms by fly species and geographic distribution will be made available to support management efforts directed at house flies and stable flies. Develop a publicly-accessible database of the house fly and stable fly genomes that can be queried by fly researchers from various scientific disciplines;

c) investigate microbial ecology, epithelial immunity, and vector competence of biting and nuisance flies. Identification of attractive and repellent compounds from stable fly larval development substrates and from bacteria associated with flies and their development sites. Attractive lures will be developed and tested based upon fly response to these compounds. A database of bacterial, viral, and fungal taxa associated with blow flies will be developed. Produce research and extension publications describing infection of house flies by bacteria and other pathogens of concern to humans. Evaluate, develop and recommend selected essential oils with documented antimicrobial or microstatic activity against marithis in dairy cattle;

d) characterize population biology of biting and nuisance flies. Datasets will be produced and made available describing the dispersal distance of stable flies with additional recorded data on environmental factors that affect dispersal. A population growth model for stable fly using time-series datasets will be provided to collaborators for use in further research or extension to growers and other extension clientele. A database of larval development site characteristics will be produced and made available; and

e) community and stakeholder engagement by developing a searchable, national database of all pesticides registered in the US for use in animal agriculture will be compiled and updated annually. A national website with links to all currently available livestock entomology research and extension information from across the US will be made available to our stakeholders. Collaborate on developing regular state, regional and national updates for user groups (Extension agents, producer groups, veterinarians, etc.) through conference calls and/or on-line conferencing utilities. We will conduct pest specific webinars for farmers/stakeholders (conventional and organic), private practitioners. Fiscal Year 2018: (A) FISCAL YEAR (FY) 2018 HATCH REGULAR RESEARCH:

A North Central study is investigating biocontrol of foodborne pathogens on fresh produce. Recently, there has been an increase in the number of disease outbreaks associated with fresh produce contaminated with pathogens such as Escherichia coli O157:H7, Salmonella sp., Listeria monocytogenes, and others. Researchers are working to develop and optimize a bacteriophage treatment to control enterohemorrhagic Escherichia coli on fresh produce. Bacteriophages are potentially useful in controlling foodborne pathogens on minimally processed products such as plant response. Develop and evaluate recognition software to support management efforts directed at house flies and stable flies. Produce a publicly-accessible database of the house fly and stable fly genomes that can be queried by fly researchers from various scientific disciplines;

(3) Improving Forage and Bioenergy Crops for Better Adaptation, Resilience, and Flexibility

This project is directed to these focus areas: Breeding crops with higher forage yield, improved forage quality for livestock production, longevity, and resistance or tolerance to biotic and abiotic stress conditions will provide more economical food production; forage crops need to be developed that will be productive under abiotic stresses, including drought, flooding, cold and warm temperatures, and soil salinity; Research needs to be done on stand establishment (improved seed germination and seedling vigor), biomass production, disease and insect resistance, etc., across multiple environments, especially on marginal soils where these species are likely to be used without competing with food crops; and Improving the yield, nutritional quality, and storability of forage crops will ensure an ample supply of good quality feed to animals and an essential step in securing the food chain to the consumer.

(4) Elder Financial Exploitation: Family Risk and Protective Factors

This project will address five (5) objectives:

a) understand family members’ experiences (thoughts and feelings) related to elder financial exploitation by a relative;

b) identify risk and protective factors in family systems that increase or decrease the likelihood of family elder financial exploitation;

c) identify the range and scope of family experiences foundational to family elder financial exploitation, including the consequences of EFE on family systems;

d) disseminate findings and implications to gerontology, family studies, and family economics researchers and educators, law enforcement and attorneys, community-based practitioners, and family members; and

e) continue to design further studies that build on earlier findings and create a conceptual model or expand Rabiner et al. (2004) Conceptual Model of Elder Financial Exploitation.

(5) Social, Economic and Environmental Causes and Consequences of Demographic Change in Rural America

This project proposes to undertake a comprehensive analysis of current population processes affecting U.S. rural areas and provide to stakeholders policy-relevant research findings on the demographic causes and consequences of socioeconomic and environmental change.

The 1890 Land-Grant Institutions, including Tuskegee University, West Virginia State University and Central State University, are eligible for funds appropriated under this Act according to the following formula: Funds up to the total amount made available to all eligible institutions in the fiscal year ending September 30, 1978, under section 2 of the Act of August 4, 1965 (79 Stat.431; 7 U.S.C. 450i), shall be allocated among the eligible institutions in the same proportion as funds made available under section 2 of the Act of August 4, 1965, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1978, are allocated among the eligible institutions. Of the funds in excess of that amount, 20 per cent shall be allotted among eligible institutions in equal proportions; 40 per cent shall be allotted among the eligible institutions in the proportion that the rural population of the State in which each eligible institution is located bears to the total rural population of all the States in which eligible institution are located, as determined by the last preceding decennial census current at the time each such additional sum is first appropriated; and the balance shall be allotted among the eligible institutions in the proportion that the farm population of the State in which each eligible institution is located bears to the total farm population of all the States in which eligible institutions are located, as determined by the last preceding decennial census current at the time each such additional sum is first appropriated. In computing the distribution of the allocated funds, the allotments to Tuskegee University and Alabama A&M University shall be determined as if each institution were in a separate State. MOE requirements are not applicable to this program.

Length and Time Phasing of Assistance:
Evans-Allen Research Program funds are fiscal year appropriated and expected to be fully expended in the fiscal year of appropriation; however, funds may be carried over for up to one additional year. Please note there is no limitation on the amount of Federal funds that may be carried over for this one additional fiscal year. No prior approval from NIFA is required. Since this limitation is legislatively mandated, NIFA is not authorized to grant any carryover requests beyond this one additional year.

RFAs are generally released annually. Hence, the RFAs provide the most current and accurate information available. Any specific instructions in the Capacity, Competitive, and/or Non-Competitive RFAs supersede the general information provided in the CDA data base. NIFA utilizes the Automated Standard Application for Payments (ASAP), a secure, web-based electronic payment and information system that allows federal agencies to administer funds.

Currently, ASAP is the only payment source for new NIFA grantees.

Reports:

Grantees are to submit initial project information and annual summary reports to NIFAs electronic, Web-based inventory system that facilitates both grantee submissions of project outcomes and public access to information on Federally-funded projects. The details of the reporting requirements are included in the award terms and conditions.

Pre-award form submissions must be submitted to the Evans-Allen Research Program as a new application on the www.grants.gov website. As noted previously, these application packages complement, rather than duplicate, the information collected via the Plan of Work (POW) and REEport and together satisfy all legislative and regulatory pre-award requirements. The Plan of Work Update and Annual Report of Accomplishments and Results should have been submitted by April 1 online at the web address: http://pow.nifa.usda.gov. Section 225 of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (AREERRA) amended NARETPA to require an approved Plan of Work for agricultural extension and research activities at 1890 Land-Grant Institutions in order to receive Federal funding. Therefore, each 1890 Land-Grant Institution, including Tuskegee University, West Virginia State University and Central State University, must submit both a Five (5) Year Plan of Work Update and an Annual Report of Accomplishments and Results.

Both reports are due April 1. Specific project details and pertinent information should be entered in REEport. The REEport system collects technical and financial data about projects NIFA has funded and allows grantees to report significant accomplishments and impacts of their research, extension, and education work.

The Plan of Work (POW) and Annual Report of Accomplishments and Results should be submitted online through the NIFA Reporting Portal at the web address: http://portal.nifa.usda.gov/portal. Additional information about the POW is available at: http://nifa.usda.gov/tool/pow.

The following is a description of project data reporting requirements through the REEport system (located at http://portal.nifa.usda.gov) as well as the SF-425 reporting requirements:

Institutions must submit a REEport Project Initiation which includes the Project Description; Project Classification; Assurance Form; and Project Proposal through the REEport System prior to the initiation of each capacity-funded project. The project must undergo a review process and be approved before it is incorporated into the Program of Research.

Each institution shall submit a REEport Progress Report annually for each eligible project. All Progress Reports from institutions are based on the federal fiscal year and shall be submitted by March 1 for the preceding fiscal year.

A Financial Report shall be submitted to NIFA through REEport annually for all eligible projects from the preceding fiscal year. A Financial Report is also required for expenditures on all State projects that are to be included in the non-Federal funds and matching funds computation. Reports shall be made on the federal fiscal year basis.

Financial reporting via the SF-425, Federal Financial Report is due to the Capacity Grants Branch, Awards Management Division, OGFM, on December 31 for the period October 1 through September 30 annually, until the award is closed out. A Final Report shall be submitted to NIFA through REEport for each completed or terminated project. Such reports shall be submitted at the same time as are progress reports on active projects and should include a summary of accomplishments for the entire life of the project.

See http://www.nifa.usda.gov/business/awards/formula/evansallen.html for additional details of annual, final technical and financial reporting requirements. Instructions for using the REEport system are included on the NIFA web site at: http://nifa.usda.gov/REEport-resources-land-grant-partners.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:
Fiscal Year 2016: The appropriated amount for the 1890 Evans-Allen Program was $54,185,000.

The funds available to the states after legislatively authorized set-asides were $50,910,586.

The 19 Institutions, located in 18 states, were awarded funds based on a formula and the awards ranged from $1,242,633 to $5,110,655.

Institutions were required to provide a 1:1 dollar match. However, matching waivers were an option for institutions that were unable to acquire the required match from the State due to financial constraints and reductions to State budgets. Fiscal Year 2017: In Fiscal Year (FY) 2017, the appropriated amount was $54,185,000.

Funding to the 19 institutions after legislatively authorized set-asides were $50,780,008. Funds will be distributed on a formula basis, with a 100 percent (100%) matching requirement by the State from non-federal sources. However, a matching waiver may be granted by the funding agency with appropriate justification/data demonstrating good faith efforts to obtain the 100% required match.

Fiscal Year 2018: It is projected that this project will be funded at the Fiscal Year (FY) 2018 level of $50,683,295, to support the 19 Institutions.

RELATED PROGRAMS:

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:
Fiscal Year 2016: OPTIMAL AGRONOMIC PRACTICES TO REDUCE NUTRIENT LOADING IN WATER BODIES

The research objectives for this three-year project include the following:
(1) Develop a GIS based methodology to assess statewide agronomic practices in a dynamic manner in collaboration with different agencies and institutions. This effort will produce a GIS data base of the agronomic practices of farmers in the watershed that will include variables such as time lines for tillage, fertilizing, planting, applications of chemicals for crop health and harvesting. The yield output cost input data would be included. Historic data on farmers; management practices with regard to tillage, fertilization, crop health, residue management will be captured through this effort with the ability to summarize the practices of individual farmers in the area. Small and disadvantaged farmers will be identified and the characteristics will be documented in the study;

(2) Develop an integrated methodology to study the impacts of hydrology on nutrient loading under the current agronomic practices. This effort will result in generating a GIS based, monthly rainfall predictive model using stochastic hydrology adjusted for climate change scenarios under prescribed levels of reliability around timelines of agronomic events such as tillage, fertilizing and other chemical applications; and

(3) Develop a methodology for comparatively studying the contributions to nutrients from different sources farms, municipal wastewater plants, discharges from industries.

ANALYZING THE ROLE OF HIGH PRO-INFLAMMATORY DIETS AND CHILDHOOD OBESITY IN THE RISK OF ADULT CARCINOGENESIS IN CHILDREN

This project was designed to better understand the relationship between pro-inflammatory diets, pro-inflammatory marker expression levels, and adult cancer risk in obese children. The central hypothesis of this study is that high pro-inflammatory diets and lack of exercise, which are obesity precursors, will result in increased levels of bio-inflammatory markers that have been linked to cancer diagnosis. The study proposes to address our goal in two specific aims: Specific Aim 1: To investigate the link between childhood obesity caused by pro-inflammatory (high-fat) diets and low physical activity as risk factors for carcinogenesis; we will measure the expression and functionality of pro-inflammation biomarkers (IL-1, IL-6, IL-8, IL12b, IL-10, TNF &alpha;; leptin, VEGF, adiponectin, CRP, and SAA); and Specific Aim 2: To determine cancer risks by investigating differences in the pro-inflammatory gene signature according to demographics and socioeconomic status in racially-diverse populations (varying degrees of rurality, age, gender, income, and educational level) by data stratification. Accomplishments to-date for this three (3) year project are: Specific Aim 1: Preliminary data has been collected that compares the expression of the inflammation markers in non-cancer vs. prostate cancer populations (varying degrees of rurality, age, gender, income, and educational level) by data stratification. Accomplishments to-date for this three (3) year project are: Specific Aim 1: Preliminary data has been collected that compares the expression of the inflammation markers in non-cancer vs. prostate cancer DNA. There is evidence of marked increased expression in the inflammation markers, Serum amyloid A and C-Reactive Protein (SAA1 and CRP).

INVESTIGATIONS ON FOOD DERIVED AGES (ADVANCED GLYCATION END-PRODUCTS) IN RELATION TO OBESITY AND BREAST CANCER

Finding a cure for breast cancer is a national priority. The goals of this research over a two-year period are to:

(1) Investigate the implications of carbohydrate and fat mediated modifications termed as Advanced Glycation End Products (AGEs) in relation to obesity (BMI&gt;30), and ductal carcinoma breast cancer (known age and BMI values). This will help in early detection of breast cancer, obesity involvement and some predictions about the possible types of medications for prevention of ductal carcinoma type breast cancer. The results of our studies will help us understand the implications of glycoxidation reactions in obesity and ductal carcinoma type breast cancer; and

(2) Involves undergraduate students in biomedical research. This will help student interns pursue career goals in the fields of food, nutrition and health. Two (2) to three (3) students are working in this project. Student participants work with sensitive analytical instruments, interpret the data, write research papers, and present these works in local and national scientific conferences. The research work in majority cases involves handling of important biological specimens of obese, cancerous and non-cancerous tissue samples of known BMI values from similar age groups of people. Fiscal Year 2017: IMPROVING AGRITOURISM MARKETING

This proposal examines the marketing capabilities of small farmers who engage in agritourism activities as a supplemental or primary means of earnings, and seeks to provide research based measures to improve the marketing viability of such farms. Research activities will lead to the identification of current and potential small farm agritourism practitioners and the marketing challenges they face in developing and communicating agritourism experiences and resources. The identification of the "gaps" in agritourism marketing among small farmers will provide an opportunity for these farmers to develop marketing strategies and resources and in procuring the financial support or technical expertise needed to further develop their agritourism enterprises. As a result of this initial set of research activities, a set of "best practices" in agritourism marketing will be identified. These best practices will be formulated as a training resource to be delivered via, workshops, web-based curricula and outreach training for agritourism practitioners.

IDENTIFICATION AND CHARACTERIZATION OF VIRUSES INFECTING SOYBEAN (GLYCINE MAX L.) AND LIMA BEAN (PHASEOLUS LUNATUS) USING NEXT GENERATION SEQUENCING

Plant diseases caused by fungi, oomycetes, bacteria and viruses are one (1) of the main limiting factors affecting agriculture and food safety security worldwide. This proposal aims to identify and characterize viruses infecting two (2) important legume crops including soybean (Glycine max L.), and lima bean (Phaseolus lunatus). Through this project, researchers will apply NGS to explore the presence of RNA viruses infecting soybean and lima beans. Following discovery of any viral or viral-like sequences, scientists will design probes/primers for identifying RNA plant viruses for field surveys. Finally, they will develop and utilize for the routine detection for the identified viruses. Providing this information will improve knowledge about future disease management strategies of plant viruses. Identifying and characterizing new/emerging diseases is becoming more important as international trade of plant products increases and as trading partners seeks to protect themselves from the introduction of unwanted diseases.

LOW-FAT FRIED MUSCLE FOODS AND HUMAN HEALTH ENHANCEMENT: A THREE-PRONG STRATEGY

Fried foods have become a health concern and high consumption of fried foods has been associated with health conditions such as heart diseases, obesity, type 2 diabetes, premature aging and cancer. Hence, to address this problem, researchers propose to devise a three-prong strategy (a novel protein-based edible coating prepared from fish and chicken processing by-products activated with onion peel extract, and a new battering system consisting of sweet potato starch) to reduce the fat-uptake in deep-fat fried muscle foods. The specific objectives of this study are to:

(1) Isolate the proteins from fish and chicken processing by-products and develop edible coatings;

(2) Determine the effect of sweet potato starch-containing batter alone or in combination with edible coating on reducing the fat-uptake of fried muscle foods;

(3) Evaluate the physicochemical properties of the fried muscle foods during refrigerated storage;

(4) Investigate the antibacterial activities of the edible coating containing onion peel extract against pathogenic and spoilage bacteria;

(5) Analyze sensory attributes of the fried muscle foods during refrigerated storage; and

(6) Provide experiential and educational opportunities for minority students through undergraduate and graduate research assistantships. Fiscal Year 2018: It is projected that each of the 19 institutions will submit an approved research project under this Program that addresses current and emerging issues in the Food and Agricultural Sciences. Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

10.206 GRANTS FOR AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH, COMPETITIVE RESEARCH GRANTS

National Research Initiative Competitive Grants Program (NRI)

FEDERAL AGENCY:
National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

OBJECTIVES:
To support research, education and extension grants that address key problems of national, regional and multistate importance in sustaining all components of agriculture (farming, ranching, forestry, aquaculture, rural communities, human nutrition and obesity, food and fiber processing, etc.). Providing this support to US agriculture requires that the NRI advance fundamental. Building on these discoveries will necessitate new efforts in education and extension that deliver science-based knowledge to people, allowing them to make informed practical decisions. All grants were awarded on a competitive basis.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:
PROJECT GRANTS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:
NIFA Competitive Programs Unit administers the NRI. The purpose of the NRI Competitive Grants Program was to support research grants and integrated research, extension, and education grants that address key problems of National, regional, and multi-state importance in sustaining all components of agriculture (farming, ranching, forestry including urban and agroforestry, aquaculture, rural communities, human nutrition, processing, etc.). Providing this support requires that NRI advances fundamental sciences in support of agriculture and coordinates opportunities to build on these discoveries. Building on these discoveries will necessitate new efforts in education and extension that deliver science-based knowledge to people, allowing them to make informed practical decisions. Hence, the NRI accepted applications for fundamental research, mission-linked research, and integrated research, extension, and education projects. However, applicants should know that the NRI utilized no more than twenty-two percent (22%) of available funds to support integrated projects and that these funds were not distributed uniformly, but targeted to specific priorities. Targeted priorities for integrated projects were clearly identified within the detailed descriptions of program offerings [see Part II, E of the Fiscal Year (FY) 08 Request for Applications (RFAs)]. Funds may not be used for the renovation or refurbishment of research spaces (including energy retrofitting); purchase or installations of fixed equipment in such spaces; or planning, repair, rehabilitation, acquisition, or construction of buildings or facilities. Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:
For research projects, the eligibility requirements for the NRI were as follows: except where otherwise prohibited by law, State agricultural experiment stations, all colleges and universities, other research institutions and organizations, Federal agencies, national laboratories, private organizations or corporations, and individuals were eligible to apply for and to receive a competitive grant. The Agricultural Research Enhancement Awards (AREA) have some notable differences from these requirements. See Part II C, 2. of Fiscal Year (FY) 08 Requests for Applications (RFAs).

For integrated projects, the eligibility requirements for the NRI were as follows: except where otherwise prohibited by law, State agricultural experiment stations, all colleges and universities, research foundations maintained by colleges or universities, private research organizations with established and demonstrated capacities to perform research or technology transfer, Federal research agencies, and national laboratories were eligible to apply for and receive a competitive grant. The bridge grants have some notable differences from these requirements. See Part II C, 3(b) of Fiscal Year (FY) 08 RFAs for details.

Unsolicited applications were not considered and applications from scientists at non-United States organizations were not accepted. Award recipients may subcontract to organizations not eligible to apply provided such organizations were necessary for the conduct of the project.

Beneficiary Eligibility:
For research grants eligibility includes State Agricultural Experiment Stations, U.S. colleges/universities, other U.S. research institutions and organizations, Federal agencies, national laboratories, private organizations or corporations, and individuals. For integrated research, education or technology transfer, Federal research agencies and national laboratories. Proposals from scientists at non-U.S. organizations will not be considered for support.

Credentials/Documentation:
A Data Universal Number System (DUNS) number must be obtained - A DUNS number is a unique number that identifies an organization. It has been adopted by the Federal government to help track how Federal grant money is distributed. If your organization does not have a DUNS number, call the special Dun & Bradstreet hotline at 1-866-705-5711 to receive one free of charge. You will receive a DUNS number within several days of your request. Please note, individual proprietorships (i.e. farmers, ranchers) can request and receive a DUNS number, but must register with Grants.gov as an organization, not as an individual.

Registration with Central Contractor Registry (CCR) is required - The CCR is the central government repository for organizations working with the Federal government. If your organization is not already registered, identify the primary contact who should register your organization. When your organization registers with CCR, it will be required to designate an e-Business Point of Contact (e-Business POC). The e-Business POC authorizes individuals to submit grant applications on behalf of the organization and creates a special password called a Marketing Partner ID (or MPIX) to verify individuals authorized to submit grant applications for the organization. Visit the CCR website at http://www.ccr.gov to begin this process. It may take several days to collect the information needed for your organizations registration. The CCR Assistance Center can be reached at 888-227-2423. This information collection is approved under OMB Control No. 0524-0039, NIFA Application Kit for Research and Extension Programs.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the RFAs. Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but were not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one (1) time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there were factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information. This program is excluded from coverage under 2 CFR 200, Subpart E - Cost Principles.

Preapplication Coordination:
All RFAs were published on the Agency's website and Grants.gov. Applicants must complete the Grants.gov registration process. Please see the following Grants.gov link for more information:
Program Descriptions

Application Procedures:
This program is excluded from coverage under 2 CFR 200, Uniform Administrative Requirements, Cost Principles, and Audit Requirements for Federal Awards. Applications should be submitted as outlined in the RFA. Applications must follow the instructions provided per Grants.gov and in the Agency guide to submitting applications via Grants.gov. This information collection is approved under OMB Control No. 0524-0039, NIFA Application Kit for Research and Extension Programs.

Within the limit of funds available for such purpose, the NIFA Authorized Departmental Officer (ADO) shall make grants to those responsible, eligible applicants whose applications were judged most meritorious under the procedures set forth in the RFA. This information collection is approved under OMB Control No. 0524-0039, NIFA Application Kit for Research and Extension Programs. Reviewers were selected based upon training and experience in relevant scientific, extension, or education fields, taking into account the following factors: (a) The level of relevant formal scientific, technical education, or extension experience of the individual, as well as the extent to which an individual is engaged in relevant research, education, or extension activities; (b) the need to include as reviewers experts from various areas of specialization within relevant scientific, education, or extension fields; (c) the need to include as reviewers other experts (e.g., producers, range or forest managers/operators, and consumers) who can assess relevance of the applications to targeted audiences and to program needs; (d) the need to include as reviewers experts from a variety of organizational types (e.g., colleges, universities, industry, state and Federal agencies, private profit and non-profit organizations) and geographic locations; (e) the need to maintain a balanced representation of reviewers with regard to minority and female representation and an equitable age distribution; and (f) the need to include reviewers who can judge the effective usefulness to producers and the general public of each application.

For applied research if the grant was commodity-specific; and not of national scope, the grant recipient was required to match USDA funds awarded on a dollar-for-dollar basis from non-Federal sources with cash and/or in-kind contributions. MOE requirements are not applicable to this program.

Length and Time Phasing of Assistance:

Normally, competitive research projects were supported for periods of up to four (4) years. Method of awarding/releasing assistance: by letter of credit.

Grantees were required to submit annual and summary progress reports via NIFA Current Research Information System (CRIS). This reporting requirement was approved under OMB Control No. 0524-0042, NIFA Current Research Information System (CRIS). EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

PERFORMANCE OF FEEDER CATTLE
The focus of this research project is to compare the effects of anticipated (15 days prior), delayed (15 days after), or vaccination at the time of weaning and performance variables of feeder cattle.

Example of funded research in Feeder Cattle

NOVEL PORCINE EPIDEMIC DIARRHEA VIRUS VACCINE PIPELINE
Recent emergence of extremely contagious Porcine Epidemic Diarrhea virus (PEDV) with 80-100% mortality in neonate pigs calls for the development of an effective prophylactic vaccine. PEDV has been such an important disease that it brought attention to the NIFA Animal Health and Disease priority area (A1221). In this seed grant proposal, we propose to develop an effective novel vaccine candidate against PEDV infection. We will produce a ferritin nanoparticle immunogen coated with PEDV’s spike (S) glycoprotein to induce neutralizing antibodies. We will formulate this novel nanoparticle into a Newcastle virus (NDV) vector with mucosal tropism derived from an attenuated vaccine strain LaSota. The NDV vector is effective in inducing protective immunity at both the mucosal and systemic levels and it has been extensively used to express various antigens of important viral diseases including the full-length spike glycoprotein of SARS coronavirus. Resultant vector vaccines have shown safe and protective efficacies in different animal models, and NDV vector replication in eggs is amenable to large scale and rapid production. We hypothesize that the nanoparticle vaccine delivered by NDV vector mimic native viruses, which in turn elicit high titer neutralizing antibody responses and provide protection against PEDV infection in pigs. We propose to employ a pregnant sow model to test this hypothesis. Sow model is of clinical relevance because successful vaccination of sows is likely to play an important role in the control and eradication of PED epidemics in piglets.

Example of funded research in Swine

ALTERING THE TIME OF VACCINATION AGAINST RESPIRATORY PATHOGENS TO ENHANCE VACCINE EFFICACY, HEALTH, AND PERFORMANCE OF FEEDER CATTLE
The focus of this research project is to compare the effects of anticipated (15 days prior), delayed (15 days after), or vaccination at the time of weaning and feedlot entry on vaccine efficacy, health, and performance variables of feeder cattle.

Example of funded research in Dairy Cattle
ENHANCING DISEASE RESISTANCE IN DAIRY CATTLE

The long term goal of this project is to reduce the use of antimicrobials in dairy cattle by providing new methods to optimize innate immunity through nutritional and/or targeted pharmacological approaches during time of increased susceptibility to disease. Many dairy cattle diseases during the early lactation period can result from dysfunctional inflammatory responses that are characterized by an imbalance of the robust initial response needed for pathogen clearance and the prompt return to immune homeostasis. The initiation and resolution of the inflammatory response is regulated by the production of potent lipid mediators. The potential benefits of reducing inflammatory-based diseases of early lactation dairy cattle through modification of lipid metabolism has not been explored in depth. Therefore, the immediate goals of this project are to not only identify how lipid mediator biosynthesis changes during the transition period and during disease, but also the potential impact that lipid metabolism has on macrophage inflammatory functions. Therefore, the objectives of this project are to:

1. describe changes in lipid mediator biosynthesis during the transition period;
2. describe changes in lipid mediator biosynthesis during mastitis; and
3. determine the underlying mechanisms of how lipid mediators can impact macrophage inflammatory functions.

Example of funded research in Poultry

SAFE AND COST-EFFECTIVE NEXT GENERATION VACCINES AGAINST INFECTIOUS VIRUSES USING ESTABLISHED IMMORTAL AVIAN CELL LINES

The goal of this proposal is to improve animal health by developing an optimal system for the production of infectious vaccine viruses of genetically engineered-, non-reversible and live attenuated vaccines using established immortal avian cell lines. The specific objectives are to:

1. attenuate virulent and vaccine virus strains using immortal avian cell lines;
2. develop a new reverse genetics system retaining the complete full length sequence of viral RNA genome of vaccine strain using a novel artificial bacterial chromosome (BAC) vector and immortal avian cell line substrates to produce vaccine candidates;
3. compare commercial vaccines with the newly generated vaccines in this project in terms of immunogenic activity and protective efficacy; and
4. produce a large quantity of optimally infectious vaccine strains for the use of vaccination in commercial setting.

Example of funded research in sheep

ENDOCRINE DISRUPTING CHEMICALS AND PREGNANCY HEALTH IN SHEEP

The overall objective of this proposal is to define the molecular mechanisms whereby bisphenolic compounds (BPA, and BPA replacement chemicals) with estrogenic potential can induce placental dysfunction during pregnancy. Studies described in this proposal will test a novel hypothesis to assess the disease risk of exposure to endocrine disrupting chemicals during pregnancy in a relevant agricultural species, such as the sheep.

Objectives:

1. to test if gestational exposure to BPA or BPA replacement compounds leads to a disruption in the maternal endocrine milieu and fetal growth in sheep;
2. to test if gestational exposure to BPA or BPA replacement compounds leads to a disruption in placental function; and
3. to test if exposure to BPA or BPA replacement compounds impairs placental steroidogenic potential.

Fiscal Year 2018: This program is subject to congressional budget approval for FY 2018. At this time, the projected funding level is Zero (0). However, if funding is provided, it is anticipated that numerous smaller (less than $30,000 each) institutes receiving less than $30,000 will make up about 40% of the future funded projects. Because so many smaller studies will be supported annually, some aspect of each of the topic areas listed below will generally be represented in one (1) or more projects each program year. In accordance with the legal authority for this program, all of the following project topic areas relate directly toward the enhancement of animal health through the support of research activities related to:

1. reducing the incidence of food-borne illness and to provide a safer food supply; and
2. to protect animal health by minimizing disease transmission through improved basic and applied mechanisms to prevent and control disease in livestock (i.e., vaccinology, improved diagnostic testing and capabilities, and improved herd and flock management).

10.210 HIGHER EDUCATION GRADUATE FELLOWSHIPS GRANT PROGRAM

Institution Challenge, Multicultural Scholars & Graduate Fellowships Grant Program (Graduate Fellowships)

[Formerly: National Needs Fellowship (NNF)]

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

Section 7106 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act (FCEA) of 2008 (Public Law 110-246) amends the legislative authority for this program contained in Section 1417 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (NARETPA) (99 Stat. 1548; 7 U.S.C. 3152) to include the University of the District of Columbia as an eligible applicant. Section 7106 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act (FCEA) of 2008 (Public Law 110-246) amends the legislative authority for this program contained in Section 1417 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (NARETPA) (99 Stat. 1548; 7 U.S.C. 3152) to include the University of the District of Columbia as an eligible applicant. , 7 U.S.C. 3152.

OBJECTIVES:

The purpose of the NNF Grants Program is to train students for Masters and/or doctoral degrees and provide additional postdoctoral training for Fellows who have completed their doctoral degrees at colleges and universities that have demonstrable teaching and research competencies in the food and agricultural sciences. Fellowships and IRTA awards are specifically intended to support traineeship programs that encourage outstanding students to pursue and complete their degrees or obtain postdoctoral training in areas where there is a need for the development of scientific and professional expertise in the food and agricultural sciences. Fellowships and IRTA awards invest in graduate training and relevant international experiential learning for a cadre of diverse individuals who demonstrate their potential to successfully complete graduate degree programs in disciplines relevant to the mission of the USDA.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

PROJECT GRANTS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Competitive annual grants providing for a limited number of graduate stipends are awarded to selected U.S. institutions of higher education so as to distribute support for graduate study to promising food and agricultural scientists and professionals. Individuals selected initially by the institution must enroll in a program leading to a graduate, master's or doctoral degree in one of the targeted national needs areas of the food and agricultural sciences. Such persons may not have been enrolled previously in the program at the same degree level. Current fellows are eligible to receive supplemental grants of $3,000 to cover travel and living expenses for special international study or thesis/dissertation research experiences. Funding for the supplemental grants will be awarded on a competitive basis using un-expired funds from expired fellowship grants with unspent funds remaining as set forth in the annual program guidelines. No indirect cost allowed. Institutional allowance in lieu of indirect cost.
NNF stipend funds for fellowship must be used to:

(1) support the same Fellow at the Masters degree level who maintains satisfactory progress and is eligible to receive grant support for a maximum of twenty-four (24) months during a thirty-month period, and/or

(2) support the same Fellow at the doctoral degree level who maintains satisfactory progress and is eligible to receive grant support for a maximum of thirty-six (36) months within a forty-two-month period. Institutions must use a minimum stipend of $18,500 per year for Masters Fellows and $24,500 per year for Doctoral Fellows.

If funds remain as a result of USDA Fellows completing their studies early (less than twenty-four months for a Masters degree or less than thirty-six months for a doctoral degree) or Fellowships being terminated prematurely, such funds may be used, within the time remaining on the award, to support:

(1) pursuit of a doctoral degree in a TESA in the food and agricultural sciences by a Masters degree level Fellow at the grantee institution, or

(2) a Replacement Fellow.

The tenure of such a Replacement Fellow is limited to whatever time is remaining on the grant before it expires; however, an institution may not appoint a Replacement Fellow unless there is time for the student to complete at least one semester/quarter of study before the expiration date of the grant. Replacement Fellows must meet all of the eligibility criteria and other requirements established for Fellow selection and are subject to the same provisions as other Fellows during their tenure in the program. Replacement Fellows are entitled, during their tenure, to the same benefits that other Fellows receive from the grant award and National Needs Graduate and Postdoctoral Fellowship Grants Program. Institutions may, but are not required to, continue a Replacement Fellow's tuition and other benefits beyond the expiration date of the grant using institutional or other funds. A Fellow may not be simultaneously supported under multiple National Needs Graduate and Postdoctoral Fellowship Grants Program awards. Remaining funds cannot be used to increase annual Fellowship stipends provided to existing Fellows. If less than one semester/quarter remains on the award, the grantee must refund unexpended monies to NIFA. Such funds cannot be used to increase the annual stipend amounts for current USDA Graduate Fellows. Should a USDA Fellow require additional time beyond the grant period to complete his or her degree, it is expected that the grantee will consider alternatives to continue supporting the Fellow through other means. Tuition and fees are the responsibility of the Fellow unless an institution elects to use its cost-of-education institutional allowance for this purpose or elects to pay such costs out of non-USDA monies. No dependency allowances are provided to any USDA Graduate Fellows. Stipend payments and special international study or thesis/dissertation research travel allowances may be made to Fellows by the institution, in accordance with standard institutional procedures for graduate fellowships and assistantships. When grants are for IRAs that will be used by To-Be Recruited Fellows: The IRA funds for To-Be Recruited fellows will be withheld until the Project Director has submitted, to the NNF Program Office, all of the required documentation for eligibility of the Graduate Fellow for the IRA as well as the required specifics outlined in the RFA for the IRA. The information must be submitted for approval, no less than 150 days prior to the use of the IRA funds (see PART IV, B, 3, b, Section 1). This requirement will become a condition of the award. Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:

Proposals may be submitted by all U.S. colleges and universities that confer a master's or doctoral degree in at least one area of the food and agricultural sciences targeted for national needs fellowships. As defined in Section 1404 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977, as amended (7 U.S.C. 3103), the terms “college” and “university” mean “an educational institution in any State which: (a) Admits as regular students only persons having a certificate of graduation from a school providing secondary education, or the recognized equivalent of such a certificate; (b) is legally authorized within such State to provide a program of education beyond secondary education; (c) provides an educational program for which a bachelor's degree or any other higher degree is awarded; (d) is a public or other nonprofit institution; and (e) is accredited by a nationally recognized accrediting agency or association.” Eligibility also applies to research foundations maintained by eligible colleges or universities.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Funds awarded in this program are used to support the training of graduate students to obtain either a master's or doctoral degree in one of the targeted specializations of the food and agricultural sciences.

Credentials/Documentation:

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;

(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA. If such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program, NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

Reports:
REEport GRANT REPORTING:
All grant reporting must be completed using the Research, Education, and Extension project online reporting tool (REEport). Initial reporting (item a. below) is to be submitted through the REEport system. Annual progress and final reporting (items b. and c. below) also is to be done through the REEport system. Information on REEport can be found on NIFAs web site at https://nifa.usda.gov/tool/reeport and the REEport software can be found at http://portal.nifa.usda.gov.

a. Initial Documentation in the REEport Database--
Research, Education, and Extension project online reporting tool (REEport)
All projects must be documented in REEport. The NIFA contact for all REEport documentation is:

b. Annual Progress Reports.
All projects must report annually into REEport. An annual Progress Report is due 90 calendar days after the awards anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day of which the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period. The following information, when applicable, must be included in the Project Modifications section of the annual Progress Report:

1) A comparison of actual accomplishments with the goals established for the reporting period (where the output of the project can be expressed readily in numbers, a computation of the cost per unit of output should be submitted if the information is considered useful);

2) The reasons for slippage if established goals were not met; and

3) Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

c. Final Technical Report
The Final Technical Report is required within 90 calendar days after the expiration or termination of the award. The Final Technical Report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments made only during the final reporting segment of the project. In addition to supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:

Identify equipment purchased with any Federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

FINANCIAL REPORTING:
As outlined in 2 CFR 200.327, the recipient must submit financial status reports by the frequency required in the terms and conditions of the award. The following are the financial reporting requirements for NIFA:

Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425:

A Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due on an annual basis no later than 90 days following the end of the award anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day when the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period.

A final Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due 90 days after the expiration date of this award. The report must be submitted to the Awards Management Division (AMD) as a pdf attachment to an email sent to awards@nifa.usda.gov.

REEport GRANT REPORTING:
All grant reporting must be completed using the Research, Education, and Extension project online reporting tool (REEport). Initial reporting (item a. below) is to be submitted through the REEport system. Annual progress and final reporting (items b. and c. below) also is to be done through the REEport system. Information on REEport can be found on NIFAs web site at https://nifa.usda.gov/tool/reeport and the REEport software can be found at http://portal.nifa.usda.gov .

a. Initial Documentation in the REEport Database--
Research, Education, and Extension project online reporting tool (REEport)
All projects must be documented in REEport. The NIFA contact for all REEport documentation is:

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: For Fiscal Year 2016, the SARE Research and Education funding line (CFDA 10.215) was consolidated with the SARE Professional Development Program funding line (CFDA 10.506) to be administered as a single program which would maintain the functions of both programs, (Chapters 1 and 3).
For the FY 2016 award cycle, $23,147,513 was available after legislatively authorized set-asides were deducted. Of this amount $1,143,913 was used for communications, outreach and coordination activities at the national level and $22,003,700 was distributed equally among the four (4) SARE Regions. Each region uses these funds to support several different types of competitive sub-awards. These include Research and Education grants, Farmer-Rancher grants, Producer plus Professional grants, Graduate Student grants and Youth Educator grants (North Central region only). The inclusion of the CDFA 10,500 has added Professional Development Program competitive grants and state grants for each of the fifty states, Washington DC and the Island protectorates.

For FY 2016, all of the sub-awards have not been finalized. Hence, a comprehensive tabulation of the sub-awards by grant type is not yet available. Fiscal Year 2017: In FY 2017, the SARE Research and Education funding line (CFDA 10.215) was consolidated with the SARE Professional Development Program funding line (CFDA 10,500) to be administered as a single program which would maintain the functions of both program, (Chapters 1 and 3).

For the FY 2017 award cycle, $25,297,920 will be available after legislatively authorized set-asides are deducted. Of this amount $1,662,989 will be used for communications, outreach and coordination activities at the national level and $23,634,931 will be distributed equally among the four (4) SARE Regions. Fiscal Year 2018: The FY 2018 Funding Levels have not yet been established by Congressional Appropriations. However, the projected level of funding for the Program is $17,810,673. Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

OBJECTIVES:

To build the research and teaching capacities of the 1890 land-grant institutions and Tuskegee University through cooperative programs with Federal and nonfederal entities.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

PROJECT GRANTS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

For teaching grants, funds may be used in the following targeted areas:

1. Curricula design and materials development;
2. Faculty preparation and enhancement for teaching;
3. Instruction delivery systems;

Research areas include, but are not limited to:

1. Studies and experimentation in food and agricultural sciences;
2. Centralized research support systems; and
3. Technology delivery systems. With prior approval, in accordance with the cost principles set forth in OMB Circular No. A-21, some grant funds may be used for minor alterations, or repairs deemed necessary to retrofit existing teaching or research spaces in order to carry out a funded project.

However, requests to use grant funds for such purposes must demonstrate that the alterations, or repairs are incidental to the major purpose for which a grant is issued.

Section 720 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012 (Pub.L. No. 112-55) limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award.

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;

(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

Funded projects will:
(1) build and strengthen institutional capacity through stimulating the development of high quality Teaching, Research and Extension programs at the 1890 Land-Grant Universities;
(2) produce Baccalaureate and higher level degree graduates capable of strengthening the Nations food, agricultural, natural resources, and human sciences professionals and scientists;
(3) develop strong research that addresses current challenges in today's agriculture; and
(4) deliver needed help to communities, small farms and other clients.

Fiscal Year 2017: In FY 2017 it is anticipated that $18,260,989 will be available to support awards after administrative deductions.

A total of 169 applications were accepted for review in response to the FY 2017 Request for Applications (RFA). It is anticipated that approximately 50 awards will be granted in FY 2017. As of August 2017, the FY 2017 peer panels have

10.217 HIGHER EDUCATION - INSTITUTION CHALLENGE GRANTS Program
Institution Challenge, Multicultural Scholars & Graduate Fellowships Program
Program (Institution Higher Education Challenge) [Formerly: Challenge or HEC Grants]

FEDERAL AGENCY:
National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

OBJECTIVES:
To increase institutional capacities to respond to State, regional, national, or international educational needs by strengthening college and university teaching programs in the food and agricultural sciences.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:
PROJECT GRANTS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:
Funds may be used only in targeted areas, e.g., curricula design and materials development, faculty preparation and enhancement for teaching, instruction delivery systems, scientific instrumentation for teaching, student experiential learning, and student recruitment and retention, as cited in the annual program announcement in the Federal Register. Student tuition remission, room and board, fees or other financial assistance (scholarships, fellowships, etc.). Also, funds may not be used for the renovation or refurbishment of research, education, or extension space; the purchase or installation of fixed equipment in such space; or to plan, repair, rehabilitate, acquire, or construct buildings or facilities (i.e., greenhouses, laboratories, or other structures). Promotional items (e.g., T-shirts and other give-a-ways) and food functions (e.g., cookouts or other social meal gatherings) are considered entertainment expenses, and are also not allowed under this grants program. Federal Cost Principles governing this grant program state that items not eligible for Federal funding may also not be used as an applicants contribution toward meeting matching requirements.

Section 720 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012 (Pub.L. No. 112-55) limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

Special Note on Indirect Costs as in-kind matching contributions: Indirect costs may be claimed under the Federal portion of the award budget or, alternatively, indirect costs may be claimed as a matching contribution (if no indirect costs are requested under the Federal portion of the award budget). However, unless explicitly authorized in the RFA, indirect costs may not be claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution, unless the total claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. An awardee may split the allocation between the Federal and non-Federal portions of the budget only if the total amount of indirect costs charged to the project does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. For example, if an awardee's indirect costs are capped at 30 percent pursuant to FY 2012 appropriated funds, Section 720 of the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2012 (Division A of Pub L. 112-53), the awardee may request 15 percent of the indirect costs on both the Federal portion of the award and as a matching contribution. Or, the awardee may request any similar percentage that, when combined, does not exceed the maximum indirect cost rate of 30 percent. Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:
All U.S. public and private nonprofit colleges and universities offering a baccalaureate or first professional degree in at least one discipline or area of the food and agricultural sciences.

Beneficiary Eligibility:
All U.S. colleges and universities having a demonstrable capacity to teach the food and agricultural sciences.

Credentials/Documentation:
The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;

(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Obligations:
Project Grants (FY 16 $4,570,425; FY 17 est $4,566,840) and FY 18 est $0 - The difference between the appropriation and obligation numbers reflects legislative authorized set-asides deducted as appropriate, and in some cases the availability of obligatory authority from prior years.

NOTES:
(1) In terms of availability of appropriations (time), there are no time limits as to when "no-year" funds may be obligated and expended and the funds remain available for their original purposes until expended.

(2) Effective in FY 2012, funding for three (3) Higher Education Programs: (Graduate Fellowships CFDA 10.210; Challenge CFDA 10.217; and Multicultural Scholars CFDA 10.220), were consolidated under a single funding line within the Research & Education Activities Account. However, different legislative authorities are applicable and separate Requests for Applications (RFAs) were issued under the respective CFDA numbers.

(3) The President's FY 2016 Budget proposal consolidates STEM-related programs in budgets for the Department of Education or the National Science Foundation.

Range and Average of Financial Assistance:
If minimum or maximum amounts of funding per competitive and/or capacity project grant, or cooperative agreement are established, these amounts will be announced in the annual Competitive Request for Application (RFA).

Fiscal Year 2016: In Fiscal Year (FY) 2016, $4,570,425 million was available to support awards after legislatively authorized set-asides were deducted.

A total of 61 applications were reviewed in response to the FY 2016 RFA. A 13-member peer review panel evaluated the applications. The peer panel included faculty and administrators from land grant and non-land grant colleges and universities, and practitioners from the food and agricultural sciences community.

Funds were available to support 20 awards in the following Grant Types: Conference/Planning Projects [Three (3) awards] Regular Projects (13 awards)
Joint-Institution Projects [One (1) award]

Large-Scale Comprehensive Initiatives [Three (3) awards]

The funding ratio for this program in FY 2016 was 26%.

Funded projects will address one (1) or more of the following educational strategies:
(1) Curriculum Development, Instructional Delivery Systems and Expanding Student Career Opportunities;
(2) Faculty Preparation and Enhancement for Teaching; and/or
(3) Facilitating Interaction with Other Academic Institutions.

The Higher Education Challenge (HEC) program seeks to improve formal, baccalaureate or masters degree level food, agricultural, natural resources, and human sciences (FANH) education and first professional degree-level education in veterinary medicine (DVM). HEC projects may improve the economic health and viability of communities through the development of degree programs that emphasize new and emerging employment opportunities. Projects may also address the national challenge to increase the number and diversity of students entering the FANH sciences. Fiscal Year 2017: In Fiscal Year (FY) 2017, it is anticipated that $4,566,840 will be available to support awards after legislatively authorized set-asides are deducted.

A total of 105 applications were received in response to the FY 2017 RFA. It is anticipated that approximately 20 awards will be granted in FY 2017.

As of August 2017, the FY 2017 peer panel has not been convened to evaluate the merit of the submitted applications. Therefore, further information is not yet available. Pertinent data to be provided by Program at a future date. Fiscal Year 2018: The projected amount to fund proposals for FY 2018 is Zero ($0). However, if the program is funded, it is projected that for similar projects will be awarded in FY 2018. Pertinent data to be provided by Program at a future date.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:
Fiscal Year 2016: A university is leading a project to develop the Excellence in Education for Food, Energy, and Water (E2FEW) project, which will support the development, implementation, and evaluation of a 24-month sustained professional development program for postsecondary food, agricultural, natural resources, and human (FANH) sciences faculty. The faculty development program is designed around core tenets of effective undergraduate STEM instruction, including active learning, scientific teaching strategies, and the use of Undergraduate Learning Assistants.

A university was funded to:
(1) improve the quality and relevance of fiber, textile, and apparel (FTA) curriculum and promote enhanced curriculum and instructional materials and methods;
(2) attract, recruit, and retain more qualified and diverse students for the FTA sector; and
(3) prepare graduates with the knowledge and skills to meet current and future workplace needs.
A university was funded to expand the opportunities within its Urban Food Systems Masters degree-level program in agriculture to include competencies (soft skills) in communication, problem solving, professionalism, teamwork, and leadership.

A university is leading a project to strengthen animal welfare education in the veterinary curriculum, with emphasis on food animal production. Project objectives include development of:
1. an online 1-credit animal welfare course suitable for freshman level veterinary students;
2. animal welfare case studies suitable for integration in advanced veterinary courses;
3. 1-week rotations for swine and dairy cattle animal welfare assessment;
4. effective multiple-choice examination questions to evaluate student competency; and
5. a "roadmap" of existing educational opportunities to facilitate veterinary student specialization in animal welfare.

A university was funded to lead a project that addresses the need to be ready and capable of solving global food security and hunger problems that span geo-political borders. The instructional opportunity addressed by this project is to reach graduate students in food and agricultural sciences by globalizing the curricula with contextually-rich reusable learning elements (RLEs) and authentic case studies. Instruction will be created in three (3) broad areas (Global Horticulture, Sustainable International Development, Human Health and Nutrition) with content experts creating the materials. Fiscal Year 2017: Project data is not yet available. The peer review panel has not met to evaluate proposals that were submitted in response to the FY 2017 RFA.

It is anticipated that funded projects will address one (1) or more of the following educational strategies:
1. Curriculum Development, Instructional Delivery Systems and Expanding Student Career Opportunities;
2. Faculty Preparation and Enhancement for Teaching; and
3. Facilitating Interaction with Other Academic Institutions.

Pertinent data to be provided by Program at a future date. Fiscal Year 2018: This program is subject to congressional budget approval for FY 2018. At this time, the projected funding level is Zero ($0). However, if funding is provided, it is anticipated that similar projects will be awarded.

Project data is not yet available. Pertinent data to be provided by Program at a future date.

CRITERIA FOR SELECTING PROPOSALS:
2 CFR part 200, Uniform Administrative Requirements, Cost Principles, and Audit Requirements for Federal Awards and 2 CFR part 400 USDA's Uniform Administrative Requirements, Cost Principles, and Audit Requirements for Federal Awards apply to this program.

Within guidelines established for the program as described in the Competitive Request for Application (RFA). The most current RFAs are available via:

10.219 BIOTECHNOLOGY RISK ASSESSMENT RESEARCH (BRAG)

FEDERAL AGENCY:
National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

OBJECTIVES:
The purpose of the BRAG program is to assist Federal regulatory agencies in making science-based decisions about the effects of introducing into the environment genetically engineered organisms, including plants, microorganisms (including fungi, bacteria, and viruses), arthropods, fish, birds, mammals and other animals excluding humans. Investigations of effects on both managed and natural environments are relevant. The BRAG program accomplishes its purpose by providing Federal regulatory agencies with scientific information relevant to regulatory considerations derived from the risk assessment research that the program funds.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:
Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:
Grant funds must be used for allowable costs necessary to conduct approved research objectives. Funds may not be used for purposes other than those approved in the grant award documents. The use of grant funds to plan, acquire, or construct a building or facility is not allowed under this program. With prior approval, and in accordance with the cost principles set forth in the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) Circular No. A-21, (codified at 2 CFR 220), some grant funds may be used for minor alterations, renovations, or repairs deemed necessary to retrofit existing teaching or research spaces in order to carry out a funded project. However, requests to use grant funds for such purposes must demonstrate that the alterations, renovations, or repairs are essential to achieving the major purpose of the project. Grant funds may not be used for endowment investing.

Section 720 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012 (Pub.L. No. 112-55) limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

Special Note on Indirect Costs as in-kind matching contributions: Indirect costs may be claimed under the Federal portion of the award budget or, alternatively, indirect costs may be claimed as a matching contribution (if no indirect costs are requested under the Federal portion of the award budget).

However, unless explicitly authorized in the RFA, indirect costs may not be claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution, unless the total claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. An awardee may split the allocation between the Federal and non-Federal portions of the budget only if the total amount of indirect costs charged to the project does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. For example, if an awardees' indirect cost caps are at 30 percent pursuant to FY 2012 appropriated funds, Section 720 of the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2012 (Division A of Pub. L. 112-55), the awardee may request 15 percent of the indirect costs on both the Federal portion of the award and as a matching contribution. Or, the awardee may request any similar percentage that, when combined, does not exceed the maximum indirect cost rate of 30 percent. Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:
Any public or private research or educational institution or organization.

Beneficiary Eligibility:
Any public or private research or educational institution or organization.

Credentials/Documentation:
The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:
1. Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;
(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

SPECIAL NOTE:
Please refer to the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs) for further specific and pertinent details. The most current RFAs are available via:

RFAs are generally released annually. Hence, the RFAs provide the most current and accurate information available. Any specific instructions in the Competitive RFAs supersede the general information provided in the CFDA database.

Award Procedure:
Applications are subjected to a system of peer and merit review in accordance with section 103 of the Agricultural Research, Extension and Education Reform Act of 1998 (7 U.S.C. 7613) by a panel of qualified scientists and other appropriate persons who are specialists in the field covered by the proposal. Within the limit of funds available for such purpose, the NIFA Authorized Departmental Officer (ADO) shall make grants to those responsible, eligible applicants whose applications are judged most meritorious under the procedures set forth in the RFA.

Reviewers will be selected based upon training and experience in relevant scientific, extension, or education fields, taking into account the following factors:

(a) The level of relevant formal scientific, technical education, or extension experience of the individual, as well as the extent to which an individual is engaged in relevant research, education, or extension activities;

(b) the need to include as reviewers experts from various areas of specialization within relevant scientific, education, or extension fields;

(c) the need to include as reviewers other experts (e.g., producers, range or forest managers/operators, and consumers) who can assess relevance of the applications to targeted audiences and to program needs;

(d) the need to include as reviewers experts from a variety of organizational types (e.g., colleges, universities, industry, state and Federal agencies, private profit and non-profit organizations) and geographic locations;

(e) the need to maintain a balanced composition of reviewers with regard to minority and female representation and an equitable age distribution; and

(f) the need to include reviewers who can judge the effective usefulness to producers and the general public of each application.

REEPort GRANT REPORTING:
All grant reporting must be completed using the Research, Education, and Extension project online reporting tool (REEPort). Initial reporting (item a. below) is to be submitted through the REEPort system. Annual progress and final reporting (items b. and c. below) also is to be done through the REEPort system. Information on REEPort can be found on NIFAs web site at https://nifa.usda.gov/tool/reeport and the REEPort software can be found at http://portal.nifa.usda.gov.

a. Initial Documentation in the REEPort Database--

3) Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

c. Final Technical Report

The Final Technical Report is required within 90 calendar days after the expiration or termination of the award. The Final Technical Report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments made only during the final reporting segment of the project. In addition to supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:
Identify equipment purchased with any Federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

FINANCIAL REPORTING:

10.220 HIGHER EDUCATION - MULTICULTURAL SCHOLARS GRANT PROGRAM
Institution Challenge, Multicultural Scholars & Graduate Fellowships Grant Program (Multicultural Scholars)

Formerly: Minority Scholars Program
FEDERAL AGENCY:
National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:
Legislative authority for this program is contained in section 1417 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (NARETPA) (99 Stat. 1548; 7 U.S.C. 3152). USDA/NIFA administers this federal assistance grant program to support higher education in food and agricultural sciences.

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:
Baccalaureate and Doctor of Veterinary Medicine (D.V.M.) degree training of the next generation of scientists, policy makers, and educators in the Food and Agricultural Sciences. USDA initiated the Higher Education Multicultural Scholars Program in FY 1994. This program, functioning collaboratively with eligible higher education institutions, is developing intellectual capital to secure the preeminence of U.S. food and agricultural systems, 7 U.S.C. 3152.

OBJECTIVES:
To increase the ethnic and cultural diversity of the food and agricultural scientific and professional workforce, and to advance the educational achievement of minority Americans, by providing grants to colleges and universities that have a demonstrable capacity to attract, educate, and graduate minority students for careers as agriscience and agribusiness professionals, and have unique capabilities for achieving the objective of full representation of minority groups in the fields of agriculture, natural resources, forestry, veterinary medicine, home economics, and disciplines closely allied to the food and agricultural system.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:
Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:
Competitive annual grants to selected U.S. institutions of higher education provide for a limited number of four-year undergraduate scholarships to support minority students pursuing baccalaureate degrees in the food and agricultural sciences. Institutions also receive an annual cost-of-education allowance for each scholar supported by a grant. The scholars are selected by the institutions and students must apply for the scholarships through procedures established by the individual institutions.

No scholarship grants are made directly to students and students cannot apply directly to USDA for scholarships. Scholarship monies may be used for tuition, fees, room, board, and other educational expenses as announced in a Federal Register notice inviting applications for new awards.

The institutional cost-of-education allowance may be used by the selected institutions to defray program expenses including, but not limited to, travel and publications costs incurred for student recruitment, and salaries of project personnel. Indirect cost is not allowable. Pursuant to 7 U.S.C. 3152(b), no indirect costs may be recovered under the MSP Program. Funds are restricted to the clearly designated uses found within the RFA.

For Award Category No. 2 Proposals, the budget sharing criteria are: (i) no single institution may receive more than forty percent (40%) and (ii) any institution may receive less than fifteen percent (15%) of the requested funding for the baccalaureate and/or D.V.M. degree level training project (see Part II, C of the RFA).

When grant is for SEL that will be used by To-Be-Recruited Scholars: The SEL funds for To-Be-Recruited Scholars will be withheld until the Project Director has submitted, to the MSP Grants Program Office, all of the required documentation for eligibility of the MSP/SEL Scholar(s) for the SEL as well as the required specifics outlined in the RFA for the SEL. The information must be submitted for approval, no less than 90 days prior to the use of the SEL funds (see Part IV, B, 3, b, Section 1 of the RFA). Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:
Proposals may be submitted by all U.S. colleges and universities with baccalaureate or higher degree programs in agriculture, natural resources, forestry, veterinary medicine, home economics, and disciplines closely allied to the food and agricultural system, including land-grant colleges and universities, colleges and universities having significant minority enrollments and a demonstrable capacity to carry out the teaching of food and agricultural sciences, and other colleges and universities having a demonstrable capacity to carry out the teaching of food and agricultural sciences.

Beneficiary Eligibility:
Funds awarded under this program are used to support full-time undergraduate students pursuing a baccalaureate degree in an area of the food and agricultural sciences or a closely allied field. Persons eligible to receive scholarships under this program are students who either are enrolled or have been accepted as full-time baccalaureate or DVM degree candidates, and who are members of groups traditionally under-represented in food and agricultural scientific and professional fields.

Credentials/Documentation:
The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:
(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;
(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and
(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0124-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

10.221 TRIBAL COLLEGES EDUCATION EQUITY GRANTS

Higher Education Native American Formula and/or Higher Education Native American Institutions

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

Authority for the Tribal Colleges Education Equity Grants (TCEG) program is contained in the Equity in Educational Land-Grant Status Act of 1994 (7 U.S.C. 301 note) as amended by the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (7 U.S.C. 7801 note). Appropriated funds are to be awarded to the 1994 Land-Grant Institutions (hereinafter referred to as 1994 Institutions) for Education capacity building and funds are to be distributed equally among institutions that meet eligibility requirements. 7 U.S.C 301 note.

OBJECTIVES:

This grants program is designed to promote and strengthen higher education instruction in the food and agricultural sciences at the 34 Tribal Colleges designated as 1994 Land-Grant Institutions in the Equity in Educational Land-Grant Status Act of 1994, as amended. Plans of Work should focus on undergraduate and/or graduate studies in the food and agricultural sciences in one or more of the following areas: Curricula Design and Materials Development, Faculty Development and Preparation for Teaching, Instruction Delivery Systems, Student Experiential Learning, Equipment and Instrumentation for Teaching, or Student Recruitment and Retention.

The purpose of the TCEG Program is to provide funding to enhance educational opportunities for Native Americans in the food and agricultural sciences. The TCEG program is intended to strengthen institutional capacity to deliver relevant formal education opportunities. The TCEG is intended to be a component of the applicant 1994 institutions land grant roadmap or strategic planning process. To the extent practicable, priorities should reflect the following national critical needs areas:

1. Sustainable energy
2. Global food security and hunger
3. Climate change
4. Nutrition and preventing childhood obesity
5. Food safety
6. Sustainable rural economies

Awards are made upon approval of each institutions application for a grant that relate to an institutions long-range goals. As indicated in Part 1, C. of the RFA, an application may address one (1) or more of the following program areas:

- Curricula Design and Materials Development
- Faculty Development and Preparation for Teaching
- Instruction Delivery Systems
- Student Experiential Learning
- Equipment and Instrumentation for Teaching
- Student Recruitment and Retention

Recognizing that strengthening instructional programs is a long-term ongoing process, the TCEG program is interested in funding subsequent phases of previously funded projects in order to strengthen institutional capacity, and institutions are encouraged to build on a theme over several grant awards to reach institutional long-range goals.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

- Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

The Tribal College Equity Program (TCEG) provides funds to enhance educational opportunities for Native Americans by strengthening instructional programs in the food and agricultural sciences at the thirty-four (34) tribal colleges designated as the 1994 Land-Grant Institutions (hereinafter referred to as 1994 Institutions).

Under this authority, appropriated funds are to be awarded to the 1994 Land-Grant Institutions (hereinafter referred to as 1994 Institutions) for Education capacity building and funds are to be distributed equally among institutions that meet eligibility requirements. Funding Restrictions:

Section 720 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012 (Pub.L. No. 112-55) limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

Indirect costs for the Equity program are not required and a 1994 institution may take less than the allowable amount or forego indirect costs altogether - adjust budgets accordingly.

Neither research nor extension projects are supported under the TCEG Program.

The use of grant funds to plan, acquire, or construct a building or facility is not allowed under this program. With prior approval, and in accordance with the cost principles set forth in OMB Circular No. A-21, some grant funds may be used for minor alterations, renovations, or repairs deemed necessary to retrofit existing teaching or research spaces in order to carry out a funded project. However, requests to use grant funds for such purposes must demonstrate that the alterations, renovations, or repairs are essential to achieving the major purpose of the project.

Grant funds may not be used for endowment investing.

Special Notices:

1. NIFA will withhold all funds for a TCEG award to an applicant requesting indirect costs if the applicant has not negotiated an indirect cost rate with its cognizant federal agency.

2. If a grantee is in the process of negotiating an indirect cost rate with its federal agency, NIFA will withhold all funds from that grantee until the indirect cost rate has been established.

3. If an institutions indirect cost rate has expired or will expire in the near future, a clear statement on renegotiation efforts must be included in the application. (See Part IV, B.5. of the RFA - Budget Justification.)

4. It is incumbent on all applicants to have a current indirect cost rate or begin negotiations to establish an indirect cost rate prior to the TCEG submission deadline. Because it may take several months to obtain an indirect cost rate, applicants needing an indirect cost rate are encouraged to start work on establishing these rates well in advance of submitting a TCEG application.

5. In lieu of requesting indirect costs (if the applicant does not have a negotiated rate), an applicant may prepare a budget in which all charges in the budget are included as direct costs.

NIFA does not require matching support for this program. Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:

Obligations:
(Formula Grants (Apportionments)) FY 16 $4,517,676; FY 17 est $4,629,955; and FY 18 est $4,473,600. - The difference between the appropriation and obligation numbers reflects legislative authorized set-asides deducted as appropriate, and in some cases the availability of obligatory authority from prior years.

NOTES:

Range and Average of Financial Assistance:
The Endowment Interest distribution increases each year in proportion to the Endowment Corpus and the interest earnings for each year; as well as the number of American Indians enrolled at each institution. Three Institutions received amounts over $200,000; 11 Institutions received amounts over $100,000 and 18 Institutions received amounts under $99,000.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:
Fiscal Year 2016: In Fiscal Year (FY) 2016, a total of $8,840,842 was available to support projects. A total of 90 proposals were submitted for consideration for funding for this year, the nineteenth year of the program. Institutions submitting proposals were from the following states: Arizona, California, Florida, Illinois, New Mexico, New York, Texas, Washington, and Puerto Rico. In a two day panel, May 25-26, 2016 the grant applications were evaluated by a peer review panel comprised of faculty members from land-grant and non-land-grant universities, members from private industry, and representatives of the Federal government. Panelists represented various academic areas including business, agriculture, natural resources, forestry, veterinary medicine, family and consumer sciences, and closely allied disciplines. Based on the peer review deliberations, funds were available to support 28 grants. Each project has planned some form of collaboration and coordination efforts with a local USDA office. Fiscal Year 2017: In Fiscal Year (FY) 2017 the Hispanic-Serving Institutions (HSI) program has $8,818,240 available to support grants. After tax deductions and panel costs, $8,815,888.64 is available to States.

The Program received 80 proposals on this years competition. The HSI Panel was held on April 5-6, 2017 to review 63 proposals, since 17 of the 80 were continuation proposals that do not required to be peer-reviewed. Twenty panelists with expertise in education, natural resources, biotechnology, general agriculture, food and nutrition sciences, horticulture and animal sciences reviewed the proposals. A total of 29 proposals were recommended for funding, including seventeen continuation grants. The remaining 51 proposals were declined.

A total of 63 applications were submitted in this years competition. A total of 12 projects are being recommended for funding.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: Experiential Training in Use of Unmanned Aerial Systems (UAS) Technology For Agriculture Applications Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi

The primary purpose of this four-year interdisciplinary multi-HSI project is to increase the number of south Texas students graduating from 2-yr Associate-granting institutions (DMC, TSTC) transitioning to 4-yr Bachelor of Science and Masters degrees (TAMUCC, TAMUK, UTRGV) in fields related to the agricultural, plant and biological sciences. Faculty and staff at partner institutions will provide undergraduate and graduate training and education in the use of Unmanned Aerial Systems (UAS) technology for precision farming in agriculture. Targeted coursework will be created to include two (2) permanent on-line introductory courses in UAV technology and ethics and one (1) blended (on-line/hands-on) course in UAS applications. Training will include internships and assistance in research projects aligned with UAS as a tool for crop/soil management, plant and natural resource sciences. Products will produce 28 Bachelor of Science and 11 Masters of Science graduates working in food, agriculture, and natural resources related fields. This project will also affect 48 students from two-year academic institutions. Educational needs areas addressed by this project include: (1) curricula design in terms of development of new courses of study and (5) student experiential learning.

Texas State University will complete the EverGreens goal is to increase the number of Hispanic students with advanced technical degrees at the food-water-energy intersection. To meet this goal, we will train a diverse future workforce with the leadership and cross-disciplinary skills in science, technology and innovation to solve today’s complex agricultural problems specifically those due to a changing climate, widespread food insecurity, and the lack of available water. Hispanic students will be recruited from Palo Alto College and San Antonio College to seamlessly transition into and complete degrees at Texas State University. Forty-four Hispanic students will receive personalized support through mentorships, tutoring, and professional development, as well as financial assistance through scholarships and paid internships. Through the collective attainment of 16 associate, 16 bachelor, and 12 Master of Science degrees, students will be prepared to enter positions in well-paid, technical jobs in agricultural-related fields. Fiscal Year 2017: San Diego State University aims to provide solutions to food security through interdisciplinary collaborations and development of a career pipeline in the fields of food and agriculture. We will build lecture and laboratory curricula around a traditional Milpa (multispecies interplanting farm) while simultaneously introducing modern urban agriculture and scientific instrumentation. Students will work alongside indigenous farmers in Oaxaca, document and preserve traditional farming techniques. The hands-on experiences will enhance academic excellence while providing marketable skills that address the food security challenge. The recognition of scientific and cultural importance of Milpa will attract underrepresented and Latino students and incentivize their career choice in agriculture.

Texas A M- Kingsville will conduct the LEADERS 2 the Doctorate project that focuses on increasing underrepresented student success by becoming well-rounded leaders prepared to address needs related to animal health, production, and well-being. The purpose of this project is to increase the number of Hispanic leaders in animal science by developing experiential learning activities that increase retention/graduation rates, enhance scientific skills, and develop professionalism of an audience of underrepresented B.S. (n=20), M.S. (n=8), and Ph.D. (n=2) students. The LEADERS 2 program will produce experienced underrepresented graduates who are qualified to obtain advanced degrees, enter the workforce as leaders in their field, and provide the human capital necessary to enhance the nations food supply. Program objectives will be met with our unique university exchange program, summer research internships, student research opportunities, leadership/soft skill development, conference participation, language development/teambuilding workshops, and collaborative, partnerships between HSI animal science programs and faculty from Ph.D. granting institutions.

The Lee College District will conduct the Get Responsible and Own Work (GROW) project will impact the horticulture program for 200 inmate students that are part of a certificate and associate degree program in Texas. Its goals are:

(1) Practice in applying communication, problem-solving, self-management, and teamwork soft skills;
(2) Practice in applying financial management principles to personal and business finances;
(3) Increased degree completion rate for horticulture students;
(4) Increased number of students articulate into related bachelors degree program; and
(5) Majority of released completers in related employment after release. Fiscal Year 2018: Fiscal Year (FY) 2018, funds will support 13 Continuation and 11 REGULAR awards.

10.572 WIC Farmers’ Market Nutrition Program (FMNP)

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:
Fiscal Year 2016: The MPS Farm Project and The Farm at Nellie Stone The MPS Farm Project is a model for engaging students, teachers and the community in growing food and building healthy food skills. Youth Farm, along with our key partners Minneapolis Public Schools Culinary & Nutrition Services (MPS) and Nellie Stone Johnson Community School (NSJ) are partnering to focus on four (4) goals:
(1) Increase understanding of food production and nutrition among youth and teachers through agricultural education, classroom lessons and school meals;
(2) Increase community understanding of food production, purchasing and preparation through nutrition education and engagement in the farm project to support community health and self-reliance;
(3) Increase access to diverse, healthy food options in order to support healthy Minneapolis communities; and
(4) Create a scalable and replicable partnership model for supporting school communities in food, nutrition, youth development and agricultural education.

The MPS Farm Project and The Farm at Nellie Stone will be developed over the course of five (5) years, engaging students and teachers at NSJ, teachers and school garden coordinators throughout the MPS district, Youth Farm, youth, and community members from Hawthorne and surrounding neighborhoods. These partners will collaboratively build a 23-acre farm and outdoor education space, including a greenhouse and hoop house, creating food access and developing a model for partner schools that connects the farm, the cafeteria, and the classroom through experiential education that aligns with MPS standards and Youth Farms youth development model.

Integrating Workforce Training For Foster Youth With A Community Food Web: Culinary Arts, Agriculture, and Nutrition (I-Can)

The proposed project is designed to develop and maintain a network of services to assist young adults recently emancipated from the foster care system, and brings together the resources of a large comprehensive university, an arboretum, a non-profit social enterprise, and a NIFA-funded community-based education and research project. The goals of the program are to:
(1) increase knowledge and skills of sustainable urban agriculture;
(2) increase knowledge and practice of Dietary Guidelines for Americans in coordination with increasing culinary skills;
(3) to develop business and entrepreneurial skills through the creation, testing, and sale of value-added products based on fruits and vegetables from the arboretum; and
(4) to embed community-based research into the evaluation of the program.

Healthy Here: Bernalillo County Community Food Projects And Mobile Food Market

Presbyterian Healthcare Services will serve as the backbone agency for a collective impact partnership to address food insecurity and health disparities in Bernalillo County, New Mexico. Organization partners include Agri-Cultura Network, Adelaide, Kids Cook!; Street Food Institute, and First Choice Community Healthcare. Partners along with a community-based Governance Committee will plan and carry out a four-year project incorporating a Mobile Food Market that sells locally grown produce and integrates outreach and education about cooking, nutrition, and gardening. Target beneficiaries are low-income residents of the South Valley and the International District.

Residents here face challenges affording healthy produce and may not have ready transportation to reach the limited number of supermarkets and other retailers selling produce. The Mobile Food Market will stop at points of community intersection such as schools, clinics, and senior centers. Programming also includes public workshops about gardening and food and a train-the-trainer model to produce Community Food Leaders. The project will also employ area residents as trained Community Food Educators. Project goals include increasing access to nutritious food among low-income residents; developing local leadership and food security; supporting local farming of high-value crops and agricultural economic development; improving healthy eating and reducing area health disparities; and strengthening linkages between agricultural, entrepreneurial, health, and human service sectors to create a vibrant local food economy.

Rebuilding Local Food Systems in Farmworker Communities Project
The Farmworker Association of Florida, a community-based organization, proposes to expand its Rebuilding Local Food Systems (RLFS) in Farmworker Communities project, whose goal is twofold: to increase small-scale food production in farmworker communities; to increase low-income community members access to and consumption of affordable, organic foods; and to raise low income community members awareness about the importance of producing and consuming fresh fruits and vegetables that are locally grown using methods that conserve natural resources. Toward this goal, the RLFS project has three (3) distinct objectives:
(1) to establish/improve community gardens in four (4) farmerworker communities to serve as small-scale agriculture demonstration sites to exemplify potential farm economic development opportunities;
(2) to develop/implement a food and farm entrepreneur program to provide education and technical assistance to community members on becoming small farmers by establishing backyard farm operations or forming agricultural cooperatives; and
(3) to provide sustainable agriculture, nutrition, and healthy living education to farm worker families and other low-income persons in the target communities.

The primary beneficiaries and engaged populations of the RLFS project are minority, low-income residents of the agricultural areas of South Apopka, Fellsmere, Pierson, and Homestead/Florida City. The Rebuilding Local Food Systems project aligns well with the following Community Food Projects Competitive Grants Program (CFCGP) objectives and/or priorities: meet the food needs of low-income individuals; increase the self-reliance of communities in providing for the food needs of the communities; and promote comprehensive responses to local food access, farm, and nutrition issues. Fiscal Year 2017: Buffalo Community Food Hub Project will engage low-income community members, creating a neighborhood food hub, supporting market gardens, a Mobile market, job training and greater healthy food access. The Massachusetts Avenue Project (MAP) and Grassroots Gardens of Western NY (GGWNY) will partner to implement the Buffalo Community Food Hub Project (BCFHP). Building leadership among low-income youth, American and community gardeners in Buffalo, NY, the project will increase food self-reliance of Buffalo residents, promote comprehensive responses to local food and nutrition issues and meet the food needs of low-income people. A new Farmhouse and Community Food Training Center will be established at MAP’s urban farm on Buffalo’s West Side that will serve as a neighborhood food hub and support the creation of market gardens and new market opportunities for local growers, food-based employment and training for disadvantaged youth, greater food access thru Mobile Market expansion, food preparation and presentation education and community organizing to support school and municipal policy in support of local procurement and greater food equity.

Da Bus Mobile Market and Food Pantry
Da Bus Mobile Market and Food Pantry Project is a three (3) year initiative of The Kohala Center and Hawaii Island Food Alliance to address food insecurity and health disparities on Hawaii Island. The project goals are to improve access to affordable healthy food among low-income residents; build target area community involvement in addressing food security; support local agricultural development; improve healthy eating and reduce health disparities in chronic diseases; and strengthen linkages between agricultural, entrepreneurial, health, and human service sectors to create a secure local food economy. To achieve these goals the project will provide for a Mobile Market which will distribute locally-grown produce, staple food items, seeds, and garden starts to low-income residents on Hawaii Island; integrate outreach education on cooking, nutrition, and gardening; provide Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) Outreach materials and services; and serve as an emergency food pantry. The Mobile Market will stop at designated community gathering sites in low-income/low-access rural areas including senior centers, low-income housing complexes, and County Park and Recreation centers. Project partners include non-profits, health institutions, university agricultural extension agents and nutritionists, farmers, and local growers. The project is in alignment with CFCGP goals by directly addressing the needs of low-income individuals with limited access to healthy food through a long-term solution to food distribution; increasing community self-reliance and encouraging healthy lifestyle development through gardening and cooking classes; and increasing the economic viability of the local food economy by supporting local farmers and growers.

Farms to Food Banks Capacity-Building Project
The Farms To Food Banks Capacity Building Project will reduce food insecurity in Kentucky and strengthen the linkages between key sectors of Kentucky’s food system, including farmers, nonprofit food distributors and low-income consumers. Outcomes include increasing the amount of fresh produce distributed to low income Kentuckians by 9 million, increasing by 20% the number of food bank patrons that are aware of the benefits of healthy eating and possessing the skill necessary to prepare fruits and vegetables; and increasing by 200 the number of Kentucky farmers benefitting from a new market for Number 2-grade and surplus produce and an average increase in cash flow of $2,500.00. The goals and outcomes will be received by providing equipment, such as walk-in coolers and air filtration systems, necessary for safe distribution of fresh produce by food banks and food pantries, by paying farmers to help cover their costs of picking, packing and delivering fresh produce to food banks, and by providing nutrition education services to low-income patrons of food banks and food pantries. Low-income individuals were involved in program planning and will be actively engaged in program implementation by serving as paid evaluation assistants. The self-reliance of Kentucky communities will be increased by supporting Kentucky farmers working to diversify their production from tobacco to fruits and vegetables. Ultimately, the project will help Kentucky do a better job feeding itself.

Community to Gardens and Back Again: Feeding Laramie Valley’s community-engaged and driven project to increase sustainable, equitable access to fresh, healthy food in Albany County, Wyoming
Community to Gardens and Back Again: Feeding Laramie Valley’s community-engaged and driven project to increase sustainable, equitable access to fresh, healthy food in Albany County, Wyoming. Feeding Laramie Valley (FLV) is a nonprofit organization located in the high elevation, rural community of Albany County, Wyoming. Headquartered in Laramie since its inception in 2009, FLV leads and facilitates collaborative community projects for sustainable food security, collecting and producing fresh fruits and vegetables for distribution to local residents who do not have sufficient access to enough fresh food to live a healthy life, in an effort to address the fact that Albany County has the highest food insecurity rate in Wyoming. The goals of a Community Food Project for Feeding Laramie Valley, are designed to create a sustainable, long term approach to addressing food security in Albany County, Wyoming: to open avenues for greater community voice and power in the local food system; to increase the availability of fresh, locally-produced, healthy, affordable food; reduce the high incidence of food insecurity in communities touched by FLV projects; increase awareness and understanding of the connection between fresh produce and improved health; and to forge stronger community ties and networking among gardeners, farmers, entrepreneurs, volunteers, food system. Plans to accomplish these goals include expansion of community and backyard.

Richmond Healthy Corner Store Initiative Expansion Project (RCHD)
In the first year of the proposed Healthy Corner Stores Sustainability Project, RCHD and its partner, Shalom Farms, a nonprofit which is currently the sole distributor of produce to Healthy Corner Stores, will introduce new approaches for produce aggregation, storage, and distribution with a small subset of stores in order to determine the best long-term market-driven “free market”-based model for corner stores in Richmond. In the remaining two (2) project years, RCHD and Shalom will onboard and/or transition all Healthy Corner Stores to the new model, creating a streamlined system by which produce from regional farmers is aggregated, stored, and distributed to corner stores through well-established retailers and intermediaries, primarily Rody’s Exotic Mushrooms and Produce. By 2020, the proposed project will transform corner store-based food access work in Richmond from a public health intervention reliant on grant funding for operation to a financially lucrative partnership between vendors and store owners which will sustain mutual investment, spur additional store owners and vendors to participate in future years, and ensure access to a variety of fresh, local produce in Richmond’s communities of greatest need. Fiscal Year 2018: Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

L. 112-55), the awardee may request 15 percent of the indirect costs on both the Federal portion of the award and as a matching contribution.

Or, the awardee may request any similar percentage that, when combined, does not exceed the maximum indirect cost rate of 30 percent. Fully discretionary.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:
Fiscal Year 2016: Cultivating an Edible Education
Project incorporates both technical knowledge in the FANH sciences throughout core courses in biology, chemistry, physics, environmental science and history, and soft skills by employing project-based learning, dedicated instructional units, community engagement, field trips and summer programs to reach disadvantaged students from Rochester public schools.

Engaging secondary students in agricultural science career paths through integration of controlled environment food production education

The purpose of this project is to develop and deliver an innovative agriculture science curriculum and equip educators in its use to promote student proficiency in high school and increase enrollment in agriculture and food production tracks in post-secondary schools as well as later careers. This project will center on the use of controlled environment for soilless vegetable growing systems as a tool to enhance 9th through 12th grade chemistry, biology, and agriculture science education.

Building Capacity for School Based Agricultural Education in the Food Insecure Region of Michigans Upper Peninsula
Michigan State University Upper Peninsula Research and Extension Center (UPREC) in partnership with the U.P. Food Exchange (UPFE) and the Growing

Fiscal Year 2017: Enhancing the future poultry workforce through STEM-based industry exposure and engagement. This three-year project will support a total of 405 students and faculty through a curriculum that combines STEM knowledge with career development using the poultry industry as its focal point.

Collaborative Learning between Higher Education and High School Students Dually-Enrolled in Online Nutrition

This two-year project will support partnerships and networking among academic institutions. It will advance agricultural education by fostering partnerships between high schools and colleges in the area of nutrition. The grant will strengthen content and delivery of a high school nutrition course and allow junior and senior high school students to take a dual enrollment in a college level nutrition course for credit.

Connecting Land-Grant University Research Centers to Secondary Agricultural Education Students in Idaho, Kansas, and Oklahoma

This three-year project will support 7,290 faculty and students through a curriculum development initiative involving a partnership of three Land Grant Institutions: University of Idaho, Kansas State University and Oklahoma State University. The project will create opportunities for high school students to have hands-on research experiences in agri-science at university research centers. To ensure the students get the most out of their research experience the project will provide mentoring to high school agricultural teachers and participating university researchers so they can optimize their ability to teach and develop students' talents. Fiscal Year 2018: This program is subject to congressional budget approval for FY 2018. At this time, the projected funding level is Zero (0). EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:
Fiscal Year 2016: Turtle Mountain Community College, Anishinabe Campus Student Research Experience: Using Biological Indicators as Measures for Water Quality

Turtle Mountain Community College students will use biological indicators to measure water quality in Belcourt Lake. This project builds on previous student research projects, which also used macroinvertebrates to evaluate water quality in Os Creek, a waterway fed by the spill way of Belcourt Lake. The project director expects six (6) students to have an intensive training in research and leadership skills.

An Undergraduate Research Experience to Develop Improved Forest Carbon and Biomass Models for the Salish-Kootenai & Nez Peru Inventory Programs

The project supports sustainable silviculture of indigenous forests and bioenergy production. It will also train students through hands-on experiences... in forestry research. The collaborators are the University of Montana’s College of Forestry and Conservation, a McIntire-Stennis institution. Tribal partners are the forestry departments of the Nez Perce, Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes.

Conservation Bison Herd Health and Well-Being

This research will evaluate the effect of diet, parasites and disease on the reproductive fitness of Fort Peck Tribes bison herds. The Fort Peck Tribes Yellowstone conservation herd had a calving rate of 100.1 percent in 2015. However, in the same year, the tribes commercial herds calving rate was only 75 percent. This study whether herd health is the deciding factor in the calving rates. The project director reports that the Fort Peck Tribes conservation herd offers a rare opportunity to conduct this evidence-based research, as its genetics are devoid of cattle DNA introgression. The work will be conducted with direct involvement of three (3) Fort Peck Community College students supervised by faculty from that institution.

Plant Phenology as an Indicator of Forest Community Resilience and Adaptive Capacity

This research will evaluate how climate changes affects how plants emerge, flower, produce seed and go dormant. Observing changes in plant life cycles and their reproductive fitness could provide strong indicators of changing climate conditions and assist natural resource managers in responding to change. In particular, this project will identify which plant species can provide early warning indicators of climate change in Northeastern Wisconsin.

New Discovery: Atmospheric Mercury Loading In The St. Louis River Watershed And Potential Correlation With Dragonfly Bioaccumulation

The project director will guide students as they measure the mercury deposition in the St. Louis River watershed. Students will test for correlation between dry deposition and bioaccumulation of mercury in dragonfly larvae. The data will help tribal natural resource managers and health officials to protect those who rely on the watersheds fish and plant life food. This study, which builds on previous student research, is also timely in that recent studies find that one (1) in ten (10) infants on the North Shore of Lake Superior have unsafe levels of mercury in their blood. Fiscal Year 2017: Building A Community-Based Research Plan At Tohono O’odham Community College

This two-year, Pathways to Research proposal will support a partnership with University of Arizona and meetings to develop an Indigenous Research program at the college. Project directors will reach out to students and the greater community to learn about what they would support in a new research program that is adapted to the needs of the Tohono O’odham Reservation.

IAIA Student Agricultural Research Project Phase II

This two-year Student Research project builds on a previous program to provide arts students with an opportunity to study science. Working with New Mexico State University, IAIA will train students in agriculture research methods applicable to farms along the Rio Grande and Pecos River corridors. This will enhance science literacy among all participants and may engage a few students in a new academic career.

Implementing Interdisciplinary Experiential Learning at a Tribal College

This two-year Capacity project will focus on building new collaborations with North Dakota State University. The project will investigate the potential of equine assisted learning as a means to address the community concerns about loss of culture and low academic achievement among reservation youth.

Effectiveness of sub-irrigation in the Milk River floodplain, Montana

This two-year, New Discovery project will investigate whether a sub-irrigation system can address the agricultural needs of in semi-arid regions of northern. Montana. The Aaniiih Nakoda College community garden will serve as a demonstration plot for this new tool to manage soil moisture and nutrient management. The project director also hopes to attract more students to the environmental science program with the project. Montana State University-Bozeman will partner with the college on this research.

Strengthening Little Big Horn College Research Capacity through Improving Rural Families’ Access to Safe Drinking Water

This two-year, New Discovery project, a partnership with the University of Wisconsin-Madison, seeks to apply archeology to develop a more sustainable agriculture on the Menominee reservation. The project builds on three (3) tribal research capacity grants and will explore Menominee agricultural practices from 750 to 1650 AD to gain insights on systems that could benefit modern agriculture during times of climate change. Thirty students will benefit from this project, including ten student interns, qualifying it for the enhanced student funding option. Fiscal Year 2018: Data is not yet available. Pertinent data to be provided by Program at a future date.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:
Fiscal Year 2016: For the Fiscal Year (FY) 2016 ANNH award cycle, a total of $3,065,565 was available for awards after deducting legislatively authorized set-asides.

Project types were: Regular ($150,000 - $450,000) and Consortium Grant ($300,000 - $1,500,000) applications.

Each eligible individual institution, independent branch campus, and branch institution of State system may receive, or be a party to, a maximum of two (2) grant awards one (1) Regular Grant and one (1) Consortium Grant. A total of 3 ANNH applications were received:
1. consortium project of nine (9) institutions in Alaska;
2. consortium project of nine (9) institutions in Hawaii; and;
3. regular application from one (1) institution in Hawaii.

As evaluated by a peer review panel, the 3 applications requested a total amount of $3,478,786.68 which exceeded the award balance of $3,056,928 by at least 12%. Hence, the regular application was not funded and referred to the Hawaii consortium project for future potential partnership.

The funding ratio for the ANNH Program in FY 2016 was 67%. Fiscal Year 2017: For the FY 2017 ANNH award cycle, a total of $3,064,215 was available for awards after deducting legislatively authorized set-asides.

Grant types are as follows:
- Regular grants ($150,000 - $450,000)
- Collaborative grants ($300,000 - $1,500,000)

Each eligible individual institution, independent branch campus, and branch institution of State system may receive, or be a party to, a maximum of two (2) grant awards one (1) Regular Grant and one (1) Collaborative Grant. A total of four (4) ANNH applications were received:
1. collaborative grant for a consortium project of nine (9) institutions in Alaska;
2. collaborative grant of consortium project of nine (9) institutions in Hawaii;
3. regular application from one (1) institution in Hawaii; and;
4. regular application from one (1) institution in Alaska.

The peer review panel recommended three (3) of the proposals for funding two (2) collaborative grant applications, one (1) regular grant application. Since the three (3) recommended projects totaled $3,478,215, budget modifications will be made. It is expected that all available funds of $3,065,340 will be awarded in FY 2017.

The anticipated funding ratio for the ANNH Program in FY 2017 is 75%. Fiscal Year 2018: It is projected that $3,058,455 will be available for similar projects in FY 2018. Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:
Fiscal Year 2016: A consortium grant was funded to lead an Agribusiness Incubator Program that provides educational programs. These programs target a variety of degree levels, including Associate of Science, and Bachelors of Science. The program emphasizes Student Experiential Learning, and Student Recruitment, Retention, and Educational Equality, with focus on developing student leadership skills, and building capacity among the states rural agriculture communities, including a large number of traditionally underserved minority populations. Project outcomes include a higher number of graduates in agricultural sciences; and increased productivity and profitability of the states agribusinesses.

A consortium grant was funded to plan for the sustainability of indigenous knowledge and usage paired with Western science programs to strengthen career pathways for the states native and rural students. Subsistence knowledge and usage is a term used to refer to those targeted USDA sciences that assist individuals and communities to better understand and improve food, shelter, transportation and other material aspects of rural/village life. The proposed plan of work continues to build on the accomplishments of earlier funding to deliver coursework and support students in Ethnobotany, Environmental Studies (including sustainable energy), High Latitude Range Management and continued development of new opportunities in tribal natural resource management. Funding will also support the continued development of a coastal resource science program and a continued marine science career pathway program. Through expanding educational opportunities and teaching resources, the institution seeks to create a well-supported, science-based and culturally-relevant learning pathway for underserved students from regional high schools into the institutions Sustainable Community Food Systems (SCFS) degree, while providing research, professional experience and leadership skills for their careers in food and agriculture. Goals of the project include: enhancing educational equity and leadership skills for underrepresented students in food system careers; strengthen educational capacities at the institution in the agri-food sciences to respond to state, regional and national needs; increased student enrollment and retention; support undergraduate students from underrepresented groups by partnering with K-12 institutions and providing financial support for students throughout college, and facilitate coalition building between other academic institutions in the state and private and non-profit organizations to improve the teaching of agri-food sciences. Fiscal Year 2018: Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

ERS research on climate change found the following:

- Climate change is likely to increase the use of genetic resources for adaptation to heat and drought stress.

ERS research on global agriculture markets found the following:

- USDA Agricultural Projections to 2024 suggest long run increases in global consumption, world trade, and agricultural commodity prices.
- The joint effects of sanitary and phytosanitary measures and tariff rate quotas maintained by the European Union (EU) significantly impede U.S. meat exports.
- Easing trade and travel restrictions could stimulate increased levels and a wider variety of U.S. agricultural exports to Cuba.

- China’s accumulation of large cotton stockpiles to support prices for its domestic producers from 2011-2013 has introduced a new degree of uncertainty into world cotton markets. Fiscal Year 2017: ERS research explores how investments in rural people, business, and communities affect the capacity of rural economies to prosper in the new and changing global marketplace. The agency analyzes how demographic trends, employment opportunities, Federal policies, and public investment in infrastructure and technology enhance economic opportunity and quality of life for rural Americans. ERS research on global agricultural markets found the following:

- USDA Agricultural Projections to 2024 suggest long run increases in global consumption, world trade, and agricultural commodity prices.
- The joint effects of sanitary and phytosanitary measures and tariff rate quotas maintained by the European Union (EU) significantly impede U.S. meat exports.
- Easing trade and travel restrictions could stimulate increased levels and a wider variety of U.S. agricultural exports to Cuba.

The ERS climate change research program develops models and other analytical techniques to predict responses of farmers to greenhouse gas mitigation options, analyze the impact of mitigation options on domestic and global agricultural markets and land and water use, and evaluate adaptation by farmers to a new climate regime through use of alternative technologies. The ERS climate change research program builds on extensive expertise on the economics of land use and land management, technology adoption, conservation program design, economics of biofuels, and value and dissemination of public investment in research and development.

In addition, ERS is continuing to contribute to USDA’s efforts to improve the science behind Federal environmental, water and air quality regulations and programs. As part of its analysis of environmental regulations and conservation incentive policies, ERS research continues to provide insight into developing policies for controlling nonpoint source pollution. More generally, ERS research analyzes the economic efficiency, environmental effectiveness, and distributional implications of alternative designs of resource, conservation, environmental, and commodity programs and their linkages. ERS conducts research on technological innovation in agriculture, the economic performance, structure and viability of the farm sector and of different types of farms, and the state of global food security. ERS effectively communicates research findings to policy makers, program managers, and those shaping the public debate. The research program identifies key economic issues and uses sound analytical techniques to understand the immediate and broader economic and social consequences of alternative policies and programs related to the sustainability and use of biotechnology in U.S. agriculture, including policies to promote trade of U.S. products.

ERS has a broad program of work examining the production and marketing characteristics of the U.S. organic sector. Ongoing activities include research on the adoption of certified organic farming systems across the U.S., analysis of consumer demand and prices in specific markets, and surveys of organic producers and markets.

The ERS research program includes an ongoing assessment of global food security. ERS provides research, analysis, and information on food security, including factors affecting food production and ability to import food, in Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Caribbean, and the Commonwealth of Independent States to decision makers in the United States and throughout the world. ERS is also investigating conceptual and measurement challenges inherent in assessments of undernourishment at the country, household, and individual level with experts in academia and international organizations. An annual report provides ERS up-to-date assessment of global food security. Fiscal Year 2018: ERS conducts research that strengthens our understanding of American farms, the agricultural sector, and rural communities. This includes analysis of commodity markets, the competitiveness of U.S. farms at home and abroad, and the general health of the rural economy. ERS research and analysis provides insights into market conditions facing U.S. agriculture, potential avenues for innovation and market expansion, and the effects of farm policies. The agency conducts research on the effects of new agricultural technologies and practices on farm business and farm sector performance as well as their implications for the changing size and organization of U.S. farms. ERS produces USDA’s estimates of farm business and farm household income and identifies and analyzes market structure and technological developments that affect farm efficiency and profitability. ERS research and analysis provides insights into how the agricultural sector is evolving in both the short and long term. Analysis of the major factors driving the near and long-term outlook for agricultural commodity markets plays a central role in supporting USDA’s monthly flagship report, World Agriculture Supply and Demand Estimates (WASDE). This report serves as the benchmark for information on major global commodities, and also supports the annual USDA baseline, ten-year agricultural projections that go into the Presidents budget baseline.

ERS research explores how investments in rural businesses, communities, and people affect the capacity of rural economies to prosper in a changing global marketplace. The agency analyzes how employment opportunities, Federal policies, demographic trends, and public investment in infrastructure and technology enhance economic opportunity and quality of life for rural Americans.

The ERS natural resources and environmental economics research program improves understanding of the economic relationships behind Federal environmental, water and air quality regulations and programs. As part of its analysis of environmental regulations and conservation incentive policies, ERS provides insight into developing policies for controlling nonpoint source pollution. More generally, ERS research analyzes the economic efficiency, environmental effectiveness, and distributional implications of alternative designs of resource, conservation, environmental, and commodity programs and their linkages. ERS develops models and other analytical techniques to estimate the impacts of alternative approaches used by farmers to adapt to changing weather conditions and resource constraints as the demand for agricultural production grows. The models predict responses of farmers to USDA programs including voluntary incentives for drought mitigation, and improved soil health and nutrient management. A related area of research addresses the implications of regional drought for U.S. agriculture, including producers production and investment decisions, and their participation in conservation and other risk-mitigating programs. ERS research on farmer responses the implications for markets and natural resources builds on expertise in the economics of land use and land management, technology adoption, conservation program design, economics of biofuels, and value and dissemination of public investment in research and development.

ERS conducts research on the economic performance and competitiveness of the U.S. agriculture in international markets. U.S. producers rely on export markets to sell agricultural and food products, to sustain and grow revenues, and to contribute to employment, particularly in rural communities. This research program examines emerging patterns of agricultural trade and the associated economic drivers including income and population growth, and domestic and trade policies, and provides information on the principal underlying factors affecting U.S. and global agricultural trade.

ERS conducts research on the state of global food security, including factors affecting food production and the ability to import food, in Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Caribbean, and the Commonwealth of Independent States. By investigating conceptual and measurement challenges inherent in assessments of undernourishment at the country, household, and individual level, ERS informs decision makers in the United States and throughout the world with its annual assessment of global food security.

- Agricultural Productivity. Fiscal Year 2017: ERS research explores how investments in rural people, business, and communities affect the capacity of rural economies to prosper in the new and changing global marketplace. The agency analyzes how demographic trends, employment opportunities, Federal policies, and public investment in infrastructure and technology enhance economic opportunity and quality of life for rural Americans. Equally important is ERS commitment to help enhance the quality of life for the Nations small farmers who increasingly depend on these rural economies for employment and economic support, as well as to analyze new developments in the linkages between these farmers, consumers, and local economies.
- ERS continues to monitor changing economic and demographic trends in rural America, particularly the implications of these changes for the employment, education, income, and housing patterns of low-income rural populations. The rural development process is complex and sensitive to a wide range of factors that, to a large extent, are unique to each rural community. Nonetheless, ERS assesses general approaches to development to determine when, where, and under what circumstances rural development strategies will be most successful.
- ERS research and analysis provide insight into market conditions facing U.S. agriculture, avenues for innovation, and market expansion to help farmers and ranchers manage risk. ERS produces USDA’s estimates of farm income. In addition, the ERS program identifies and analyzes market structure and technological developments that affect efficiency and profitability.
- The ERS climate change research program develops models and other analytical techniques to predict responses of farmers to greenhouse gas mitigation options, analyze the impact of mitigation options on domestic and global agricultural markets and land and water use, and evaluate adaptation by farmers to a new climate regime through use of alternative technologies. The ERS climate change research program builds on extensive expertise on the economics of land use and land management, technology adoption, conservation program design, economics of biofuels, and value and dissemination of public investment in research and development. More generally, ERS research analyzes the economic efficiency, environmental effectiveness, and distributional implications of alternative designs of resource, conservation, environmental, and commodity programs and their linkages.
- ERS conducts research on technological innovation in agriculture, the economic performance, structure and viability of the farm sector and of different types of farms, and the state of global food security. ERS effectively communicates research findings to policy makers, program managers, and those shaping the public debate. The research program identifies key economic issues and uses sound analytical techniques to understand the immediate and broader economic and social consequences of alternative policies and programs related to the sustainability and use of biotechnology in U.S. agriculture, including policies to promote trade of U.S. products. ERS has a broad program of work examining the production and marketing characteristics of the U.S. organic sector. Ongoing activities include research on the adoption of certified organic farming systems across the U.S., analysis of consumer demand and prices in specific markets, and several nationwide surveys of organic producers and markets.
- The ERS research program includes an ongoing assessment of global food security. ERS provides research, analysis, and information on food security, including factors affecting food production and ability to import food, in Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Caribbean, and the Commonwealth of Independent States to decision makers in the United States and throughout the world. An annual report provides an up-to-date assessment of global food security. Fiscal Year 2018: ERS will conduct the following research on the rural and farm economy:

Large-Scale Farms in the United States. Farm production continues to shift to larger operations. ERS will analyze this shift for different regions and commodities, and will assess reasons for its continuation. The study will also focus on the attributes of very large U.S. farms using a new top sales class of $10 million or more. ERS will examine size and growth, management, ownership, commodity focus, and financial performance of the largest farms.

Implications of Changing Land Values for Financial Stress and Land Ownership. ERS research will examine the potential vulnerability of the farm sector to changes in agricultural land values, interest rates, and commodity prices. Farm real estate values reached record highs in 2013, but forecasts indicate a slowing rate of appreciation, or possibly even a decline in land values caused in part by lower commodity prices and rising interest rates.

Financial Stress, Bankruptcies, and Loan Delinquencies. After several years of strong growth in farm income, the sectors overall returns have declined, with net farm income now forecast for 2016 to be 45 percent below the $123.8 billion peak in 2013. The decline may lead to increased financial stress within the sector; two possible indicators of financial stress would be increases in farm bankruptcies and in loan delinquencies. ERS is analyzing trends in bankruptcy and loan delinquencies over time in order to understand and identify drivers of financial stress in the sector. Preliminary results using the most recent available data indicate minimal signs of financial stress in the agricultural sector. Both farm bankruptcy rates, considered a lagging indicator of financial stress, and commercial loan delinquency rates for agricultural loans, are low compared to historical levels and to more recent history in the 2000s.
Trends in Mortality Rates among Rural Residents. Preliminary ERS research has identified rising mortality rates among some subgroups in the rural U.S. population during the twenty-first century. This analysis focuses on the largest such group, middle-aged white men, tracing the upward trend in death rates since 2000 and examining possible correlates of this trend, including access to health care and increasing economic distress in some rural regions.

Analysis of the Rural Rental Housing Program. ERS research will examine the current allocation of USDA's housing and the communities served, areas presently underserved or at risk of becoming underserved, the factors contributing to the risk of loss of affordable rental housing, and the communities and populations likely to be affected. Since 1993, USDA has made subsidized direct loans to developers to finance affordable, multi-family rental housing in rural areas for low and moderate income families, elderly people, and persons with disabilities. This research will inform policy makers concerned about the need for affordable rental housing in rural areas.

ERS will conduct the following research on farm and commodity policy:

Analysis of USDA Risk Management Programs. American farmers face risks from weather and markets for the inputs they purchase (e.g., energy, labor) and products they sell. ERS will continue to provide research that analyzes the environment in which farmers operate and USDA's risk management programs. Building on a set of ERS studies completed or to be completed in FY17 on risk management policies and programs under the 2014 Farm Bill programs, ERS will conduct analysis that could implement policies for program design. One study will provide a broad overview of the different risk management tools available in different countries, which in turn will inform an empirical analysis for domestic producers of how changes to their agricultural risk management portfolio impacts their downside revenue risk. Motivated by the notion that weather data is rapidly collected for all counties, another study will empirically examine for U.S. crop producers the differences in impacts on risk management of crop insurance policies and other commodity support policies using a weather-based yield index rather than farm yield-based.

Improved Season-Average Price Forecasts. ERS will conduct research on using forward-looking data and methods to improve the accuracy and expand market information provided from USDA's situation and outlook program. The analysis will use public USDA reports and daily futures and options prices to better inform market participants about price uncertainty in major agricultural commodity markets. Ultimately, derivatives markets are a technology that improves the discovery of market price levels given supply and demand fundamentals. To the degree that the latter are well understood, markets function more efficiently.

Feed Grains Database Developments. The ERS Feed Grains Database is an important component in USDA monitoring of the grain, oilseed, and livestock complex, providing data on four feed grains (corn, grain sorghum, barley, and oats), seven foreign coarse grains (feed grains plus rye, millet, and mixed grains), hay, animal unit indexes of grain and roughage, rail rate indexes, and grain shipments. The database serves as an important, timely, accurate, reliable, and official source of information for stakeholders. Planned program enhancements include applications to enhance the delivery of information and expansion to other commodities.

Updated Commodity Cost and Returns Estimates. ERS produces annual cost and returns estimates for nine crop commodities, as well as hogs and milk. The annual estimates update baseline estimates with information on changes in input and commodity prices, while the baselines are set using data on technologies, production processes, and expense shares from commodity-specific questionnaires of the ARMS. ERS will set new baselines for corn and milk with surveys from the 2016-ARMS, and will design a wheat questionnaire for the 2017 ARMS to help set a new wheat baseline estimate (the surveys are completed by spring of the year following the reference year).

Analysis of the Dairy Margin Protection Program. ERS will conduct an ex-post examination of the Dairy Margin Protection Program, which offers dairy producers catastrophic coverage at no cost. The analysis will use the USDA baseline to examine margin expectations and milk output and how margins are likely to increase in nominal terms by the next Farm Bill. This research will further explain how feed efficiency and milk output could impact the national averages calculated for the program.

U.S. Hog Production: Continuing Trends in Productivity Growth. Total factor productivity in the U.S. hog industry will be estimated using Agricultural Resource Management Survey (ARMS) data to determine productivity trends. Information pertaining to changes in industry structure and production practices including changes in the size of operations, the use of production contracts, growth-promoting antibiotics, and innovative technologies are reported and evaluated relative to productivity growth.

ERS will conduct the following activities related to homeland security:

Analysis of Animal Disease Outbreaks. ERS researchers will collaborate with Federal and academic researchers to examine how economic variables and factors affect animal and crop disease outbreak assessments. This work will examine how economic analysis can help to develop clearer views of actual and hypothetical outbreaks, and to more fully identify what factors are significant in measuring the success of a mitigation or prevention effort. This research focuses on efforts to introduce economic components into epidemiological analysis that will allow analysts and decision makers to include social (e.g., impacts on rural communities) considerations and expand the number of criteria that may be used to determine effective outbreak responses. ERS will continue to invest in the data and analytical capacity needed to provide the current market context and data needed to support USDA Homeland Security event assessments and planning efforts, and support the USDA Highly Pathogenic Avian Influenza multiagency coordination. In addition, ERS is contributing expertise as subject matter experts to the Department of Homeland Security, Science and Technology Directorate, for the Agro-terrorism Risk Assessment, and the NSTC Foreign Animal Disease Threats Interagency Working Group.

ERS will conduct the following research on conservation, water, and environmental issues:

Conservation Compliance. To maintain eligibility for most agriculture-related federal programs, Conservation Compliance requires farmers to implement approved conservation systems on highly erodible cropland and refrain from draining wetlands. The Agricultural Act of 2014 eliminated Direct Payments and Countercyclical Payments which previously accounted for a large proportion of compliance incentives but also created shallow loss programs and linked crop insurance premium subsidies to Conservation Compliance requirements. ERS research will investigate the effectiveness of conservation compliance, changes in incentives due to the Agricultural Act of 2014, and the effectiveness of these incentives in protecting highly erodible cropland and wetlands.

Economics of Reducing Nutrient Losses from Agriculture in the Mississippi Atchafalaya River Basin. ERS research will examine the economic consequences of reducing nutrient losses from agriculture to the Gulf of Mexico and its implications for improving environmental quality. Every summer a large hypoxic zone forms in the Gulf of Mexico. Low dissolved oxygen in the Gulf is a serious environmental concern that can impact valuable fisheries and disrupt sensitive ecosystems. Reducing agricultural nutrient losses has been a major conservation goal for USDA and many Mississippi Basin states. However, despite years of investment in conservation measures, most cropland does not meet criteria for good nutrient management. ERS expects to publish a report that examines policy options for reducing nutrient losses in the Mississippi/Atchafalaya River Basin.

Changes in Climate and Crop Insurance. The changing climate has the potential to introduce greater uncertainty into agricultural production, with implications for farm profitability. This can influence the demand for crop insurance products and the costs to government of providing crop insurance premium subsidies. ERS researchers are examining how a changing climate will affect crop insurance premium subsidies in 2080. The ERS analysis combines models of crop risk, land allocation, prices, and crop insurance premiums to simulate total premium subsidy costs under alternative scenarios.
Determinants of Unfinished Conservation Practices. Since 1996, USDA working lands programs have entered into hundreds of thousands of conservation contracts. Many of the practices specified in these contracts are never installed as planned, leading to lost opportunities for additional conservation activity. ERS researchers are examining reasons why practices get dropped, using EQIP program administrative data to ascertain whether changes to conservation plans are due solely to adaptive management (adjusting to unforeseen weather or financial conditions) or to other reasons related to contract design.

Conservation Legacy Effects. An aspect of conservation policy that has received little attention is how financial assistance may provide conservation benefits beyond the specific location and duration of program participation. ERS researchers are using EQIP administrative data along with satellite data to study the extent to which participation leads farmers to retain conservation tillage practices after the contract has expired or to adopt conservation tillage on non-contract fields, or the extent to which participation leads neighboring farmers to adopt conservation tillage on their land. This research improves our understanding of the long-term benefits from conservation, and would help in the development of better metrics for measuring program success.

Herbicide Resistant Weed Management in Corn. Weed resistance to the herbicide glyphosate (popularly known as Roundup) is a growing problem in field crops, and there are also emerging concerns with insect resistance to seeds genetically engineered with the Bt toxin. ERS has elicited information on pesticide use, seed choices, and resistance management practices from farmers in the 2016 Corn Production Practices questionnaire of the ARMS. ERS research will evaluate farm strategies to manage weed and insect resistance, and track how those strategies have changed since the earlier 2010 ARMS corn survey; the research will also draw on related ARMS soybean surveys for 2006 and 2012.

ERS will conduct the following research on global agricultural markets and food security:

Investments in Agricultural Research in High-Income Countries. There is a growing concern that agricultural productivity growth, especially in high-income countries, may be slowing, and that current agricultural R&D levels may not be sufficient to address this concern. Some Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development countries have introduced policy reforms to improve the financing and performance of their public agricultural R&D systems. However, there is a lack of comprehensive and comparable information on these trends and developments, particularly for countries outside of the U.S. ERS is analyzing trends in U.S. agricultural research funding and agricultural research policy reforms in the context of global changes. This analysis will demonstrate the impact of R&D investments on agricultural productivity growth and examine the complementary roles of public and private research, and relate public investments to the size of the agricultural sector and to public science investments across the economy.

The Next Horizon: The Agricultural Trade Policy Landscape in 2016 and Beyond. ERS will quantify the potential for gains from trade reform under existing forms of polices targeted at agriculture. The core of the product would be an estimate of economic impacts of selected current domestic and border intervention policies, focusing on tariffs and tariff-rate quotas and other trade-related policies, domestic support, and non-tariff measures. To examine the impacts of different policy scenarios, the trade modeling framework will remove these policies separately and in combination in the context of multilateral trade liberalization.

Global Price Determination. While price in a given region reflects local (current and expected) supply and demand fundamentals, important agricultural commodities are often traded internationally, meaning that regional prices are also affected by the price spread therefore the fundamentals of their trading partners. ERS research will examine whether shifting production and trading patterns for several major commodities have affected the degree to which U.S. prices inform global prices, and also the influence international production and demand shocks have over prices paid to farmers domestically.

China’s Commodity Markets and Efficiency. China has become more integrated with global agricultural markets since its accession to the World Trade Organization (WTO) in 2001. China is the world’s largest producer and consumer of most agricultural commodities, so its integration with global markets is an important determinant of the efficiency of those markets. ERS research will evaluate the efficiency of agricultural commodity markets before and after China’s WTO accession to characterize the country’s degree of global integration.

International Food Security Assessment. ERS produces an annual assessment of the prevalence and depth of food security in low- and middle-income countries. ERS makes available the full historical database used for the model projections on its website. ERS developed new model capabilities, included in the 2017 report, including the ability to assess the impact of changes in food prices and income on demand. This allows ERS analysis to address all four dimensions of food security—availability, access, utilization and stability.

Progress and Challenges in Global Food Security. ERS will analyze progress made in reducing global food security, as well as new areas of challenge, drawing on 25 years of data from the International Food Security database. The analysis will examine progress in food security measurement, agricultural trade and food security, agricultural productivity and food safety nets. It will also highlight emerging issues that create new food security challenges, such as nutrition, risk management, climate change and urbanization. It integrates the analysis with priorities developed in the Global Food Security Act of 2016.

ERS will conduct the following research on production technologies:

Developments in Markets for U.S. Organic Exports. ERS research will examine developments in the U.S. organic export market. In addition to developing absolute and relative measures of organic trade performance over time, by commodity, and by trading partner, ERS will analyze the impact of equivalency agreements on observed trade flows. Results will inform the extent to which observed increases in U.S. organic exports can be attributed to these agreements as compared to changes in market fundamentals.

Evolution of Markets for Genetically Engineered Seeds. Since their commercial introduction in 1996, most acreage planted to genetically engineered (GE) seeds have been planted to three crops—corn, cotton, and soybeans—and has featured two traits, one for insect resistance and one for herbicide tolerance. In recent years, GE acreage has expanded to other field crops, such as alfalfa, canola, and sugar beets, and seed developers have added more complex combinations of the two key traits as well as new traits for drought tolerance. ERS research will draw on questions introduced into the 2016 ARMS to track the spread of new types of GE technologies.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:
Fiscal Year 2016. ERS research on food choices and health outcomes showed the following.

Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) participants are less likely to drive their own car to do their primary food shopping and more likely to get rides from someone else or take public transit. However, these differences in transportation mode do not translate into differences in the types of stores used for grocery shopping among SNAP households. The National Household Food Acquisition and Purchase Survey (FoodAPS) is the first survey to collect unique and comprehensive data about food purchases and acquisitions for a nationally representative sample of U.S. households. In March 2015, ERS published a report that compared shopping patterns of SNAP households to low- and higher income nonparticipant households and found that many households bypass the store that is closest to them to shop at another store. For example, among SNAP households, the nearest store was, on average, 2.0 miles from the household, but the store primarily used for grocery shopping was, on average, 3.4 miles from the household. Multiple intramural and extramural research projects are underway using FoodAPS with reports focusing on general food expenditures and WIC participant shopping behavior planned for release in 2016.

An estimated 86 percent of American households were food secure throughout the entire year in 2014, meaning that they had access at all times to enough food for an active, healthy life for all household members. The remaining households (14 percent) were food insecure at least some time during the year, including 5.6 percent with very low food security because the household lacked money and other resources for food, resulting in reduced food intake and disruptions in eating patterns for one or more household members.

Additional research focused specifically on children shows that an estimated 90.6 percent of households with children were food secure throughout the year in 2011, which denotes that all household members had consistent access to adequate food for active, healthy lives. The ERS food security statistics are widely recognized as the benchmark for measuring food security in the U.S., and support decision making on USDA food assistance and nutrition programs.

Following Dietary Guidance need not cost more, but many Americans would... need to re-allocate their food budgets to do so. Behavioral changes can improve diet quality, but major improvements would require Americans to change how they allocate their food budgets across food groups. Most Americans across all income levels consume poor diets. Behavior changes, such as preparing food at home instead of eating out, are associated with improvements in diet quality. To realize the much larger improvements in diet quality required to meet the Dietary Guidelines for Americans, ERS research found that many Americans would need to reallocate their food budgets, spending a larger share on fruits and vegetables and a lower share on protein foods and foods high in solid fats, added sugars, and sodium. Briefings on this topic to senior USDA officials informed discussions of the upcoming release of the 2015 Dietary Guidelines.

An estimated 1,249 calories per capita per day are lost from the food supply. ERS published the latest estimates on the amount and value of food loss in the United States. These estimates are for more than 200 individual foods using ERSs Loss-Adjusted Food Availability data. In 2010, an estimated 31 percent, or 133 billion pounds, of the 430 billion pounds of food produced was not available for human consumption at the retail and consumer levels. This amount of loss totaled an estimated $161.6 billion, as purchased at retail prices. For the first time, ERS estimates of the calories associated with food loss are presented in this report. The top three food groups in terms of the share of total value of food loss at the retail and consumer levels are meat, poultry, and fish (30 percent), vegetables (19 percent), and dairy products (17 percent). Food loss data from ERS is used to support USDA’s Food Waste Challenge initiative and also provides a model for other countries efforts to estimate food loss.

Households living in low-income, low food-access areas have only slightly lower diet quality than other households and this difference is partially alleviated when these consumers travel farther from their homes to purchase food. About 10 percent of the U.S. population lives in low-income areas more than 1 mile from the nearest supermarket. The diet quality of these consumers may be compromised by their food environment. Some may be unable to reach supermarkets regularly or without effort, instead buying food from closer stores that offer less healthy food products. ERS investigated the correlation between households that live in low-income, low-access areas and their purchases of 14 major food groups that vary in dietary quality using supermarket scanner data. Briefings on this topic to senior USDA and other policy officials informed discussions of continuing efforts to improve food access for low-income households across the U.S.

ERS research on USDA food and nutrition assistance programs found the following:

ERS linked 2008-12 SNAP administrative records to data from the U.S. Census Bureau’s American Community Survey (ACS) on the use of SNAP and other public assistance programs to provide better information on SNAP receipt than that which would be estimated by the ACS alone. SNAP provides food and nutrition benefits to low-income households based on a formula that adjusts the benefit amount a household receives based on monthly need. ERS assessed the extent to which SNAP reaches the poorest households, also known as benefit targeting, by estimating benefit receipt by annual household income relative to poverty. Estimates of SNAP targeting toward low-income households improve when using either of two measures of intensity of SNAP participation relative to measures of ever-in-the-year participation. Replacing survey-based data on SNAP benefit receipt with administrative records of SNAP benefit receipt and adjusting the survey households to more closely reflect administrative SNAP units also improves estimates of targeting to low-income participants. Briefings to senior officials at FNSCS and FNS informed decision makers about the effect of more expansive data on participation measures.

School meal programs are adjusting to stronger nutritional standards, but face challenges in maintaining paid lunch participation to meet revenue goals. School foodservice programs face ongoing tradeoffs between meal cost, student participation, and nutrition quality. Changes mandated by the Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act of 2010 strengthened nutritional standards for meals and competitive foods and set minimum levels for paid meal revenues, while new options allow more schools to offer free meals to all students at reduced administrative burden. An ERS review of recent research results and new data on school lunch participation rates suggests that while many school districts have adjusted to new standards, maintaining paid meal participation remains most challenging for smaller and more rural districts. Briefings to senior USDA officials on this topic have informed USDA efforts to help States meet the challenges related to improving nutrition within allotted budgets.

ERS research on the safety of the nations food supply found the following:

Cost estimates of foodborne illnesses data provide Federal agencies with consistent, peer-reviewed estimates of the costs of foodborne illness that can be used in analyzing the impact of Federal regulations. ERSs Cost of Foodborne Illness data product, produced in collaboration with the Food Safety and Inspection Service, provides detailed data about the costs of major foodborne illnesses in the United States, including identification of specific disease outcomes for foodborne infections caused by 15 major pathogens in the United States, associated outpatient and inpatient expenditures on medical care, associated lost wages, and estimates of individuals willingness to pay to reduce mortality resulting from these foodborne illnesses. It also provides stakeholders and the general public with a means of understanding the relative impact of different foodborne infections in the United States. Cost estimates of foodborne illnesses have been used to help inform food-safety policy discussions, and these updated cost estimates provide a foundation for economic analysis of food safety policy.

New surveys on food safety practices. ERS launched an initiative to collect primary data on current food safety practices for produce growers and post-harvest farms to provide a baseline of compliance costs prior to the full implementation of the Food Safety Modernization Act (FSMA). The surveys will be completed by NASS in January 2016, and ERS will use the data in estimating the potential economic impacts of FSMA provisions on the fresh produce and animal feed sectors.

Consumers respond differently to foodborne disease outbreaks of different severities. A case study of pathogen-related recalls of cantaloupe in 2011 and 2012 suggests consumers food purchase responses take into account the relative risk severity of specific pathogens. Information from news media apparently plays a role. Federal health and safety officials warned consumers away from cantaloupes in 2011 and again in 2012. The warnings occurred under similar market conditions but were for contamination by two different foodborne microorganisms that posed entirely different health risks. After consumers were informed about the risk with the higher fatality rate, the demand for cantaloupes fell and consumers substituted other melons. No such shifts in demand were evident under the lower fatality risk, despite more illnesses attributed to it.

Establishments that bid on contracts to supply the USDA’s National School Lunch Program had relatively higher levels of food safety, as measured by fewer samples of meat testing positive for Salmonella, than other establishments supplying ground beef to the commercial market. In December of 2014, ERS published a report that examined the food safety performance of suppliers of ground beef to the National School Lunch Program (NSLP) and found evidence of strategic behavior in which managers use information about their establishments past food safety performance to decide whether to bid on contracts to supply the NSLP. Research results from this report were presented at multiple briefings to senior USDA officials. Fiscal Year 2017: ERS studies the relationship among the many factors that influence food choices and health outcomes. At the household level, research focuses on food price trends, income, and individual characteristics such as age, race and ethnicity, household structure, knowledge of diet and health, and nutrition education. At the industry level, research focuses on the interaction among firms, consumers, and government programs and policies. Childrens food access, food security, and child and adult obesity continue to be important foci of the ERS research program. ERS research related to adult and child obesity includes approaches taken from behavioral economics to investigate how psychological mechanisms related to food choices might contribute to poor dietary quality and obesity.

Through its food assistance and nutrition research and by working closely with USDA's Food and Nutrition Service, ERS studies and analyzes the Nations nutrition assistance programs. These programs receive substantial Federal funding and affect the daily lives of millions of Americans children. Long-term research themes include dietary and nutritional outcomes, food program targeting and delivery, and measurement of program participation. ERS research is designed to meet the critical information needs of USDA, Congress, program managers, policy officials, the research community, and the public at large.

ERS food safety research focuses on enhancing methodologies for valuing societal benefits associated with reducing food safety risks, understanding consumer response to food safety incidents, assessing industry incentives to enhance food safety through new technologies and supply chain linkages, and evaluating regulatory options and change. ERS research also investigates the safety of food imports and the efficacy of international food safety policies and practices. ERS will use sound analytical techniques to understand the immediate and long-term efficiency, efficacy, and equity consequences of alternative policies and programs aimed at ensuring access by children and adults to safe, nutritious, affordable, and adequate meals. ERS ongoing research will also explore factors that can improve the effectiveness and efficiency of USDA Food and Nutrition Assistance programs. ERS will effectively communicate research results to policy makers, program managers, and those shaping efforts to promote abundant, safe, and healthful food at home and abroad. Examples of these activities include the following:

Providing economic analysis of the food marketing system to understand factors affecting the availability and affordability of food for American consumers.

Providing annual estimates of the quantity of food available for human consumption, and measures of disappearance and loss in the food system.

Providing economic analysis of how people make food choices, including demands for more healthful, nutritious, and safer food, and of the determinants of those choices, including prices, income, education, and socio-economic characteristics.

Conducting analyses of the benefits and costs of policies to change behavior to improve diet and health, including nutrition education, labeling, advertising, and regulation.

Conducting economic analyses of the impacts of the Nations domestic nutrition assistance programs, including the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP); the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children; and the Child Nutrition Programs.

Conducting research on food program targeting and delivery to gauge the success of programs aimed at needy and at-risk population groups, and to identify program gaps and overlaps.

Conducting research on program dynamics and administration, focusing on how program needs change with local labor market conditions, economic growth and recession, and how changing State welfare programs interact with food and nutrition programs.

Providing food safety information through publications, web materials, and briefings that address the economics of food safety, including consumer knowledge and behavior, industry practices, the relationship between international trade and food safety, and government policies and regulations.

Working with Federal food safety agency partners to evaluate available food borne illness data related to meat, poultry and egg products, and to develop more accurate measures of the effectiveness of regulatory strategies in reducing preventable food borne illness.

Fiscal Year 2018: ERS will conduct the following research on USDAs food and nutrition assistance programs:
Food insecurity in Veteran Households. Food insecurity as a measure of well-being for veterans and their households is relatively unstudied. Previous studies have been restricted to non-nationally representative samples or focused on veterans with disabilities. This study uses a nationally representative sample of veterans to describe the prevalence of food insecurity among veterans, subpopulations of veterans, and veteran households by selected characteristics.

Using Administrative Data to Improve Research on the Causal Effects of the SNAP Program on Labor Supply. This project continues the work on the effects of food assistance program participation on individuals incentives to work. Previous work examined the issue using Current Population Survey (CPS) data from Census that contain labor supply information as well as information on whether the individual participated in the SNAP program. Misreporting of SNAP participation in CPS data is a major issue with uncertain effects on estimates of the effect of participation on outcomes. The goal of the project will be to link administrative data sources to CPS data, examine how estimates of causal effects of SNAP participation on labor supply are affected by SNAP misreporting, and examine possible solutions to bias created by misreporting.

The Food Assistance National Input-Output Multiplier (FANIOM) Model and Stimulus Effects of SNAP. This project will examine the role of SNAP as a stimulus measure during an economic downturn. Using the Food Assistance National Input-Output Multiplier (FANIOM) model, we estimate the multiplier effect of a hypothetical SNAP expansion on economic output and employment. Since the end of the Great Recession, new research and new data sources are available to inform on this topic. Borrowing on these new sources, this project extends the work of ERS researchers in 2012 to provide an updated estimate of the multiplier effect of the SNAP program on the economy. Additionally, we review new literature examining the impact of the SNAP program on the economy during the Great Recession.

The Role of SNAP in the Rural Economy. ERS research will compare the rural impacts of the Supplemental Food Assistance Program (SNAP) to those in urban areas and to impacts of other Federal programs targeted to rural areas, such as agricultural commodity and rural development programs. Although SNAP is the largest USDA program, little research has investigated the economic effects of SNAP in rural areas. The project will examine how SNAP affects household savings and consumption decisions, impacts of SNAP on employment in rural vs. urban communities, and impacts of SNAP compared to impacts of agricultural commodity programs nationally and in selected regions.

Characteristics of School Districts Offering Free School Meals to All Students Through the Community Eligibility Provision. This project will study the determinants of school and district participation in the Community Eligibility Provision (CEP). In 2010, Congress mandated the CEP as a reimbursement option that allows schools serving high percentages of low-income students to offer USDA school meals at no charge to all students with reduced administrative burden. USDA’s Food and Nutrition Service expects the CEP to result in expanded participation with most impact on poor or near-poor students who may benefit the most from USDA’s child nutrition programs.

Food Costs of Large School Food Authorities in the National School Lunch Program. The Food and Nutrition Service (FNS) reimburses school food authorities (SFAs) for the estimated costs of providing school lunches and breakfasts. Reimbursement rates are based on cost accounting techniques that measure SFA labor, food purchase, and operating material costs. All SFAs in the 48 contiguous states receive the same reimbursement rates regardless of size or geographic location. Thus FNS implicitly assumes that labor and food purchase costs are the same across SFAs. Recent research shows that economies of scale exist in meal service and food costs vary across SFAs. Yet, SFAs vary in size from large, urban SFAs serving millions of meals per year to small, rural and suburban SFAs serving less than 10,000 meals. This research will determine if cost differences exist in food purchases and if so, how these differences in costs shape food choices.

WIC and the Retail Markup of Infant Formula. This project will examine the retail markup of the formula purchased through WIC. The number of participants in WIC who can be served within the fixed budget depends heavily on the programs food-package costs, which in turn are significantly affected by the cost of infant formula. Do retailers charge higher markups for the WIC contract brand than for the non-WIC brands of formula? This is an important question because retail markups, along with the net prices, are what WIC and ultimately U.S. taxpayers pay for infant formula. The answer to this question may also have implications for the prices that non-WIC participants pay for infant formula.

ERS will conduct the following research on food safety, foodborne illness, and industry practices:

Estimating Food Attributable Fractions of Foodborne Illness from Time Series Data. Reliable measures of the relative role of different foods in foodborne illness caused by specific pathogens are critical to governments and industries ability to target food safety interventions effectively. USDA, FDA and CDC have all identified a need for new, more reliable methods to estimate this relationship. This collaborative study between ERS, CDC and the University of California, Berkeley pioneers use of Nielsen HomeScan time series data on food consumption and FoodNet foodborne illness surveillance to estimate the relative contributions of specific foods to illnesses caused by major foodborne pathogens.

Trends in Food Product Recalls: 2004-2013. Food product recalls, the removal of risky food products from the marketplace, can impose significant burdens for consumers, producers, and regulators. This report analyzes trends and patterns of food product recall events from 2004 to 2013. The analysis considers multiple factors, including the types of foods being recalled, the reasons for initiating the recalls, the severity of the risks posed by the recalled products, and the geographic distribution.

The 2011 Food Safety Modernization Act (FSMA) and the Fresh Produce Industry. Using new survey data collected through a joint ERS/NASS initiative, ERS researchers will assess pre-implementation food safety practices relative to several FSMA rules specifically focused on fresh produce. Results will compare food safety practices and costs of adoption for different size farms or post-harvest operations, for different regions of the country, and to the extent possible for different produce commodities. The research will provide a baseline for eventual assessment of effectiveness of FSMA adoption.

A grant was awarded to Tufts University and the University of Connecticut (Tufts/UConn) to jointly administer a program of sub-awards to investigators at universities and other institutions for research projects conducted during FY 2017-18. Tufts/UConn provides oversight of the application, peer review, sub-grant award, and quality-assurance processes of the RIDGE Program to (1) support food and nutrition assistance research at the national level as well as for specific populations, such as immigrants, Native Americans, people living in rural areas, or residents in areas who experience limited access to healthy foods; and (2) disseminate these research findings to a diverse stakeholder audience, including other researchers, policy and program officials, and the general public. Fiscal Year 2017: The Research Innovation and Development Grants in Economics (RIDGE) Program encourages new and innovative research on food and nutrition assistance issues and broadens the participation of social science scholars in such research. RIDGE is funded by USDAs Economic Research Service and Food and Nutrition Service and administered in partnership with several universities during FY 2016-18:

The RIDGE Center for National Food and Nutrition Assistance Research at the Institute for Research on Poverty, University of Wisconsin-Madison (ended FY 2016), and
The RIDGE Center for Targeted Food and Nutrition Assistance Research at the Center for Regional Development, Purdue University (ended FY 2016); Tufts University, Friedman School of Nutrition Science and Policy, and the University of Connecticut (beginning FY 2017).

The RIDGE partnership institutions oversee the application, peer review, award, and performance processes of the research grants provided through the RIDGE Program. The institutions serve as a hub for mentoring and training researchers interested in food and nutrition assistance issues and provide a source of timely and accessible information on new research findings.

RIDGE Program Activities, FY 2017

The newly established Tufts/UConn RIDGE Program announced a call for research projects in FY 2017. To evaluate the proposals, Tufts/UConn developed an online proposal and submission site through the FluidReview platform, formed an external advisory committee, and established a community of proposal reviewers and project mentors. A diverse set of projects was selected through this competitive review process, with input from ERS and FNS, for research to be conducted during FY 2017-18. Grants were awarded for:

Fiscal Year 2018: The Research Innovation and Development Grants in Economics (RIDGE) Program encourages new and innovative research on food and nutrition assistance issues and broadens the participation of social science scholars in such research. RIDGE is funded by USDAs Economic Research Service and Food and Nutrition Service and administered in partnership with several universities during FY 2016-18:

- The RIDGE Center for National Food and Nutrition Assistance Research at the Institute for Research on Poverty, University of Wisconsin-Madison (ended FY 2016), and
- The RIDGE Center for Targeted Food and Nutrition Assistance Research at the Center for Regional Development, Purdue University (ended FY 2016); Tufts University, Friedman School of Nutrition Science and Policy, and the University of Connecticut (beginning FY 2017).

The RIDGE partnership institutions oversee the application, peer review, award, and performance processes of the research grants provided through the RIDGE Program. The institutions serve as a hub for mentoring and training researchers interested in food and nutrition assistance issues and provide a source of timely and accessible information on new research findings.

Projected RIDGE Program Activities, FY 2018

Research projects funded by Tufts/UConn in FY 2017 will be completed during FY 2018 and findings presented at the annual RIDGE Conference scheduled in October 2018. Also in FY 2016, an Interagency Agreement between the Food and Nutrition Service (FNS) and the Economic Research Service (ERS) was initiated to provide funding for the recompetition of a grant to establish a Research Center to administer the Research Innovation and Development Grants in Economics (RIDGE) Program. The recompetition was implemented to (1) provide renewed focus on economic aspects of food and nutrition assistance research, (2) stimulate new and innovative research on domestic food and nutrition assistance issues by providing small grants for new analyses of the USDA major food and nutrition assistance programs, food security, and smaller, less studied programs such as the Summer Food Service Program, (3) broaden the support of both established and emerging scholars to increase the number and diversity of researchers who collaborate in tackling the unique food and nutrition challenges that exist across communities, regions, and States, and (4) achieve cost savings through administration of program activities at a single center.

10.303 INTEGRATED PROGRAMS

Integrated Programs:
- National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:
- Section 406 of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (AREERA) (7 U.S.C. 7626), as reauthorized by Section 7306 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (FCEA) (Public Law 110-246), authorized the Secretary of Agriculture to establish a competitive grants program that provides funding for integrated, multifunctional agricultural research, extension, and education activities. Subject to the availability of appropriations to carry out this program, the Secretary may award grants to colleges and universities (as defined by section 1404 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (NARETPA) (7 U.S.C. 3103)), as amended, on a competitive basis for projects that address priorities in United States agriculture and involve integrated research, education, and extension activities, as determined by the Secretary in consultation with the National Agricultural Research, Extension, Education, and Economics Advisory Board (NAREEEAB). Section 7129 of the FCAE amended section 406(b) of AREERA (7 U.S.C. 7626(b)), adding Hispanic-serving agricultural colleges and universities (HSACUs) as eligible entities for competitive funds awarded under this authority (see Part III.B of RFA for more information), 7 U.S.C. 7626; Section 2(c)(1)(B) of Public Law 89-106, as amended.

OBJECTIVES:

GENERAL:

NIFA Integrated Programs provide support for integrated research, education, and extension activities. Integrated, multi-functional projects are particularly effective in addressing important agricultural issues through the conduct of problem-focused research that is combined with education and extension of knowledge to those in need of solutions. These activities address critical national, regional, and multi-state agricultural issues, priorities, or problems. Integrated Programs hold the greatest potential to produce and disseminate knowledge and technology directly to end users while providing for educational opportunities to assure agricultural expertise in future generations. See individual program Requests for Applications for additional information about the topics.

SEVERAL PROGRAMS ARE FUNDED UNDER CFDA 10.303. SPECIFIC OBJECTIVES ARE AS FOLLOWS:

The goal of the National Integrated Water Quality Program is to improve the quality of our Nation's surface water and groundwater resources through research, education, and extension activities. Projects funded through this program will facilitate achieving this goal by advancing and disseminating the knowledge base available to agricultural and rural communities. Funded projects should lead to science-based decision-making and management practices that improve the quality of the Nation's surface water and groundwater resources in agricultural and rural watersheds. See RFA for priority areas.

(2) Integrated Research, Education, and Extension Competitive Grants Program: National Integrated Food Safety Initiative
The purpose of the National Integrated Food Safety Initiative is to support food safety projects that demonstrate an integrated approach to solving problems in applied food safety research, education, or extension. Various models for integration of applied research, education, and extension will be considered for funding. Applications describing multi-state, multi-institutional, multidisciplinary, and multifunctional activities (and combinations thereof) are encouraged. Applicants are strongly encouraged to address at least two of the three functional areas of research, education, and extension (i.e., research and extension, research and education, or extension and education).

(3) Integrated Research, Education, And Extension Competitive Grants Program: Regional Integrated Pest Management Centers
The goal of the Regional Integrated Pest Management Centers (IPM Centers) is to promote the development and implementation of IPM by facilitating collaboration across states, disciplines, and purposes. IPM Centers will establish and maintain information networks, build partnerships to address pest management challenges and opportunities, evaluate the impact of IPM implementation, communicate positive outcomes to key stakeholders, and manage funding resources effectively. Successful applicants to this program will demonstrate the capacity and commitment necessary to advance the goals of the National Roadmap for Integrated Pest Management (www.ipmcenters.org/IPMRoadMap.pdf), and evaluate the progress of this advancement. The IPM Roadmap addresses pest management needs for production agriculture, natural resources and recreational environments, and residential and public areas.

(4) Integrated Pest Management: Crops at Risk Program
The goal of the CAR program is to fund integrated, multi-functional/multidisciplinary research, education, and extension projects for crops with high priority IPM needs as identified by stakeholders.

(5) Integrated Pest Management: Risk Avoidance and Mitigation Program
The goal of the Risk Avoidance and Mitigation (RAMP) program is to enhance the development and implementation of innovative, ecologically based sustainable IPM strategies and systems(s) for (a) multi-crop food and fiber production systems; (b) an area-wide or a landscape scale agroecosystem; or (c) a documented pesticide impact on water, human or environmental health.

RAMP applications may address major acreage agricultural production systems, high value crops such as key fruit and vegetable systems, or other agroecosystems. The primary emphasis of the application should be on productivity and profitability while addressing critical environmental quality and human health issues. The intent of RAMP is to fund medium-term projects that emphasize systems approaches.

(6) Integrated Research, Education, and Extension Competitive Grants Program: Integrated Pest Management: Methyl Bromide Transitions Program
The goal of the Methyl Bromide Transitions (MBT) program is to support the discovery and implementation of practical pest management alternatives to methyl bromide uses or minimize methyl bromide emissions for which the United States is requesting critical use exemptions. The program is focused on integrated commercial or field scale research that targets short- to medium-term solutions.

(7) Integrated Organic Program
The purpose of the Integrated Organic Program is to solve critical organic agriculture issues, priorities, or problems through the integration of research, education, and extension activities. The Organic Transitions Program (ORG) funds the development and implementation of research, extension, and higher education programs to improve the competitiveness of organic producers and producers who are adopting organic practices. Funding opportunities for the ORG Program is included in the same Request for Applications (RFA) as the Organic Research and Extension Initiative (OREI).

PLEASE NOTE: THIS PROGRAM DOES NOT FUND START UP BUSINESSES.

(8) Regional Rural Development Centers (RRDCs):
The RRDCs play a unique role in USDA's service to rural America. They link the research and educational outreach capacity of the nation's public universities with communities, local decision makers, entrepreneurs, families, and farmers and ranchers to help address a wide range of development issues. They collaborate on national issues that span regions-like e-commerce, the changing interface between rural, suburban, and urban places, and workforce quality and jobs creation. Each tailors programs to address particular needs in its region.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

NIFA has determined that grant funds awarded under this authority may not be used for the renovation or refurbishment of research, education, or extension space; the purchase or installation of fixed equipment in such space; or the planning, repair, rehabilitation, acquisition, or construction of buildings or facilities. Funds may not be used for any purposes other than those approved in the grant award documents. Tuition remission is not allowable.

The following programs are authorized under (Section 406 of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (AREERA) (7 U.S.C. 7626):

7. Organic Transition - Risk Assessment

Other Integrated Programs (7):
8. Regional Rural Development Centers (7 U.S.C. 450) and 7 U.S.C. 2204a)

Section 1473 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 3310) prohibits indirect costs. Hence, indirect costs are unallowable for this program. Fully discretionary.

Credentials/Documentation:
The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:
(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;
(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

length and time phasing of assistance:

funds are awarded competitively.

no formula grants are awarded under subtitle k of the national agricultural research, extension, and teaching policy act of 1977 [7 u.s.c. 3319c].

if a grant provides a particular benefit to a specific agricultural commodity, and not of national scope, the grant recipient is required to match the usda funds awarded on a dollar-for-dollar basis from non-federal sources with cash and/or in-kind contributions. (see part iv, b., 6. of the rfa for details.)

nifa may waive the matching funds requirement for a grant if nifa determines that:

1) the results of the project, while of particular benefit to a specific agricultural commodity, are likely to be applicable to agricultural commodities generally; or moe requirements are not applicable to this program.

2) the project involves a minor commodity, the project deals with scientifically important research, and the grant recipient is unable to satisfy the matching funds requirement.

length and time phasing of assistance:

regarding the critical issues and regional rural development centers (section 2(c)(1)(b) of public law 89/106, as amended), normally, competitive research projects will be supported for periods of up to three (3) years.

in accordance with statutory time limits, project periods, including no-cost extensions of time, are not to exceed five (5) years.

b. annual progress reports.

all projects must report annually into reeport. an annual progress report is due 90 calendar days after the award anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day of which the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). an annual progress report covers the most recent one-year period. the following information, when applicable, must be included in the project modifications section of the annual progress report.

1) a comparison of actual accomplishments with the goals established for the reporting period (where the output of the project can be expressed readily in numbers, a computation of the cost per unit of output should be submitted if the information is considered useful);

2) the reasons for slippage if established goals were not met; and

3) additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

c. final technical report

the final technical report is required within 90 calendar days after the expiration or termination of the award. the final technical report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments made only during the final reporting segment of the project. in addition to supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:

identify equipment purchased with any federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

financial reporting:

as outlined in 2 cfr 200.327, the recipient must submit financial status reports by the frequency required in the terms and conditions of the award. the following are the financial reporting requirements for nifa.

federal financial report, form sf-425:

nifa uses the sf-425, federal financial report to monitor cash. a federal financial report, form sf-425, is due on an annual basis no later than 90 days following the end of the award anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day when the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). an annual progress report covers the most recent one-year period.

a final federal financial report, form sf-425, is due 90 days after the expiration date of this award. the report must be submitted to the awards management division (amd) as a pdf attachment to an email sent to awards@nifa.usda.gov.

(H) Regional Rural Development Centers

For Fiscal Year (FY) 2017:

NIFA announced the availability of grant funds and requests applications for the Regional Rural Development Centers (RRDC) Competitive Grants Program for fiscal year (FY) 2017 to link the research and educational outreach capacity of the nation's public universities with communities, local decision makers, entrepreneurs, families, and farmers and ranchers to help address a wide range of development issues for prosperity for sustainable and secure communities will always be a matter of public interest. RRDCs leverage land-grant resources in pursuit of USDA's rural development mission by bringing together the most innovative minds from inside and outside universities to address cutting-edge issues without regard to state boundaries. They respond to emerging issues, generate credible science-based information to clarify these issues, and create public-private partnerships to address them.

The amount available for support of this program in FY 2017 is $1,899,520 ($474,880 per center). The grant deadline was July 7, 2017. Four proposals were reviewed and recommended for funding. Fiscal Year 2018: For Fiscal Year (FY) 2018:

For Fiscal Year (FY) 2016:

2016-06198: Going underground: Digging up the dirt on Metarhizium-plant-pest interactions in an organic cropping system. This study investigates the effects of cover crops and soil characteristics on the novel interactions among the fungus, Metarhizium, an endemic insect pathogen and plant-protective endophyte with crops and cover crops in an organic agronomic cropping system. Objectives include: 1) characterize Metarhizium isolates from on-going organic research-station and on-farm experiments; 2) determine the ability of endeminc isolates to form endophytic relationships with cash crops and selected cover crops; 3) determine effects of endophytic Metarhizium in a model system of corn, black cutworm; and Cochliobolus heterostrophus, the causal agent of southern corn leaf blight; and 4) determine the effect of endophytic Metarhizium on the expression of key defense genes that protect plants from crop pests and diseases.

2016-06180: Decision Support to Quantify GHG Mitigation and Ecosystem Services from Organic Production Systems. This project will address ORG Program Priority by improving technologies and tools to document and optimize the environmental services and climate change mitigation ability of organic farming systems. The team will improve two state-of-the-art decision support systems (COMET-Farm and the Cool Farm Tool) for quantifying the impacts of land use and management practices on soil C and greenhouse gas GHG- emissions from agricultural systems at the farm-scale. These improved decision support systems will enable the industry to deliver improved storytelling about organic beyond the label and help to identify opportunity areas for working with farmers to improve both productivity and profitability as well as deliver on corporate commitments to meet GHG reduction goals.

2016-06197: Ensuring the best practical use of microbe-containing crop biofertilizers among (transitional)-organic vegetable growers. The long-term goal of this project is to create resources, tangible and human, ensuring the best practical use of Microbe-containing biofertilizers and biofertilizers (MC BSs/BFs) among (transitional)-organic vegetable growers. The team will: a) complete stakeholder-focused experiments on farms and research stations, b) expand and strengthen a growing network of farmers and other professionals while evaluating and reporting on product performance, and c) establish, share, and help stakeholders implement core components of practical guidelines for using MC BSs/BFs during (transitional)-organic vegetable production.

2016-06199: The Development of an Organic Crop Budgeting Tool to Help Advise Producers. Budgets are one of the most important tools producers use when deciding on which crops to grow. Objective in this project is to determine the production practices of organic producers, collect price information about the needed inputs, develop a crop budgeting tool, and produce organic crop budgets so that the profitability of organic crops can be estimated for a producer. This contribution is significant because the team is developing a regionalized database of inputs and prices for organic crop production that doesn't currently exist and integrating this database into an organic crop budgeting tool that will make it significantly easier for producers and Extension personnel to estimate organic profitability.

2016-06181: Developing advanced perennial legume-grass mixtures harvested as stored feeds to improve herd productivity and mitigate greenhouse gas emissions in organic dairies in the Northeast. This project will fill knowledge gaps by advancing the scientific understanding about how potential changes in species persistence and forage botanical composition in various legume-grass mixtures across multiple years affect forage quality and stored feed fermentation characteristics and, consequently, milk production and greenhouse gases emissions when fed to organic dairy cows. The team will partner with three organic dairy farmers in the Northeast who will set up demonstration plots and coordinate field days, thus becoming peer leaders in their rural communities.

(F) Methyl Bromide Transition Program (MBT) Integrated Research, Education, and Extension Competitive Grants Program-Methyl Bromide Transition

For Fiscal Year (FY) 2017:

The National Institute of Food and Agriculture will make awards for FY 2017, totaling approximately $1.8 million, by September 30, 2017. These awards will support the discovery and implementation of practical pest management alternatives for commodities and uses affected by the methyl bromide phase out. The National Institute of Food and Agriculture will provide more details on the funded projects at a future date.
For Fiscal Year (FY) 2017:

2017-03405: Going underground: Perennial and Annual Organic Transition Systems to Optimize Soil Health, Carbon Sequestration, and Profitability Production. Farmers interested in transitioning from conventional to organic systems are faced with unique challenges regarding weed control, fertility, improving soil health, and generating income during the transition period. Many transition systems rely on tillage to control weeds and annual crop rotations, which have been associated with soil carbon (C) loss. Intermediate wheatgrass (IWG) is a cool-season grass that is being bred for increased seed yields to become the first perennial grain crop. IWG could help producers overcome the challenges of organic transition, while also simplifying management, reducing tillage-associated C emissions, and improving soil health relative to annual crop-based organic transitions. This study will compare six organic transition systems that include IWG, summer and winter annuals, perennial legumes, and systems with various combinations of grain, forage, and cover crops.

2017-03371: Facilitating improved environmental and soil quality through increased biodiversity and crop/livestock integration on organic farms. Agricultural systems that restore biodiversity improve sustainability and lower dependence on external inputs, which is vital in organic production. The focus of this project is to investigate the effects of integration of cover crops and livestock grazing on soil quality and crop yield. Results will be utilized in the development of educational programs on organic crops, livestock and soil health through university curriculum development, courses on organic principles and practice, open-source learning modules, and producer outreach. The educational programming will improve understanding of organic principles by students who are both today’s consumers and tomorrows farmers and future drivers of agricultural policies and practices. Intermediate and long-term outcomes include producer adoption of practices increasing on-farm biodiversity, leading to greater economic and environmental stability in organic production.

2017-03378: Development of effective biological control of fire blight for the Eastern United States. Fire blight is a devastating disease of apples and pears. The termination of antibiotics in organic production requires alternative management options. Biological control represents an important group of organic management tools. Yet, none of the available biocontrols has provided consistent, high level of control against fire blight under humid climates in the Eastern U.S. This study will perform the first comprehensive search and testing for bacterial and fungal biocontrol strains isolated from apple stigmas under humid climate in Eastern U.S. Using a combined approach of antibiosis screen, crab apple bioassay, and metagenomics, the research team will identify microorganisms with antimicrobial producing abilities and preemptive exclusion properties.

2017-03409: An ecological approach to disease risk management on organic poultry farms. Outdoor poultry are exposed to parasites and pathogens in the soil, or vectored by wild birds. These infections endanger animal and human health. There have been very few holistic studies of factors that make organic poultry farms susceptible or resistant to parasite/pathogen invasion. Growers inability to predict and manage these risks forms a major barrier to organic transition. This study will (1) Measure frequencies of poultry contact with wild birds and soil; (2) Survey pathogen and parasite communities within on-farm wild bird populations, while characterizing transmission routes between wild and domesticated birds; and (3) Characterize properties of soil that affect persistence of fecal-borne poultry parasites and pathogens.

2017-03389: Introducing organic to producers of grain-only and pasture-grain wheat cropping systems of northern Texas. Organic agriculture is nearly absent in the northern Southern Great Plains region of Texas, despite large demand for organic products that could be produced there and low producer incomes. The team proposes to utilize a systems approach to directly compare conventional grain-only and pasture-grain wheat systems to transitional organic systems with management customized to the region. The experiment will occur at a large field scale, which is the only way to provide results directly transferable to regional stakeholders. We will quantify system management impacts on crop and animal performance; soil microbial properties, nutrient, greenhouse gas emission, and moisture dynamics; and economic outcomes.

b. Annual Progress Reports.

All projects must report annually into REEport. An annual Progress Report is due 90 calendar days after the awards anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day of which the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period. The following information, when applicable, must be included in the Project Modifications section of the annual Progress Report.

1) A comparison of actual accomplishments with the goals established for the reporting period (where the output of the project can be expressed readily in numbers, a computation of the cost per unit of output should be submitted if the information is considered useful);

2) The reasons for slippage if established goals were not met; and

3) Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

c. Final Technical Report

The Final Technical Report is required within 90 calendar days after the expiration or termination of the award. The Final Technical Report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments made only during the final reporting segment of the project. In addition to supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:

Identify equipment purchased with any Federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

FINANCIAL REPORTING:
As outlined in 2 CFR 200.327, the recipient must submit financial status reports by the frequency required in the terms and conditions of the award. The following are the financial reporting requirements for NIFA.

Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425:
NIFA uses the SF-425, Federal Financial Report to monitor cash. A Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due on an annual basis no later than 90 days following the end of the award anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day when the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period.

A final Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due 90 days after the Retention requirements for records. Grantees shall maintain separate records for each grant to ensure that funds are used for authorized purposes. Grant-related records are subject to inspection during the life of the grant and must be retained at least three (3) years. Records must be retained beyond the three (3) year period if litigation is pending or audit findings have not been resolved.

2 CFR 200 Subpart D applies to this program.

(Cooperative Agreements) FY 16 $6,432,000; FY 17 est $7,680,000; and FY 18 est $5,456,640 - The difference between the appropriation and obligation numbers reflects legislative authorized set-asides deducted as appropriate, and in some cases the availability of obligatory authority from prior years.

SPECIAL NOTE:
FY 2017 increase represents proposed increases in the President's Budget. Funding for FADI will support NPDN, EDEN, and NAHLN.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:
Fiscal Year 2016: For Fiscal Year 2016:
(A) National Plant Diagnostic Network for the Food and Agricultural Defense Initiative (NPDN): Six applications were received and awarded. The awards totaled $3,030,660

(B) National Animal Health Laboratory Network (NAHLN) for the Food and Agricultural Defense Initiative (aka FADI): FADI: For FY 2016, the Food and Agriculture Defense Initiative (FADI) will continue to support three multi-institutional homeland security networks via non-competitively awarded cooperative agreements: The National Plant Diagnostic Network, the National Animal Health Laboratory Network (NAHLN), and the Extension Disaster Education Network. All three networks continued to help prepare, prevent, detect, respond and recover from high-consequence disease threats and other disasters.

NAHLN: During 2016, NIFA disbursed $3,018,000 payment to states to the NAHLN. NAHLN implemented a restructure plan that employs enhanced metrics and other semi-quantitative criteria to determine level-specific NAHLN membership eligibility. The agency made 16 new awards to support NAHLN labs. While NIFA reduced the number NAHLN Labs it is supporting in 2016 (compared to 2015), investments are the same as the previous year. The difference is that, due to the NAHLN restructure, there was a realignment of which NAHLN labs are funded by NIFA and those that are funded by APHIS which collaboratively funds NAHLN. APHIS has a larger percentage of the total labs in 2016. For 2016, NIFA supported a larger number of Level-1 labs.

October 2017

Non-competitively awarded cooperative agreements: The National Plant Diagnostic Network for the Food and Agricultural Defense Initiative (aka FADI):

It is projected that the Food and Ag Defense Initiative (FADI) will continue to support three multi-institutional homeland security networks via non-competitively awarded cooperative agreements: The National Plant Diagnostic Network, the National Animal Health Laboratory Network (NAHLN), and the Extension Disaster Education Network.

NAHLN: It is anticipated that changes in lab membership from 2017 into 2018 will be minor since continuity is an important consideration in sustaining agrosecurity preparedness. The agency expects to make about 16 NAHLN renewal awards.

(C ) Extension Disaster Education Network (EDEN):

This program is projected to continue support for EDEN.

NIFAS GENERAL AWARD TERMS AND CONDITIONS

(largest award size under the NAHLN tier structure), hence the smaller number of total labs in 2016.

Critical surveillance and suspect-sample testing was supported to address the mission of safeguarding public health, enhancing the health of all animals, and improving the economic well-being of livestock producers nationwide. Thousands of samples were processed testing for high-consequence livestock pathogens and tens of thousands of samples for some of more common disease organisms. Member laboratories have completed or maintained proficiency certification for several important endemic and foreign animal diseases, including: avian influenza, Newcastle disease, Johne's disease, classical swine fever, foot and mouth disease, bovine spongiform encephalopathy, leptospirosis, bovine leukemia virus, bluetongue, chronic wasting disease, and equine infectious anemia.

(C ) Extension Disaster Education Network (EDEN):

The Extension Disaster Education Network project further integrated and expanded the Cooperative Extension System's educational role before, during and after a disaster, using the all-hazards approach adopted by the U.S. Department of Homeland Security. Fiscal Year 2017: For Fiscal Year 2017:

(A) National Plant Diagnostic Network for the Food and Agricultural Defense Initiative (NPDN):

Six applications have been received and are being awarded. The awards totaled $3,030,660.

(B) National Animal Health Laboratory Network (NAHLN) for the Food and Agricultural Defense Initiative (aka FADI):

FADI: The Food and Ag Defense Initiative (FADI) will continue to support three multi-institutional homeland security networks via non-competitively awarded cooperative agreements: The National Plant Diagnostic Network, the National Animal Health Laboratory Network (NAHLN), and the Extension Disaster Education Network. New cooperative agreements were established in 2016 for the National Plant Diagnostic and National Animal Health Laboratory Networks; therefore, 2017 represents the first award renewal cycle under the new cooperative agreement.

NAHLN: Overall, NIFA is supporting 16 laboratories (10 level 1 labs; 2 level 2 labs; and, 4 level 3 labs) with $4,278,540 payment to states. This amount represents an increase of $ 1,260,540 (from 2016) provided in the FADI appropriation and designated by Congress specifically for NAHLN.

NIFA is funding two new labs (MI: PA-Harrisburg) and 14 renewal labs in 2017. The Wyoming lab moved up from a level 3 lab (2016) to a level 2 lab (2017). Other labs being supported by NIFA in 2017 maintained their same level as in 2016. Award recommendations are being processed with start dates anticipated to be September 1, 2017.

(C ) Extension Disaster Education Network (EDEN):

This program continues to support three multi-institutional homeland security networks via non-competitively awarded cooperative agreements: The National Plant Diagnostic Network, the National Animal Health Laboratory Network, and the Extension Disaster Education Network. The agency is in the process of making awards. EDENs allocation is anticipated to be $370,800. Fiscal Year 2018: For Fiscal Year 2018:

(A) National Plant Diagnostic Network for the Food and Agricultural Defense Initiative (NPDN):

It is anticipated that six applications were received and awarded a total amount of $3,030,660.

(B) National Animal Health Laboratory Network (NAHLN) for the Food and Agricultural Defense Initiative (aka FADI):

FADI: It is projected that the Food and Ag Defense Initiative (FADI) will continue to support three multi-institutional homeland security networks via non-competitively awarded cooperative agreements: The National Plant Diagnostic Network, the National Animal Health Laboratory Network (NAHLN), and the Extension Disaster Education Network.

(A) National Plant Diagnostic Network for the Food and Agricultural Defense Initiative (NPDN):
The IT & Data Management Center and 5 regional centers were funded. These centers enhance agricultural security by protecting the health and productivity of agricultural plants and natural ecosystems through the U.S. They provide a cohesive, distributed system to quickly detect and identify pests and pathogens of concern. Results are reported to appropriate responders and decision-makers. The centers have the appropriate laboratory infrastructure and training, they have developed an extensive network of first detectors and have enhance communication among public agencies and stakeholders in order to respond to and mitigate new outbreaks of pest and diseases of importance.

(B) National Animal Health Laboratory Network (NAHLN) for the Food and Agricultural Defense Initiative (aka FADI):
For FY 2017 The Food and Agriculture Defense Initiative (FADI) is expected to continue to support three multi-institutional homeland security networks via non-competitively awarded cooperative agreements: The National Plant Diagnostic Network, the National Animal Health Laboratory Network, and the Extension Disaster Education Network. The agency expects to make 20 to 30 award renewals.

CRITERIA FOR SELECTING PROPOSALS:
In Fiscal Year (FY) 2002, a panel of USDA scientists knowledgeable in the Nation’s plant and animal disease diagnostic capability, recommended to the Secretary a plan of initiating a comprehensive national network of laboratories for the rapid detection and diagnosis of plant and animal diseases. The institutions selected by the panel for initial inclusion in the network were recommended using the following criteria:

(1) Existing scientific capacity;
(2) Existing laboratory capacity which could be modified to meet Biosafety Level 3 requirements;
(3) Both animal and plant diagnostic capabilities;
(4) Geographical location meeting one or more of the following requirements: located in an area with a high risk of disease/pest incursions; located in an area with high concentration of vulnerable agricultural activity; complements or supplements regional Federal laboratory activity or is in an area not effectively served by an existing Federal facility;
(5) State-of-the-art communication and information technology systems. Must be capable of managing secure communications with other laboratories and central reporting unit; and
(6) An effective outreach/extension system.

These recommendations were utilized to select the original cooperative agreement recipients and are annually evaluated by USDA/NIFA in network planning.

2 CFR part 200, Uniform Administrative Requirements, Cost Principles, and Audit Requirements for Federal Awards and 2 CFR part 400 USDA’s Uniform Administrative Requirements, Cost Principles, and Audit Requirements for Federal Awards apply to this program.

10.306 BIODIESEL
(Biodiesel Fuel Education Program)

FEDERAL AGENCY:
National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:
Section 9006 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (Public Law 110-246), amended the Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002 (7 U.S.C. 8101 et seq.) to re-establish the Biodiesel Fuel Education Program which requires that the Secretary make competitive grants to eligible entities to educate governmental and private entities that operate vehicle fleets, other interested entities (as determined by the Secretary), and the public about the benefits of biodiesel fuel use. The Secretary delegated this authority to the Chief Economist, who in turn delegated this authority to the Director of the Office of Energy Policy and New Uses (OEPNU). OEPNU has joined with

Program Descriptions 184 October 2017

OBJECTIVES:
The goals of the Biodiesel Fuel Education Program as originally established in Section 9004 of the Farm Security Investment Act of 2002 (7 U.S.C. 8104) were to stimulate biodiesel consumption and to stimulate the development of a biodiesel infrastructure. The information and outreach activities to raise awareness of the benefits of biodiesel fuel use complemented the incentives provided by the Energy Policy Act of 2005 (EPAct) (Public Law 109-58), and the Energy Independence and Security Act of 2007 (Public Law 110-140). As a result of increased awareness and consumption of biodiesel over the past 5 years, the FY 2008 Biodiesel Education program will focus on educational programs which will support advances in infrastructure, technology transfer, fuel quality, fuel safety and increasing feedstock production.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:
Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:
This funding is used for education and outreach activities. Program funds may not be used for renovation or refurbishment or research space; the purchase or installation of fixed equipment in such space; or the planning, repair, rehabilitation, acquisition or construction of buildings or facilities. Funds may not be used for any purposes other than those approved in the grant award documents.

Section 720 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012 (Pub.L. No. 112-55) limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

Funds made available under Biodiesel Education shall not be used for the construction of a new building or facility or the acquisition, expansion, remodeling, or alteration of an existing building or facility (including site grading and improvement, and architect fees).

(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;

(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

10.307 ORGANIC AGRICULTURE RESEARCH AND EXTENSION
OBJECTIVES:
Facilitate the development of organic agriculture production, breeding, and processing methods. Functionally identify soil microbial communities and ways to manage microbial dynamics to enhance nutrient cycling and disease suppression; Develop systemic approaches to weed, insect and disease management; Prevent, control, and treat internal and external parasites in various livestock species; and Breed crops for disease and insect resistance, good yield in a biologically diverse system, compatibility with intercrops, good response to organic fertilizer sources, horizontal resistance (traits determined by multiple genes).
Evaluate the potential economic benefits to producers and processors who use organic methods.
Analyze potential economic costs, returns and risks of organic production systems;
Use environmental valuation tools to quantify externalities of producing food, and compare externalities of producing organic and conventional food;
- Analyze price and market structures, including ability of small, medium, and large-scale growers to access different markets, in order to frame policies that minimize concentration within the industry; and
- Analyze marketing channels to document how organic food is distributed, what share of the organic food dollar is returned to the farmer, and the implications of large-scale manufacturers entering the organic market.
Explore international trade opportunities for organically grown and processed agricultural commodities.
Compare compatibility of certification standards used in different parts of the world, with the ultimate goal of harmonization and reciprocity;
Undertake marketing studies of international consumer demand for U.S. produced organic goods; and Perform Welfare analyses (quantified gains and losses for producers and consumers) of trade policies affecting international competitiveness, including implementation of the National Organic Program, domestic support programs such as the Conservation Security Act, country of origin labeling, GMO labeling, etc.
Determine desirable traits for organic commodities.
Examine relationships between nutrients in the soil and nutrients in the food grown on that soil, including long-term soil nutrient and crop nutrient profiles under conventional and organic management;
Perform comparisons of nutrient levels between organic and conventional crops and relationship, if any, between taste and nutrient profile; Investigate the role of post-harvest handling and treatment in the maintenance of quality in fresh market organic products; and Determine the reasons for consumer preferences for organic goods. Identify marketing and policy constraints on the expansion of organic agriculture;
Analyze opportunities and constraints to organic agriculture resulting from provisions of the Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002; Investigate specific barriers to markets, such as scale-based regulations that restrict family farm access to processors and/or markets; Study negative lender perception of organic farming and ways to change this; and Analyze regulatory barriers, such as lack of access to Federal farm programs, and developing solutions to these challenges.

AUTHORIZATION:
Section 7206 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (FCEA) amended section 1672B of the Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade (FACT) Act of 1990 (7 U.S.C. 5925b) amending and re-authorizing the Organic Agriculture Research and Extension Initiative (OREI). The FACT Act, as amended, authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture, in consultation with the National Agricultural Research, Extension, Education, and Economics Advisory Board (NAREEEAB), to make competitive grants to support research and extension activities regarding organically grown and processed agricultural commodities for eight legislatively-defined goals. See RFA Part II.B. for further general information and specific details. , 7 U.S.C 5925b.

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:
Special Note on Indirect Costs as in-kind matching contributions. Indirect costs may be claimed under the Federal portion of the award budget or, alternatively, indirect costs may be claimed as a matching contribution (if no indirect costs are requested under the Federal portion of the award budget). However, unless explicitly authorized in the RFA, indirect costs may not be claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution, unless the total claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. An awardee may split the allocation between the Federal and non-Federal portions of the budget only if the total amount of indirect costs charged to the project does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate; and Determine the reasons for consumer preferences for organic goods. Identify marketing and policy constraints on the expansion of organic agriculture.

RELATED PROGRAMS:
10.303 Integrated Programs

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:
Fiscal Year 2016: Building Resilience in the Northeast through Double Cropping and Diverse Forage Crop Mixtures.

The goal of this project is to meet the dry matter and forage nutrient needs of dairy farmers. Increasing cropping system diversity can increase yield stability and reduce the negative impact of variable weather. Guided by a stakeholder advisory board, the team will conduct farmer-focused socioeconomic research and field experiments on-farm and at research stations in NY, VT, and NH. They will quantify the productivity and economic viability of intercropping with intra- and interspecific mixtures of winter and summer annual forage crops as part of a double cropping system, and compare this double cropping system to perennial-based forage production. The research team will develop farmer resources on organic forage crop production and disseminate the information this new information through innovative extension strategies.
CIOA 2: Carrot Improvement for Organic Agriculture With Added Grower and Consumer Value.

Organic growers need vegetable varieties that are adapted to organic growing conditions and have market qualities demanded by organic consumers. In carrots, weed competition, nutrient acquisition, nematodes, and disease pressure are particularly critical challenges to both fresh market carrots and carrot seed production, while flavor, appearance, and nutrition are key market qualities. This project will deliver improved carrot varieties for organic producers and consumers; improved understanding of cultivar performance in organic systems; improved understanding of how carrot genotypes interact with the root microbiome to access key nutrients under limiting environments and avoid heavy metal uptake; and a breeding model that may be adapted to other crops for organic cultivar development. Organic farmers, students, and industry stakeholders in six (6) states participate in the breeding, variety trials, and planning aspects of the project. Project results are disseminated nationally.

Multi-regional risk analysis of farm manure use: Balancing soil health and food safety for organic fresh produce production.

Certified organic producers rely on manure-based soil amendments for crop nutrients and to maintain soil health. However, use of untreated animal manure in fresh produce cropping systems may introduce foodborne pathogens and increase the risk of foodborne illness for consumers. The project uses an integrated research-extension risk-based approach to address an urgent and critical need to assess current manure use by organic growers and evaluate pathogen survival time relative to soil health status. The long-term goal is to improve the microbial food safety of fresh organic produce (e.g., leafy greens, tomatoes, root vegetables) grown in soils amended with raw manure. The overall objective is to develop a customized risk-assessment based on good agriculture practices, rigorous microbial testing, self-assessment of soil health, and environmental factors.

Understanding Parasite Resistance in Organic Livestock and Using a Systems Approach for Control.

One (1) of the greatest barriers to organic production of ruminant livestock is the control of gastrointestinal nematodes (GIN) or parasites. The goals of this project are to:
1. Understand host mechanisms involved in GIN resistance/resilience by examining differences in immune response among susceptible, resilient, and resistant individuals and breed types;
2. Identify genetic loci associated with resistance/resilience;
3. Further examine successful systems approaches of GIN control, including fall lambing to minimize summer exposure of GIN to lambs, diverse forage and grazing systems to minimize GIN exposure and use secondary plant compounds for control; and
4. Work with farmers enrolled in the National Sheep Improvement Program to understand tools for selection for GIN resistance.

Participating farmers are providing 5,000 DNA samples and phenotypes. Fiscal Year 2017: Developing Multi-use Naked Barley for Organic Farming Systems.

The long-term goal of this study is to provide organic gardeners, growers, processors, and consumers with an alternative crop, food, and raw material that will be economically rewarding and sustainable. The team will breed for naked barley and a modest level of 4&546;glucan to create varieties suitable for brewing, feed use, and that will meet FDA guidelines for soluble fiber in human diets. The work will be conducted in five (5) representative regions/states - Pacific Northwest (OR, WA), Upper Midwest (MN, WI) and North East (NY) The outreach efforts will familiarize students, gardeners, growers, processors, and consumers with the benefits of naked barley varieties and provide guidance for capitalizing on the advantages these varieties can offer.

Economic and environmental sustainability of heifer development strategies in pasture-based organic dairy systems.

Dairy products constitute the second largest sector of the organic agriculture industry in the US. And dairy cow replacement costs are second only to feed costs in magnitude for the average dairy farm: between one-third (1/3) and one-fourth (1/4) of the entire herd is replaced every year. Given the National Organic Program requirement that ruminant animals be managed on pasture and graze daily throughout the grazing season, heifer development within organic systems is more challenging, and more costly than in confinement systems. The primary objective of the project is to innovate new strategies for organic forage-based dairy heifer development, and then to inspire widespread adoption of these practices for enhanced farm sustainability.

One-two punch for Organic Poultry Processing: Knocking out foodborne pathogens with plant derived antimicrobials and farmer training.

Both conventional and organic poultry products have been identified as major sources of Salmonella and Campylobacter, the two (2) most common food-borne pathogens in the US. This study aims to reduce Salmonella and Campylobacter on poultry meat/ eggs using plant-derived antimicrobials applied as wash, spray, fumigation or coating treatment at critical post-harvest control points.

Managing the Most Significant Biotic Challenges for Organic Onion Production Across the Great Lakes Region.

Organic onions are a highly valuable commodity in the Great Lakes region and their economic viability has been critically threatened by pests and pathogens that are difficult to manage. Stakeholders have identified onion thrips, Thrips tabaci, as the most serious insect pest and Stemphylium leaf blight (SLB), which is caused by Stemphylium vesicarium, as the most important foliar pathogen in this region. The long-term goal of this project is to develop and implement an effective IPM program for onion thrips and SLB that will ensure the sustainability and profitability of organic onion production in the Great Lakes.

Participatory Breeding and Testing Networks: A Maize Based Case Study for Organic Systems.

This integrated Multi-Regional Project will conduct advanced on-farm research to identify biophysical and social/legal factors influencing the performance of organic maize cultivars and dependent businesses. Objectives are to:
1. Build capacity that supports a participatory testing and breeding program;
2. Conduct a maize-based case study to explore on-farm factors influencing crop fitness and grain quality; and
3. Identify and communicate how organizational structures, sharing and intellectual property agreements can promote client-oriented breeding programs to improve our organic seed supply. Important inputs include promising cultivars, experienced advisors, and significant farmer input. Fiscal Year 2018: We anticipate making about 20 awards in 2018. Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: The final eight (8) RIIA Awards ranged from the lowest of $120,979 to the highest of $175,000.

Developing Resident Instruction in Food & Agricultural Related Sciences

The purpose of this project is to:

(1) increase the number and diversity of students who will pursue and complete a 2- or 4-year postsecondary degree in the food and agricultural related sciences;
(2) enhance the quality of postsecondary instruction in order to help meet current and future national food and agricultural sciences workplace needs;
(3) to provide off-island scholarships for students pursuing Bachelors degrees in food and agricultural related sciences; and
(4) to provide financial assistance for faculty and staff professional development.

The goal is to increase the enrollment or the number of students who declare a major. The number of students who continue to use the student lab is at a steadily increasing rate.

The project will increase in the number of graduates, continue the funding source for faculty and staff, and increase in the number of students continuing their education at the Bachelors level. They will be funding: summer internships and summer institute financial assistance.

Working in Agricultural Training: Education by Research (WATER)

The main objective of the this project is to enhance the agriculture, natural sciences and engineering curriculum through the involvement of students and faculty in research projects related to reuse of water resources for agriculture, including experiential learning and K-12 outreach and extension activities.

Audience: Five (5) undergraduates and one graduate student will participate including seven faculty and one extension personnel. An estimated of 100 K-12 students and 30 K-12 students and teachers will be impacted by the outreach and extension activities.
Activities/Products: WATER products involve outreach materials, workshops, and field experiences in order to promote field and lab experiences for undergraduate students. The project will engage students through mentoring them in educational agricultural research opportunities. Research faculty at the Agricultural Experiment Station will engage students through mentoring them in educational agricultural research opportunities. The project will engage undergraduate students in educational agricultural research programs with the long-term goal of institutionalizing the improved approach to the various engineering departments at the institution. By intersecting engineering know-how with agricultural opportunity areas, the initiative should impact the islands economic activity.

Promoting local research and internship experiences in the US for undergraduate students

This project will address the need to provide new learning paradigms and research through an undergraduate research program (URP), and a summer internship what will continue increasing the number of applications, enrollments and the retention rates on two campuses of the University. This institution has the capacity (faculty, laboratory space and equipment) to admit additional students and increase enrollments in the graduate programs, especially in food, agriculture, renewable natural resources and environment fields. Students from UPR-Ag majoring in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM) disciplines will be exposed to the opportunities of applying their basic knowledge to research problems related to FARNRE. Two mid-career young faculty members will be given the opportunity to renew their theoretical and applied knowledge and skills in the areas of assisted reproductive techniques, one, and food science microbiology, the other. They will be able to incorporate the obtained knowledge in their courses and research as well as in their activities as mentors of the institution funded by the project as well as enhance professional relations with the hosting institution. This project is aligned with the institutions long range goals as they are contained in its mission statement. The present tight fiscal situation at the campus, which is expected to continue, poses a challenge for the funding needed to accomplish the institutional goals established. This project will facilitate the development of inter-institutional partnerships and collaborations between at least three institutions.

Integrated Sustainable Small Farm Training in the Pacific Islands

The project will train students by establishing a field-based experiential learning program with utilization of the existing demonstration farm. Five (5) objectives of the project are:

1. Increase in students knowledge and skills of farm management and sustainable agriculture;
2. Increase in opportunities for students and public to gain knowledge of sustainable agriculture by attending workshops;
3. Develop students leadership skills, service learning, and oral communication skills of farm management and sustainable agriculture;
4. Develop student's written communication skills of farm management and sustainable agriculture; and
5. Increase the number of deliverables for agriculture education and extension program.

RNTA project: Engineering Teams Optimizing Agricultural Technology

Work proposed herein takes advantage of the strong engineering programs available at the institution to foster the optimization of agricultural technology. Such goal will be achieved by preparing and focusing teams of two (2) to four (4) engineering students to work on specific agricultural science problems impacting the islands. Attainment of such objective requires the establishment of a curricular sequence in Agricultural Science that allows Engineering students to grasp fundamental knowledge of agriculture. The curricular sequence includes a capstone/design course that requires application of the Engineering tools to a current problem of the islands agriculture. Student capstone design project will be identified after interaction with stakeholders (e.g., Extension agents, farmer or professional associations, government officials, industry representatives).

The project starts by testing the strategy at Industrial and Mechanical Engineering with the long-term goal of institutionalizing the improved approach to the various engineering departments at the institution. By intersecting engineering know-how with agricultural opportunity areas, the initiative should impact the islands economic activity.

RNTA Project: Developing Resident Instruction in Food & Agriculture Related Sciences at Community College

RNTA funding will continue to support three (3) full-time instructors, which has resulted in increase in enrollment, number of graduates, students receiving scholarships and stipends, and students participating in experiential learning programs. Continued support from RNTA will help to ensure further successes in the institutions long-term measures. The project goals focuses on three (3) Educational Need Areas (ENA): ENA (1) Faculty Preparation & Enhancement for Teaching, ENA (2) Student Experiential Learning, and ENA (3) Student Recruitment, Retention, and Educational Equity. With the ENAs as a guiding tool, the objectives of the project are: to maintain a funding source for faculty; to participate in a Summer Internship project with insular area colleges/universities; to provide local and regional summer internships; to provide Summer Institute scholarships; to provide off-island scholarships for students pursuing Bachelors degrees in food and agricultural related sciences; and to provide financial support for faculty and staff professional development. These objectives will help the institution meet its outcomes and overall NIFA objectives of increasing the number and diversity of students pursing degrees in food and agricultural sciences, and enhancing the quality of postsecondary instruction to help meet current and future workplace needs.
RIIA grant will provide undergraduate students with opportunities to develop their problem solving and decision making capabilities and their level of technical expertise to enhance their overall college experience in leadership and to broaden the scope of their education. Students can use their experience in an Agriculture Extension Station (AES) research program to excel in subsequent academic ventures. A student will also be given an opportunity to participate in a summer internship in 2018 at another Insular Area Institution. The select student will be able to learn and experience tropical agriculture from a different region and share their experience upon return with other undergraduate students. Four students will also be selected to visit a continental US universitys main campus and off campus research stations focusing on tropical agriculture to expose them to other students and research institutions.

AGFEI Project: Rainwater Harvesting, Storage, and Micro-Irrigation for Water Self-Sufficiency

This project will merge existing irrigation infrastructure with rainwater catchment, distribution, and irrigation technologies that provide state-of-the-art solutions to water conservation and agricultural sustainability in the hot, humid tropics. They will construct a farm equipment building for storage and maintenance that will enhance the rainwater catchment capacity of the green water system. The green water system will utilize rainwater catchment, storage, and distribution at the AES field research site that incorporates micro-irrigation technologies. The goal of this proposal is that water use at the AES field research programs (irrigation and livestock consumption) will become self-sufficient from harvested rainwater.

AGFEI Project: A Science Hub Facility for Agriculture and Plant Protection

The project aims to substantially upgrade and modernize the facilities located in a Center for Excellence in Quarantine and Invasive Species, with a view to strongly enhancing the technological aspects of agricultural education and training in the island. The Center for Excellence possesses lab space, greenhouses and a quarantine facility for the study of invasive pests and pathogens, constituting a front line initiative for their control, before they affect the mainland US. The Center is currently host to 12 undergraduate and graduate students, being trained in modern techniques of pest and pathogen detection, monitoring (GIS) and biological and biomolecular characterization, including Next Generation Sequencing (NGS) techniques. The project goals are to: Firstly, to develop networking capability, involving the creation of an improved multimedia classroom in the Library, which will act as hub for live teaching and seminars, teleconferencing, and the creation of online content in both Spanish and English. This will enable groups in diverse parts of the island to easily access and contribute expertise and knowledge. An important function will be to establish connectivity with groups outside the island, in the mainland US, Caribbean region, and rest of the world. Secondly, to implement computational infrastructure that will facilitate high throughput analyses, in particular genomics that may be used as a training tool in undergraduate and graduate research and education. Thirdly, to upgrade existing experimental equipment to the state of the art. This will include digitization and improvement of microscopic equipment, acquisition of high throughput sample processing equipment such as DNA automated extraction for sampling screening and biological process documentation. Fiscal Year 2018: For FY 2018, it is projected that approximately 15-20 applications will be received, and approximately seven (7) to eight (8) awards will be made.

Specific data is not yet available. Pertinent data to be provided by Program at a future date.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:
Fiscal Year 2016: For the Fiscal Year (FY) 2016 award cycle, approximately $48,250,396 million was available for the Specialty Crop Research Initiative (SCRI) program and $21,947,099 million was available for the Emergency Citrus Research and Extension Program (CDRE).

Pre-applications were solicited separately for each program and subject to separate stakeholder relevancy reviews. A total of 120 pre-applications were received for SCRI and 38 pre-applications were received for CDRE.

Following the relevancy review processes, 61 full applications were solicited for SCRI and 21 for CDRE.

Separate scientific merit panels were then convened to evaluate the scientific quality of the applications and to combine that evaluation with the results of the relevancy review. Panelists included faculty from land grant and non-land grant colleges and universities, industry scientists, and practitioners from the food and agricultural sciences community.

NIFA made 18 new SCRI awards (approximately $37 million), which translates into a 30% success rate for full applications. When the pre-application success rate is included, the combined success rate for applicants is 15%.

In addition, seven (7) SCRI continuation awards were made for approximately $12 million.

NIFA made five (5) new CDRE awards (approximately $18.4 million), which translates into a 24% success rate for full applications.

When the pre-application success rate is included, the combined success rate for CDRE applicants is 13.2%. Fiscal Year 2017: For the Fiscal Year (FY) 2017 award cycle, approximately $47,927,218 million was available for the SCRI program and approximately $21,653,967 million for CDRE.
Pre-applications were solicited separately for each program and subject to separate stakeholder relevancy reviews.

A total of 155 pre-applications were received for SSCRI and 42 pre-applications were received for CDRE.

Following the relevancy review processes, 83 full applications were solicited for SSCRI and 25 for CDRE.

Separate scientific merit panels were then convened to evaluate the scientific quality of the applications and to combine that evaluation with the results of the relevancy review. Panelists included faculty from land grant and non-land grant colleges and universities, industry scientists, and practitioners from the food and agricultural sciences community.

NIFA made 12 new SSCRI awards (approximately $35 million), which translates into a 14% success rate for full applications. When the pre-application success rate is included, the combined success rate for applicants is 7%.

In addition, five (5) SSCRI continuation awards were made for approximately $13 million.

For CDRE, the FY 2017 merit review panel has not convened, so information is not yet available for new awards. Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date. NIFA anticipates funding one (1) continuation award (approximately $6 million), Fiscal Year 2018: For the Fiscal Year (FY) 2018 award cycle, approximately $48.182,084 million is projected to be available for the SSCRI program and $21,724,816 million for CDRE.

Relevancy review of pre-applications will be followed by a scientific merit review of solicited full applications. These sequential review steps are conducted separately for SSCRI and CDRE.

NIFA anticipates funding five (5) continuation awards for SSCRI (approximately $16 million) and two (2) continuation awards for CDRE (approximately $4 million).

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:
Fiscal Year 2016: MANAGEMENT OF BROWN MARMORATED STINK BUG IN US SPECIALTY CROPS
The brown marmorated stink bug (BMSB) is an invasive insect that first appeared as a severe economic pest of specialty crops in the Mid-Atlantic in 2010. It has since spread to 43 states and is now a threat to specialty crops across much of the US. This project will improve our knowledge of BMSB risk to crops through enhanced understanding of agroecology and landscape ecology, implement widespread biological control of BMSB with an exotic Asian parasitoid and native natural enemies, and develop management tools and strategies compatible with biological control and informed by risk from landscape factors. We will continue to determine the economic consequences of BMSB damage and how it is reduced by specific management strategies, and deliver science-based information with a robust and diversified outreach program.

PROTECTING POLLINATORS WITH ECONOMICALLY FEASIBLE AND ENVIRONMENTALLY SOUND ORNAMENTAL HORTICULTURE
Recent scientific and public awareness about the status of domesticated and native pollinators in North America has led to consumers intentionally planting pollinator-friendly plants. Identifying ornamental horticulture plants that support pollinator populations will open new markets for growers. This address threats to specialty crop pollinators by:

(1) identifying pollinator attractiveness of top selling crops;
(2) filling specific regulatory data gaps for pollinator risk assessment of systemic insecticide residues within ornamental horticulture crops;
(3) comparing current pest management practices with alternative strategies;
(4) providing guidance to growers and landscape managers with updated Best Management Practices; and
(5) developing outreach tools for multiple stakeholder audiences. Ultimately, this project will aid in reaching the Presidents goal of seven (7) million acres of restored or enhanced pollinator habitat by providing growers and landscape managers the knowledge to address pests while producing high quality plants for pollinator forage.

SOLID SET CANOPY DELIVERY SYSTEMS: AND EFFICIENT, SUSTAINABLE AND SAFER SPRAY TECHNOLOGY FOR TREE FRUIT
This multi-region project has a national scope completing the development and delivery of Solid Set Canopy Delivery Systems (SSCDS) for high-density tree fruit production and evaluate SSCDS spray coverage for additional perennial fruit crops. SSCDS consist of a network of microsprayers positioned in the tree canopy/trellis and connected to a pumping/mixing station. SSCDS application virtually eliminates applicator exposure common to tractor-based sprayers, while increasing farmers ability to apply sprays during critical weather periods. SSCDS would make frequent applications at low rates possible for modern agricultural chemicals, including nutrients and reduced-risk pesticides, to improve efficacy of soft impact IPM programs and reduce soil fertilizer levels. The specific objectives for this proposal are:

(1) Optimize SSCDS technologies for modern orchard architectures for improved spray material application efficacy;
(2) Determine and test SSCDS applications for standard and novel fruit production operations;
(3) Determine the economic benefits and costs associated with SSCDS and identify non-economic barriers to grower adoption of SSCDS; and
(4) Develop and deliver extension and outreach activities and materials including field scale and on-farm demonstrations to increase producer knowledge and adoption of SSCDS technologies.

FOOD SAFETY INNOVATIONS AND PREVENTIVE CONTROLS
DURING FRESH AND FRESH-CUT PRODUCE WASHING, PACKAGING, AND RETAIL DISPLAY
Foodborne illness outbreaks associated with contaminated produce negatively impact public health, consumer confidence, the produce industry's economic well-being, and progress toward national nutritional goals. To reduce food safety risk, this project holistically addresses key steps in the supply chain where risk factors profoundly impact food safety, and controls are also feasible. Specifically, we will:

(1) develop and validate preventive controls for cross-contamination during packinghouse and fresh-cut processing operations;
(2) evaluate food safety improvement in non-intensive fresh-cut washing; and
(3) advance scientific understanding of fresh-cut washing and sanitizing processes, and develop novel technologies to improve efficiency;
(4) field test, in cooperating retail stores, an energy-efficient approach to improve temperature control and prevent pathogen proliferation in fresh-cut leafy greens; and
(5) perform cost-benefit analysis and outreach to stakeholders to facilitate technology adoption.

Project outcomes will enable development, validation, and adoption of science- and risk-based food safety standards and control limits, support implementation of the Food Safety Modernization Act, and benefit consumers, processors, packers, and retailers.

ACCELERATING THE DEVELOPMENT, EVALUATION, AND ADOPTION OF NEW APPLE ROOTSTOCK TECHNOLOGIES TO IMPROVE APPLE GROWERS PROFITABILITY AND SUSTAINABILITY
The deficiencies of current apple rootstocks create an urgency to develop and adopt new improved rootstocks. Through this project, we seek to accelerate the development, evaluation and adoption of improved apple rootstocks by targeting research areas, not currently being addressed, which will result in more efficient rootstock development and improved implementation by growers and nurseries. We will focus on both evaluating new candidate rootstocks and identifying genetic markers for difficult to phenotype complex root traits like replant disease tolerance, nutrient uptake and partitioning (especially calcium), low/high pH and salinity to improve tolerance of rootstocks to these biotic and abiotic stresses, and improve fruit quality of high value cultivars such as Honeycrop. Fiscal Year 2017: VitisGen2: Application of Next Generation Technologies to Accelerate Grapevine Cultivar Development Recent analyses have emphasized the economic and environmental importance of developing new grape cultivars with high fruit quality (FQ) and resistance to powdery mildew (PM). An Advisory Panel of table, juice, raisin and wine grape industry members concurs that high-quality, PM-resistant cultivars are a top priority. The proposed project (VitisGen2) will: i) expand on VitisGen progress in developing novel economic, phenotyping and genetics knowledge and tools related to new grape cultivars; and ii) translate these and previous VitisGen innovations into new applications for improving grape breeding programs and managing existing vineyard plantings.

The Economics team will evaluate the consequences of introducing new grape traits, including impacts upon cost, yield, revenue, profit, pesticide use, and the environment. The Phenotyping team will develop novel high-throughput methods, and apply these along with proven approaches to characterize a range of phenotypes, such as PM resistance durability and undesirable fruit qualities, as well as locally important traits. The Genetics team will couple phenotyping results with high-resolution genetic maps, which can be combined with genome assembly and RNA-Seq analyses to develop inexpensive, high-resolution markers spanning key genes. Finally, the Outreach team will communicate scientific opportunities and discoveries, and provide stakeholders with knowledge of the benefits of adopting new high-quality PM-resistant cultivars along with new tools for characterizing PM and FQ in their existing plantings. The proposed work aligns withSCRI program goals by utilizing plant breeding and genomics approaches to improve grape characteristics and enhance the economic and environmental sustainability of grape production.

Table to Farm: A sustainable, systems-based approach for a safer and healthier melon supply chain in the U.S.
This project aims to improve the safety and quality of U.S.-produced melons (Cucumis melo L.) and therefore addresses SCRI goals by: strengthening the competitiveness and sustainability of the U.S. specialty crop industry and bolstering consumer confidence in regional melon production; expanding the diversity of adapted varieties through breeding, and improving production practices.

It is anticipated that this stakeholder-driven approach will lead to development of unique cultivars (with improved quality, safety, and sensory attributes) and increase consumer loyalty and repeat purchasing (SCRI focus areas 1, 3, and 5).

The project's objectives are:
(1) Identify and analyze factors influencing consumer behaviors related to melon purchase and consumption;
(2) Develop cultivars that address producer and consumer needs using genomics-assisted selection and breeding to harness genetic diversity of melon varieties and improve nutritional quality, flavor, safety, and stress resistance;
(3) Develop region- and cultivar-specific agronomic practices and technologies to improve production efficiency, nutritional quality and safety attributes;
(4) Develop region- and cultivar-specific agronomic practices and technologies to improve production efficiency, nutritional quality and safety attributes; and
(5) Establish a Center of Excellence Research, Extension, and Outreach Program for Melons with a focus on improving consumer awareness and meeting the consumer demand for safe, high-quality melons that exceed minimum quality standards thereby resulting in profitability for producers and retailers.
Strawberry production is a $2.8 billion industry that provides livelihoods for many hundreds of growers and employs over 80,000 workers in the US. The industry was built around the use of fumigants to manage soil borne diseases and pests. Increasing restrictions on fumigant use due to health and environmental concerns make the development of effective non-fumigant based management systems critical for survival of the industry in the US. This SREP project brings together a national team of researchers and stakeholders to develop and implement effective non/reduced fumigant management systems tailored for specific regions, pathogens and pests.

Biologically-based techniques, notably anerobic soil disinfestation (ASD), crop rotation and cultivar resistance are promising alternatives to fumigation in strawberries; but their efficacy is dependent on environmental and biological variables. Improved understanding of management/environment/ pathogen/pest interactions with ASD is needed to develop site and pathogen specific management strategies. Any single biological technique is unlikely to provide efficacy in all situations, but combining multiple strategies should increase the reliability of pathogen control. Here we propose to optimize ASD in terms of carbon sources, combined use with biological agents and herbicides, reduced water use, nitrogen dynamics and genotypes, then put these together with crop rotation to design integrated systems targeted for specific regions in California, Florida, North Carolina and Tennessee.

Findings from this project will benefit other specialty crops where fumigants are used, and address SCRI priorities: identify and address threats from pests and diseases; improve production efficiency; and research on plant breeding. Fiscal Year 2018: Information is not yet available. Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

To establish a competitive grants program to provide funding for fundamental and applied research, extension, and education to address food and agricultural sciences.
TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:
Project Grants
USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:
Grant funds must be used for allowable costs necessary to conduct approved fundamental and applied research, extension and education objectives to address food and agricultural sciences. The competitive grants program shall address the following areas:
A) Plant health and production and plant products;
B) Animal health and production and animal products;
C) Food safety, nutrition, and health;
D) Renewable energy, natural resources, and environment;
E) Agriculture systems and technology; and
F) Agriculture economics and rural communities.

Funds shall not be used for the construction of a new building or facility or the acquisition, expansion, remodeling, or alteration of an existing building or... facilities (including site grading and improvement, and architect fees). Funds may not be used for any purposes other than those approved in the grant award documents. Funds shall not be used for the construction of a new building or facility or the acquisition, expansion, remodeling, or alteration of an existing building or facility (including site grading and improvement, and architect fees).

Funds may not be used for any purposes other than those approved in the grant award documents.

Indirect cost is not allowable if awarded as an equipment, conference, or post-doc fellowship grant.

Section 720 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012 (Pub.L. No. 112-55) limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded. Special Note on Indirect Costs as in-kind matching contributions:

Indirect costs may be claimed under the Federal portion of the award budget or, alternatively, indirect costs may be claimed as a matching contribution (if no indirect costs are requested under the Federal portion of the award budget). However, unless explicitly authorized in the RFA, indirect costs may not be claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution, unless the total claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. An awardee may split the allocation between the Federal and non-Federal portions of the budget only if the total amount of indirect costs charged to the project does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less.

For example, if an awardee’s indirect costs are capped at 30 percent pursuant to FY 2012 appropriated funds, Section 720 of the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2012 (Division A of Pub. L. 112-55), the awardee may request 15 percent of the indirect costs on both the Federal portion of the award and as a matching contribution.

Or, the awardee may request any similar percentage that, when combined, does not exceed the maximum indirect cost rate of 30 percent. Fully discretionary.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0324-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

REEport GRANT REPORTING:

All grant reporting must be completed using the Research, Education, and Extension project online reporting tool (REEport). Initial reporting (item a. below) is to be submitted through the REEport system. Information on REEport can be found on NIFAs web site at https://nifa.usda.gov/tool/reeceport and the REEport software can be found at http://portal.nifa.usda.gov.

a. Initial Documentation in the REEport Database--
Research, Education, and Extension project online reporting tool (REEport)
All projects must be documented in REEport. The NIFA contact for all REEport documentation is:

b. Annual Progress Reports.
All projects must report annually into REEport. An annual Progress Report is due 90 calendar days after the awards anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day of which the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period. The following information, when applicable, must be included in the Project Modifications section of the annual Progress Report.

1) A comparison of actual accomplishments with the goals established for the reporting period (where the output of the project can be expressed readily in numbers, a computation of the cost per unit of output should be submitted if the information is considered useful);

2) The reasons for slippage if established goals were not met; and

3) Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

c. Final Technical Report

The Final Technical Report is required within 90 calendar days after the expiration or termination of the award. The Final Technical Report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments made only during the final reporting segment of the project. In addition to supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:

- Identify equipment purchased with any Federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

FINANCIAL REPORTING:

As outlined in 2 CFR 200.327, the recipient must submit financial status reports by the frequency required in the terms and conditions of the award. The following are the financial reporting requirements for NIFA.

Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425:

NIFA uses the SF-425, Federal Financial Report to monitor cash. A Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due on an annual basis no later than 90 days following the end of the award anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day when the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period.

A final Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due 90 days after the expiration date of this award. The report must be submitted to the Awards Management Division (AMD) as a pdf attachment to an email sent to awards@nifa.usda.gov.

RELATED PROGRAMS:

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:
Fiscal Year 2016: The following represents examples of funded projects for active Programs:

(A) AFRI: Agricultural and Natural Resources Science for Climate Variability and Change
Climate Masters:
One (1) project aims to increase climate change literacy in the arid Southwest while supporting both adaptation and mitigation activities for different and diverse groups, such as tribal communities and Hispanic farmers through a planning and outreach program. Another project is developing a program that will help build climate resilient communities in rural Alaskan communities, including native Alaskan villages.

Climate and Land Use:
A project focused in the Southeast will identify and test climate adaptation and mitigation in fruit and vegetable supply chains using a holistic, systems approach based on crop, economic, and environmental modeling. Another Land Use and Climate project will look at how climate is impacting land-use decision in the inland Pacific Northwest wheat-based systems to help adapt these systems to changing environments.

(C) AFRI: Food Safety
Mitigating the Risk of Antibiotic Resistance at Critical Control Points in the Beef Cattle Manure Management System
Developing Computational Tools to Identify Critical Control Points for Mitigating the Spread of Antibiotic Resistance in Agro-ecosystems
Mitigation of Fluoroquinolone-resistant Campylobacter in Cattle
Mitigating Transmission of Antimicrobial Resistance on Large Dairy Farms by Reducing Behavioral Pathways of Exposure
Support for Hosting the International Symposium on Environmental Dimensions of Antibiotic Resistance

(D) AFRI: Sustainable Bioenergy
A total of seven (7) awards were made in FY 2016 for the Bioenergy Challenge Area in various program areas. Examples included but not limited to:

NEWBio: Northeast Woody/Warm-season Biomass Consortium
NEWBio aims to build robust, scalable and sustainable value chains for biomass energy in the Northeast growing short rotation woody crops and perennial grasses on underutilized or marginal lands.

System For Advanced Biofuels Production From Woody Biomass In The Pacific Northwest
This project is to ready the Pacific Northwest (PNW) for a 2015 introduction of a 100% infrastructure compatible biofuels industry that meets the region's pro-rata share of Renewable Fuels Standard (RFS2) targets using sustainably grown regionally appropriate woody energy crops, thereby helping to revitalize the region's agriculture/forestry sectors with establishment of a sustainable advanced biofuels industry that supports both large and small growers and brings jobs to rural communities in the region.

(E) AFRI: Food, Agriculture, Natural Resources and Human Sciences Education and Literacy Initiative (ELI)
REEU: Projects were funded that promote research and extension learning experiences for undergraduates such that upon graduation they may enter the agricultural workforce with exceptional skills. Successful proposals enhanced the capacity of institutions to produce graduates with skills needed to address challenges of the 21st Century in the Food, Agricultural, Natural Resources, and Human (FANH) sciences.

PD-STEP: Projects were funded that increase the number of K-14 teachers and educational professionals trained in the FANH sciences. Successful proposals developed pathways to identify and replicate best practices to engage youth in science, technology, engineering and mathematics (STEM) fields within the FANH sciences.

Predoctoral and Postdoctoral Fellowships: Projects were funded that will develop the next generation of leaders who will be actively engaged in agriculture, forestry, and food related research, education, and extension careers. Successful proposals focused on developing the next generation of scientists who will lead agriculture into the future by solving current and future challenges facing our society. The awarded projects also targeted talented, highly-motivated doctoral candidates and postdoctoral trainees that demonstrate remarkable promise and demonstrated the ability to increase the number of gifted agricultural scientists in the United States.

(F) AFRI: Childhood Obesity Prevention:
Starting Early: Expansion of a Primary Care-Based Early Child Obesity Prevention Program
This proposal is a multi-functional integrated research, education and extension project to evaluate the long term impacts of the Starting Early Program (SeEP) and to develop and evaluate a two-fold expansion of this novel approach to preventing early child obesity. This proposal fully integrates research to determine the efficacy of the SeEP intervention and key factors causing early childhood obesity, education of pregnant women and mothers as well as dietetic/nutrition and primary health care providers and extension into:

1) The Families, Food and Fitness eXtension community of practice;
2) primary health care setting; and
3) Supplemental Nutrition Programs for Women, Infants and Children (WIC).

Advancing and Expanding HomeStyles: Shaping HOME Environments and LifeSTYLES to Prevent Childhood Obesity
This multi-disciplinary, multi-institutional, multi-state, integrated Research, Education, and Extension project will advance and expand the progress of HomeStyles toward reducing risk of childhood overweight and obesity. HomeStyles, an in-home family intervention, enables and motivates English- and Spanish-speaking parents to shape home environments and weight-related lifestyle practices to prevent childhood obesity. Segment 1 of HomeStyles focused families with preschoolers (ages 2-5):

Summer Harvest Adventure: A garden-based obesity prevention program for children residing in low-resource communities
This novel proposal is in direct response to the AFRI Childhood Obesity Prevention Challenge Area aligning with the USDA Strategic Plan. The long-term goal of our enhanced Team Nutrition-based intervention, “Summer Harvest Adventure,” is to promote obesity prevention strategies (improve diet, physical activity) and help fill the summer meal gap for children, ages 8-11 years, residing in low-resource communities. The healthcare cost of every obese child in the U.S. over a lifetime is $19,000 more than his/her normal-weight counterpart.

Within the limit of funds available for such purpose, the NIFA Authorized Departmental Officer (ADO) shall make grants to those responsible, eligible applicants whose applications are judged most meritorious under the procedures set forth in the RFA.

Reviewers will be selected based upon training and experience in relevant scientific, extension, or education fields, taking into account the following factors:

(a) The level of relevant formal scientific, technical education, or extension experience of the individual, as well as the extent to which an individual is engaged in relevant research, education, or extension activities;

(b) the need to include as reviewers experts from various areas of specialization within relevant scientific, education, or extension fields;

(c) the need to include as reviewers other experts (e.g., producers, range or forest managers/operators, and consumers) who can assess relevance of the applications to targeted audiences and to program needs;

(d) the need to include as reviewers experts from a variety of organizational types (e.g., colleges, universities, industry, state and Federal agencies, private profit and non-profit organizations) and geographic locations;

(e) the need to maintain a balanced composition of reviewers with regard to minority and female representation and an equitable age distribution; and

b. Annual Progress Reports.
All projects must report annually into REEport. An annual Progress Report is due 90 calendar days after the awards anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day of which the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period. The following information, when applicable, must be included in the Project Modifications section of the annual Progress Report.

1) A comparison of actual accomplishments with the goals established for the reporting period (where the output of the project can be expressed readily in numbers, a computation of the cost per unit of output should be submitted if the information is considered useful);

2) The reasons for slippage if established goals were not met; and

3) Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

c. Final Technical Report
The Final Technical Report is required within 90 calendar days after the expiration or termination of the award. The Final Technical Report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments made only during the final reporting segment of the project. In addition to supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:
Identify equipment purchased with any Federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

FINANCIAL REPORTING:
As outlined in 2 CFR 200.327, the recipient must submit financial status reports by the frequency required in the terms and conditions of the award. The

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: Approximately 35 projects were funded in Fiscal Year (FY) 2016 with a 24% success rate for a total of $17,777,572 after legislatively mandated set-asides.

Funds were utilized to address unique training, education, outreach and technical assistance needs of beginning farmers and ranchers, such as land acquisition, business and financial management, farming and ranching practices, natural resource conservation, risk management, legal strategies, marketing strategies, and more. Funds were also utilized for educational team efforts to train the trainers and help enhance other beginning farmer and rancher education programs in the nation. Fiscal Year 2017: Approximately 36 projects will be awarded in Fiscal Year (FY) 2017 with a 25% success rate for an estimated total of $17,758,724. These funds were authorized in the 2014 Farm Bill.

The projects funded will work towards increasing the number, success and sustainability of beginning farmers and ranchers in the United States by providing them with the knowledge, skills, and tools needed to make informed decisions. Anticipated accomplishments would include growing new farmers, The topics addressed by Beginning Farmer and Rancher Development Program (BFRDP) projects are diverse, driven by the needs of the audiences they serve. Most projects provide education, mentoring, and technical assistance on a variety of topics spanning production, marketing, business management, and legal and human resource issues. Fiscal Year 2018: It is projected that $17,790,396 will be available to support between 35 and 38 projects in Fiscal Year (FY) 2018. FY 2018 represents the last year of funding for the mandatory 2014 Farm Bill Beginning Farmer and Rancher Development Programs 5-Year Funding of $100 million.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: The BFRDP program encourages projects that address a range of topics rather than a narrow focus, by stating Most successful standard grant applicants provide training and assistance with business and financial management, as well as production and marketing topics aligned with the BFRDP priorities.

Five (5) exemplary projects funded are as follows:

(1) A project funded in the North Central region worked with 56 beginning Hispanic, socially disadvantaged and limited resource farmers; 53% of these farmers developed enterprise plans suitable for FSA loan applications; 61% gained skills on sustainable production and food safety techniques.

(2) The Women in Agriculture project in Michigan worked on conducting and evaluating training programs with 194 participants in the program. 14% of these participants learned how to project cash flow, 14% improved on loan readiness, and about 1% tried out direct seeding.

(3) A project in the South working with 100% African American participants focused on specialty crop production. Of the 45 participants in the program, 100% completed business plans, 95% launched farm enterprises; and 56% increased their annual income by 15-85% from their enterprises.

(4) Two (2) projects farming for cash had 175 participants. They were trained to start farming production and business planning. 46% of these participants learned about marketing; 100% of these farmers learned about vegetable production for local markets; 44% of the participants started farming.

(5) One (1) comprehensive training program taught 92 participants how to start farming: 15% learned about fruit and vegetable production; 11% learned farm business planning; 24% learned small ruminant livestock production. Fiscal Year 2017: Projects scheduled to be funded in FY 2017 will address the concerns of socially disadvantaged, veteran farmers, new and beginning farmers, refugees, immigrants, urban farmers, women farmers and small farmers. Fiscal Year 2018: It is projected that projects funded in FY 2018 will be similar to prior years projects. Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

10.318 WOMEN AND MINORITIES IN SCIENCE, TECHNOLOGY, ENGINEERING, AND MATHEMATICS FIELDS

WAMS, Women and Minorities in Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics Fields (STEM) program

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

Section 7204 of the Food Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (FCEA) (Public Law 110-246) amends section 1672 of the Food, Agriculture, Conservation and Trade Act of 1990 (FACT) (7 U.S.C. 5925) to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to make competitive grants to support research and extension activities. The Secretary shall make these grants in consultation with the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education, and Economics Advisory Board.

OBJECTIVES:

The Women and Minorities (WAMS) in Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics (STEM) Fields program was authorized to increase participation by women and underrepresented minorities from rural areas in the fields of science, technology, engineering and mathematics, with priority given to eligible institutions that carry out continuing programs funded by the Secretary.

The goal of the WAMS program is to develop and implement robust partnerships to increase the representation, participation, and entrepreneurship of women in STEM careers, thereby contributing to national economic prosperity.

The purpose of the grant program is to support projects that: Provide STEM knowledge, skills and competency to Women and Minorities from Rural Areas with successful placement (a) in the workforce in STEM fields, or (b) as innovators and entrepreneurs adding value to the STEM fields in areas that have relevancy to the USDA Secretarys priorities.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Grant funds must be used for allowable costs necessary to conduct approved fundamental and applied research and extension grants to increase participation by women and underrepresented minorities from rural areas in the fields of science, technology, engineering and mathematics, with priority given to eligible institutions that carry out continuing programs funded by the Secretary. Program funds may only be used for research and extension activities in the training, outreach and mentoring of rural women and underrepresented minorities from rural areas in STEM fields relevant to USDA mission.

Funds may not be used for any purposes other than those approved in the grant award documents.

Funds made available for grants in this program shall not be used for scholarship or fellowship purposes, the construction of a new building or facility or the acquisition, expansion, remodeling, or alteration of an existing building or facility (including site grading and improvement, and architect fees).

Section 720 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012 (P.L. 112-55) limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

Special Note on Indirect Costs as in-kind matching contributions: Indirect costs may be claimed under the Federal portion of the award budget or, alternatively, indirect costs may be claimed as a matching contribution (if no indirect costs are requested under the Federal portion of the award budget). However, unless explicitly authorized in the RFA, indirect costs may not be claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution, unless the total claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less.

An awardee may split the allocation between the Federal and non-Federal portions of the budget only if the total amount of indirect costs charged to the project does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less.

For example, if an awardee's indirect costs are capped at 30 percent pursuant to FY 2012 appropriated funds, Section 720 of the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2012 (Division A of Pub. L. 112-55), the awardee may request 15 percent of the indirect costs on both the Federal portion of the award and as a matching contribution.

Or, the awardee may request any similar percentage that, when combined, does not exceed the maximum indirect cost rate of 30 percent. Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:
State agricultural experiment stations; colleges and universities; university research foundations; other research institutions and organizations; Federal agencies; national laboratories; private organizations or corporations; individuals; or any group consisting of 2 or more of these entities.

Beneficiary Eligibility:
State agricultural experiment stations; colleges and universities; university research foundations; other research institutions and organizations; Federal agencies; national laboratories; private organizations or corporations; individuals; or any group consisting of 2 or more of these entities.

Credentials/Documentation:

(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;
(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and
(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs): Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

Also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant under this RFA if the applicant has not been found to be technically and financially responsible. The Federal awarding agency may make a Federal award to an applicant if the Federal awarding agency has determined that the applicant is technically and financially responsible.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

This information is not required for this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: The Sun Grant program supports a national network of land-grant universities and national laboratories that are partnering to help build the bioeconomy. As described in the 2014 Farm Bill, this effort is conducted across five (5) regions and one (1) sub-region headed by a land-grant university to conduct annual solicitations that focus on improving rural economic development through the production of sustainable biomass feedstocks for biofuels and biobased products.

This represents a continuation grant and funding was provided at $2,238,000. Fiscal Year 2017: The program will continue to support the work of the regional centers identified through the merit review. The program will be funded through a continuation process. Anticipated funding level is $2,787,840. Fiscal Year 2018: This program is subject to congressional budget approval for FY 2018. At this time, the projected funding level is Zero ($0). However, if funding is provided, it is anticipated that similar projects will be awarded.

OBJECTIVES:
To strengthen the capacity of Institutions of Higher Education in Insular Areas to carry out resident instruction, curriculum, and teaching programs in the food and agricultural sciences through distance education technology.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:
Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:
The purpose of Distance Education Grants for Institutions of Higher Education in Insular Areas is to strengthen the capacity of Institutions of Higher Education in Insular Areas to carry out resident instruction, curriculum, and teaching programs in the food and agricultural sciences through distance education technology.

Grant funds must be used for allowable costs necessary to conduct approved fundamental and applied research, extension and education objectives to address food and agricultural sciences.

The use of grant funds to plan, acquire, or construct a building or facility is not allowed under this program. With prior approval, and in accordance with the cost principles set forth in OMB Circular No. A-21, some grant funds may be used for minor alterations, renovations, or repairs deemed necessary to retrofit existing teaching or research spaces in order to carry out a funded project.

However, requests to use grant funds for such purposes must demonstrate that the alterations, renovations, or repairs are essential to achieving the major purpose of the project. Grant funds may not be used for endowment investing. Section 720 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012 (Pub.L. No. 112-55) limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award.

Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded. Fully discretionary.

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:
(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;
(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and
(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Promoting Distance Education by Offering Out-of-Classroom Experiences for Students

This project will improve wireless networking capability at the institution and acquire distance education technology (mobile and portable videoconference systems, respectively). On- and off-campus faculty will be trained in the use of portable videoconference systems, and instructional material will be developed for synchronous delivery of agricultural practices to supplement our courses from the Agriculture Experiment Station (AES). In addition, the portable systems will be used to increase off-faculty mentoring in our undergraduate research program, and to promote AES learning experiences at open houses. This project perfectly aligns with DEG goals because it will contribute to better undergraduate students education and research experiences by providing support for the proposed DE technology. Use of DE technology during open houses for online synchronous promotion of agricultural experiences (e.g. AES) will motivate more high school students to apply to our academic programs; therefore, increasing student recruitment to agricultural sciences. Collectively, this proposal will also improve efficient use of resources (faculty, facilities and transportation); therefore, enhancing cost-effectiveness at both institutions.

Developing a High Quality Human Capital in Agribusiness through a Long Distance Program

This project supports the design of a Long Distance Program in agricultural economics and agribusiness. This project is based on Goal 2 of the DEG RFA: Develop and enhance educational services (including faculty development) to prepare students or faculty seeking a degree or certificate that is approved by the State or a regional accrediting body recognized by the Secretary of Education.

This project works on the Needs Areas such as Curricula Design, Materials Development, and Library Resources and Instruction Delivery Systems. This project will developing inter-institutional and inter-disciplinary cooperative linkages with the Department of Economics and the College of Business Administration (hereafter, CBA) of the institution and the Chamber of Marketing, Industry and Distribution of Food in order to develop sound online master degrees in agricultural economics and agribusiness. Hispanics are underrepresented in graduate student population in the U.S. (American Community Survey, 2015).

Developing Distance Education Capacity in Food and Agricultural Related Sciences

The Insular Institution will provide a resource base of at least 30 agriculture and food science related training materials for students, agents and the lifelong learners of the region through training lessons made available on-line.

Training programs based on tropical small island examples is not readily available. In addition, the training programs would add to the eXtension resource base. The institution requires a strong internet service to facilitate instructional sharing across the six (6) campuses. The project will provide web management assistance and improved connectivity at the two (2) most limited campuses. Through the improved internet services, the institution will be able to provide distance learning capacity to faculty and teachers of the local schooling system. For this, the project also designates scholarships for qualified professionals.

Innovative Educational Approaches to Addressing Climate Change in the Caribbean

This project will develop an innovative hybrid online/in-class course addressing climate change in the Caribbean. It will facilitate communication and collaboration among a multidisciplinary mix of faculty and outside experts working in consultation with the regional and local agencies working on climate change adaptation. The course will develop a cadre of students well versed in the issues of climate change and how agricultural, marine, and environmental sciences can help inform the development of adaptation strategies. These students will be prepared to help their communities respond and adapt to the impacts of climate change in the Caribbean. The course will be offered as an undergraduate and graduate level course, developed as a multidisciplinary and multidepartment collaboration with faculty at the institution in agriculture, marine, and environmental sciences. The course will be developed in consultation with leading subject matter experts across the U.S., including leading scientific originations such as the American Society for the Advancement of Sciences. The course will be developed in interactive consultation with local and regional stakeholders. Fiscal Year 2017: Water Ambassador Program

This project seeks funding for two (2) years to create a Water Quality Ambassadors Pilot Program through Distance Education that promotes a synergy between researchers, youth in a public high school on and Institutions staff. STEM centered DE seminars and presentations will focus on active research so youth may understand issues related to water quality, technology, agriculture and nutrition and weather and climate. This proposal will bridge other projects into one (1) pilot project to advance STEM education for youth and create DE pilot program. Its connected to the Institutions Observatory which uses climate data to build models when the observatory telescope should be opened and closed, and to the Department of Agriculture which is building a set of similar stations for data collection and water management prediction. Youth will be trained in Citizen Science research.

Improving Distance Education

The supporting objectives of the proposed project are to:

1. train five (5) (representing 30 percent, 30%) faculty members in online education methods and technologies;
2. develop six (6) agricultural sciences online courses;
3. evaluate the effectiveness of online courses in advancing agricultural education at the institution;
4. educate teachers and other faculty members about online education methods and technologies; and
5. improve wireless access to all laboratory areas assigned to the Department of Agricultural Technology.

Developing Interactive Distance Education Curricula for Delivery with or without the Internet

This project will address the following four (4) objectives, as follows:
(1) develop curricula for online delivery;
(2) develop a portable LMS/Moodle server;
(3) assisting Online Science and Math Course Development; and
(4) support teaching and teachers about technology in the classroom.

An online tropical arboriculture course will be developed that will be delivered on a portable LMS server that does not require high-speed bandwidth. Lack of high-speed bandwidth is a bottleneck for delivering courses in the Western Pacific. Faculty in the Math and Science Programs at the Institution will be given technical support for developing online course materials.

Increase capacity in the field of food and agriculture science by providing

The Institutions will use the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) National Institute of Food and Agriculture (NIFA) grant funding to accomplish its goal in placing food and agriculture science courses online. This will be the first time in the institutions history that food and agriculture science courses will be offered in an online environment. The courses are scheduled to be offered in the Fall 2018 semester through Spring 2020 semester.

USDA-NIFA grant funding will be used in the development of courses, recruitment and hiring of instructors, staff training, and procuring necessary supplies to successfully launch the online courses. The main objective of this project is to give students the option to enroll in online food and agriculture science courses while achieving college credit. Additionally, the development of online food and agriculture science courses may provide a pathway for students interested in pursuing a career in food and agriculture science.

Developing Distance Education (DE) in Food and Agricultural Related Sciences in the Insular Area

The project goals are to encourage use of DE and computer-lab equipment; enhance capacity of the institutions student lab and quality of instruction program, provide scholarships for students pursuing degrees in food and agricultural and related sciences, and to provide financial support for faculty and staff professional development. These objectives will help the institution meet its overall NIFA objectives of increasing the number and diversity of students pursuing degrees in food and agricultural sciences, and enhancing the quality of postsecondary instruction to help meet current and future workplace needs. Fiscal Year 2018: For Fiscal Year (FY) 2018, it is projected that approximately 10-15 applications will be received, and approximately four (4) to five (5) awards will be made.

Specific data is not yet available. Pertinent data to be provided by Program at a future date.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:
Fiscal Year 2016: LCI PROPOSAL TO BUILD AGRICULTURE CAPACITY THROUGH REGIONAL EDUCATION AND OUTREACH INITIATIVES.
The project will administer a Large Scale Comprehensive Initiative that will invest in human capital and integrate education and outreach to assist rural a rural county in creating prosperity to become self-sustaining, re-populating and economically thriving. The project will focus on:
(1) creating educational equity for under-represented students through high school educational outreach and recruitment;
(2) building leaders by integrating training within experiential learning;
(3) building agriculture career pathways for high school students;
(4) support agriculture business development through legal services, micro-credentialing and by building a regional farm and food asset map; and
(5) leading and facilitating economic development efforts. Project goals will be accomplished by working closely with regional K-12 educators to expand agriculture educational opportunities through College in the High School, distance learning and targeted recruitment activities and focus on improving academic support services to increase retention among young adult agriculture students.

The project will train students engaging in community-based experiential learning projects to be effective leaders and will assist agriculture entrepreneurs to develop new products and/or businesses by providing training and legal and business development technical assistance.

INTEGRATING AGRICULTURAL EDUCATION AND OUTREACH TO INCREASE PROFITABILITY THROUGH LOCAL FOOD MARKETING CHANNELS
The overall purpose of this capacity building project is to develop a new Education Program that is built around a new instructional unit on local food marketing to train future agricultural business managers (students) and to develop a new Outreach Program that will train current agricultural business managers about local food marketing opportunities. This project leverages an interdisciplinary and collaborative relationship between the university sector, the business community and the private sector in an effort to advance the quality of education and outreach designed to remove the barriers in local food marketing channels and increase agricultural profitability. This is accomplished by:
(1) developing new curriculum to increase the College of Agriculture faculty and student knowledge of the profit opportunities in local food marketing channels,
(2) using targeted outreach and training workshops to increase producer knowledge of local food marketing opportunities, and
(3) developing and distributing a local food buyers guide to increase consumer knowledge of local food purchasing opportunities.

Providing local food marketing training to students/producers and creating a new local food buyers guide will expand the institutions capacity to assist future and current agricultural business managers to become more profitable and resilient.

BUILDING CAPACITY FOR CLIMATE CHANGE EDUCATION (CCE) AND EXPANDING RESEARCH OPPORTUNITIES IN RURAL COMMUNITIES
The primary objective is to incorporate climate change education in the curriculum for undergraduate and graduate agriculture classes in two (2) partnering. This will be achieved by means of developing new in-class and web-based course offerings. Specific course offerings will focus on the following priority areas:
(1) Basic and advanced understanding of the science of climate;
(2) Basic and advanced understanding of climate change;
(3) Evaluating and measuring economic impacts of climate change on agriculture;
(4) Policy issues in climate change and agriculture - U.S/ Global Market related impacts of climate change on agriculture and risk management.

A second objective is to build capacity in the partnering institutions for developing both face-to-face and online teaching interfaces to deliver specific course offerings related to climate change, and include professional development of faculty for both campuses especially in design, development, and delivery of online courses.

The third objective is to encourage undergraduate and graduate level student involvement in teaching and research related to understanding of the science of climate, and its impact on agriculture. This will also be extended to student research in the partnering institutions by conducting a willingness to pay survey study among students with a focus on financial implications for dealing with climate change.

Finally, the fourth objective is to introduce climate change education in high school curriculum in the respective areas of the collaborating institutes by means of courses/ web-based materials with a focus on climate and impacts of climate change on agriculture, and by conducting a two (2) to three (3) day workshop for stakeholders. This will broaden the dissemination of the outreach materials to a much broader audience. The ability to develop online materials that can be accessed by anyone will also help to further disseminate the information to a wider audience beyond the service area for each university.

BRIDGING THE GAP BETWEEN FARMERS AND CONSUMERS THROUGH RESEARCH, EDUCATION AND OUTREACH
This research, outreach, and education project is designed to achieve two (2) goals:
(1) to bridge the gap between agricultural producers/farmers and consumers by analyzing how farmers markets in urban communities could play a role in improving both farmer livelihoods and the nutrition of low-income consumers with limited access to fresh fruits and vegetables; and
(2) to strengthen food and agricultural research, education, and outreach through community engagement and Service-Learning.

Specifically, the project will achieve the following objectives:

1. To develop digital resources and materials and to provide training to growers and consumers on the use of good agricultural and management practices to reduce the risk of foodborne illness.

2. To improve consumers' knowledge and perception of food safety through the development and distribution of educational materials and the provision of training to farmers and consumers.

3. To strengthen the capacity of farmers and consumers to make informed decisions about food safety through the development of training programs and materials.

BUILDING CAPACITY OF FOOD SCIENCE CLUSTER TO CONTROL PATHOGENS ON FRESH PRODUCE AT FARMERS’ MARKETS

The number of foodborne illnesses linked to fresh produce has increased in the last few years, causing significant economic losses, which are especially damaging to small farmers. The specific objectives of this project are:

1. Conduct a survey to determine consumer perceptions of food safety of locally grown fresh produce sold at farmers markets in two (2) States;
2. Build a research capacity of a novel mobile automated electro-chemical activation system to control food borne pathogens on fresh produce from those States farmers markets; and
3. Train small farmers and farmers market vendors through workshops and webinars on proper handling of fresh produce from field to market.

Training workshops for producers, handlers, and sellers of fresh produce will be held both in person and also as online and paper modules to be completed anytime. The main purpose of these workshops is to educate small produce farmers and other stakeholders on the use of good agricultural and management practices to minimize microbial food safety hazards. Fiscal Year 2017: Projects for FY 17 will not be awarded until the third quarter of the fiscal year due to the late receipt of appropriations. We anticipate projects will address current and emerging issues in agricultural research, Extension/outreach, and education. Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date. Fiscal Year 2018: This program is subject to congressional budget approval for FY 2018. At this time, the projected funding level is Zero ($0). However, if funding is provided, it is anticipated that similar projects will be awarded. However, it is projected the number of applications will continue to increase into the future and funding may increase to more than $5 million.

Information is not yet available. Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

10.328 NATIONAL FOOD SAFETY TRAINING, EDUCATION, EXTENSION, OUTREACH, AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE COMPETITIVE GRANTS PROGRAM

National Food Safety Training, Education, Extension, Outreach, and Technical Assistance (aka FSMA)

FEDERAL AGENCY:
National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:
Drug Cosmetic Act, 21 U.S.C. 391 et seq. Section 209 of FSMA added section 1011. Subsection (d) entitled National Food Safety Training, Education, Extension, Outreach and Technical Assistance Program. Paragraph (d)(1) requires the Secretary of Health and Human Services to enter into a Memorandum of Understanding or cooperative agreement with the Secretary of Agriculture to establish a competitive grant program within the National Institute of Food and Agriculture. This program will award competitive grants to organizations to provide food safety training, education, extension, outreach, and technical assistance to owners and operators of small and medium-sized farms, beginning farmers, socially-disadvantaged farmers, small processors, or small fresh fruit and vegetable merchant wholesalers. The authority for the National Food Safety Training, Education, Extension, Outreach, and Technical Assistance Competitive Grants Program is under Section 405 of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (7 U.S.C. 7625).

OBJECTIVES:
The National Food Safety Training, Education, Outreach, and Technical Assistance Program will award grants that increase the understanding and adoption of established food safety standards, guidance, and protocols. Grants awarded through this program will be carried out in a manner that facilitates the integration of food safety standards and guidance with a variety of agricultural production and processing systems, including conventional, sustainable, organic, and conservation and environmental practices carried out by the eligible entities. The assistance provided by these programs shall be coordinated with and delivered in cooperation with similar services or assistance by other federal agencies or programs serving those eligible entities.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:
Project Grants (Discretionary)

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:
The new National Food Safety Training, Education, Extension, Outreach, and Technical Assistance proposals are expected to describe Regional Centers that have a leading role in coordinating the development of FSMA-related training, education, and outreach programs and resources for small and medium-sized farms, beginning farmers, socially disadvantaged farmers, small processors, and/or small fresh fruit and vegetable merchant wholesalers. An outreach plan for conducting education and training to a cadre of regional FSMA trainers must be developed, along with an implementation plan for extending both training and technical assistance to the targeted audiences of farmers, processors and vendors in the respective regions.

In addition, the Regional Centers must work collaboratively with a National Coordination Center for Food Safety Training, Education, Extension, Outreach, and Technical Assistance to ensure that training curricula and resources cover core competencies across all funded regional centers, and to provide annual reports to NIFA on overall program objectives. Section 716 of the Consolidated Appropriation Act, 2014, limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their request for the recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of the institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

When NIFA is not the cognizant Federal agency. The applicant should use the current negotiated indirect cost rate established by its cognizant Federal agency (the agency that provides the most funds). If awarded, the applicant will be required to produce a negotiated indirect cost rate agreement from the cognizant agency in order to recover indirect costs. Applicants may request (i.e., budget) indirect costs using the lesser of: (a) the negotiated rate; or (b) the maximum statutory rate stated in the Request for Application, if any. If unable to obtain a negotiated rate from its cognizant agency, the applicant is not permitted indirect cost reimbursement. Rather, the applicant may only be reimbursed for allowable direct costs. Violation of Cost Accounting Standards is not permitted.

When NIFA is the cognizant Federal agency. If the applicant does not have a negotiated rate, and NIFA is the cognizant agency, the applicant must calculate an indirect cost rate in order to request indirect costs. NIFAs indirect cost website provides several sample indirect cost rate calculations. NIFAs website is found at: http://nifa.usda.gov/business/indirect_cost_process.html.

During the application process, the applicant is not required to complete the entire indirect cost package identified on NIFAs website. Rather, the applicant need only calculate an indirect cost rate to serve as a basis for requesting indirect costs. If awarded, the applicant will be required to submit a complete Indirect Cost Proposal (ICP) package as explained on NIFAs indirect cost website.

Grantees may not use grant funds awarded under this authority to renovate or refurbish research, education, or extension space; purchase or install fixed equipment in such space; or the plan, repair, rehabilitate, acquire, or construction of buildings or facilities. Fully discretionary.

3) Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

c. Final Technical Report
The Final Technical Report is required within 90 calendar days after the expiration or termination of the award. The Final Technical Report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments

supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:
Identify equipment purchased with any Federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

Range and Average of Financial Assistance:
If minimum or maximum amounts of funding per competitive and/or capacity

October 2017
The Food Safety Outreach Program was funded at $4.8 million in which it has an investment of projects focused on the delivery of customized training for owners and operators of small farms, food processors, small fruit and vegetable wholesalers, food hubs, farmers markets, terminal markets, and farms that lack access to food safety training and other educational opportunities.

The request for applications was published with a closing date of June 6, 2017. A total of 43 applications were received and were subjected to the peer panel review process. Twenty-eight (28) awards in the amount of up to $50K for each pilot award, up to $150K for each community award, and up to $400K for each multi-state award. We anticipate funding approximately 28 total awards.

The estimated success rate for the program is approximately 40%-50%.

In FY 2017 the AFRI Food Safety Outreach Program invested in the following priority areas:

1. Pilot projects to support the development and implementation of new and potentially high-risk, high-impact food safety education and outreach programs in local communities.
2. Community Outreach Projects that focus on the growth and expansion of already-existing food safety education and outreach programs currently offered in local communities, and
3. Multistate Education and Training Projects that will develop and implement multi-county, state-wide, or multi-state food safety education and outreach programs. Fiscal Year 2018: The projected amount available for FY 2018 is approximately $4,761,150.

We anticipate receiving approximately 70 proposals and project funding success rate of approximately 25%.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:
Fiscal Year 2016. NIFA has built upon the national infrastructure with a focus on the delivery of customized training to a very specific target audience. In FY 2016, we solicited for 30 pilot, 10 community outreach, and 4 multistate
This project goal is to expand bilingual food safety education and outreach projects.

Example projects include the following:

SEEDS FOR INCREASING TRIBAL KNOWLEDGE IN FOOD SAFETY (PILOT)

This pilot project will work over the course of one (1) year to:
1. Identify the specific training and education needs within Arizona-based Tribal communities focusing on the Gila River Indian Community (GRIC);
2. Develop culturally sensitive food safety training materials; and
3. Implement a food safety education and outreach program that meets the very specific needs of GRIC Tribal members and is also transferable to other Tribal entities across the State of Arizona.

HAWAII ROOTS FOOD SAFETY OUTREACH PROJECT (PILOT)

Kokua Kalihilea Valley (KKV) Hawaii Roots Food Safety Outreach Project will work towards the goal of enabling Hawaii's small and beginning producers, processors, and wholesalers to enhance the safety of their food products (including complying with FSMA regulations), while maintaining profitability, sustainability, and equity. Additionally, project activities will help to build the long-term capacity of our local food system to disseminate best practices through robust culturally-tailored outreach strategies. Objectives assess the specific food safety education/training needs, learning preferences, and knowledge sharing networks of Hawaii's ethnically diverse, small and beginning farmers, processors, and wholesalers. Develop a community-based, FSMA-consistent food safety curriculum and pilot its delivery to 80 individuals through on-farm training sessions featuring peer networking and knowledge sharing. Disseminate five (5) new food safety education/training materials and delivery methodology to ten (10) local stakeholder organizations and 300 individuals for broader implementation throughout Hawaii.

BRIDGING THE GAP: EFFECTIVE RISK MITIGATION THROUGH ADOPTION OF AGRICULTURAL WATER TREATMENT SYSTEMS (MULTI-STATE)

This project's goal is to equip growers with the knowledge to successfully implement water treatment systems on their farms. Fruit and vegetable growers are continually evaluating new practices to mitigate food safety risks in their operations. The finalization of the Produce Safety rule has set in motion many activities to help growers become compliant with this regulation. The project team has long-standing relationships with the produce growing community in our roles as extension specialists. They have received numerous questions and have had many discussions with growers who currently use surface water for irrigation or application of foliar sprays (e.g., herbicides and pesticides).

They understand that surface water can become contaminated with foodborne pathogens and do not want to rely on monitoring via water testing or die-off rates to assure the safety of the produce they are growing. While there are in-line water treatments (chlorine, peracetic acid, UV-light) to inactivate pathogens, there isn't a curriculum to educate growers about each technology; determine what would work best in their operation; validate effectiveness; and conduct ongoing verification activities (e.g. record-keeping). This project seeks to:
1. Develop stakeholder-driven curriculum to educate growers of all sizes and background about agricultural water treatment systems; Share the curriculum with growers and train-the-trainers; and lastly evaluate the short-term and medium-term outcomes through knowledge gained and adoption of this technology. This curriculum would help growers of all sizes make educated decisions on how to mitigate risk for their farms within the context of the Produce Safety regulation. Additionally, the team will coordinate hosting a Project Directors meeting for Pilot, Community Outreach and Multi-state projects in year one (1) with the Southern Regional Center.

EXPANSION AND INTEGRATION OF FSMA EDUCATION AND OUTREACH FOR BEGINNING AND Socially Disadvantaged Sustainable Organic Producers (COMM)

This project goal is to expand bilingual food safety education and outreach while integrating new guidelines established under the Food Safety Modernization Act (FSMA) for beginning and socially disadvantaged sustainable organic producers. The target audience requires access to customized Bilingual Land Based Experiential Food Safety Education, Training and TA that integrates FSMA guidelines to improve the success of their beginning farm businesses. Access includes services being offered in both English and Spanish by trusted educational partners in multiple formats. For beginning and socially disadvantaged farmers, an audience adapted and comprehensive approach to Food Safety Training is appropriate. This training (a proposed 3-week short course) would cover general topics such as Traceability and Worker Health and Hygiene, followed by Farm Reviews, Field Harvest and Packing, Packing Shed Facility, Storage and Transportation. This resource would also be incorporated into the ongoing onsite cohort practicum training and incubator TA, and also two (2) bilingual outreach and educational videos using course material and clips for all topics. This goal will be achieved through four (4) objectives:
1. Enhance partnerships of local non-profit Viva Farms, a land-grant university, a State University County Extension and Washington State Department of Agriculture (WSDA);
2. Develop, adapt, and implement food safety education and outreach integrating FSMA guidelines that can be utilized nationally;
3. Increase coordination and access to food safety education and outreach that removes barriers to participation of the target audience; and
4. Increase food safety knowledge, skills and practices consistent with FSMA guidelines of target audience. Outreach and Promotion Plan.

Partners will coordinate bilingual outreach using social media, network partners, list serves, print and radio marketing to reach the greatest possible percentage of our target audience. Use existing curriculum and resources: We will utilize existing education and training material such as "Bridging the GAP's", "A Handbook for Small and Direct Marketing Farms", and "Wholesale Success" to develop and deliver curriculum and make course materials and delivery bilingual accessible. Outcomes: The project is expected produce the following outputs:
1. Improved and effective partnerships between non Viva Farms, WSU, WSUDA, Regional Centers, NCC, USDA and FDA;
2. Expanded, Development and delivery of new two (2) three-week short courses, and curriculum inclusion in ongoing practicum courses and Incubator TA;
3. Increased in number of trainers with the knowledge and experience to effectively train our target audience during and after the grant period;
4. Increased bilingual materials and resources available in several delivery methods including Spanish Versions of "Bridging the GAP's";
5. Increase the number of target audience producers receiving education and improving knowledge, are committed to, or have implemented Food Safety Practices; and
6. Two (2) Outreach and Educational Food Safety Videos. Adaptation and Availability of communities.

Other similar farming communities will be able to access, learn from and adapt their approaches as a result of this project. If we are able to achieve our goals and objectives with the close collaboration of our key partners, communities can look to our activities, outputs and outcomes for strategic planning. Fiscal Year 2017: In fiscal year 2017, NIFA will expand the goals of the food safety outreach program to reach additional pilot, community outreach and multi-state education projects.

To date, 43 applications were received in which six (6) pilots, 12 community outreach, and seven (7) multi-state education projects are projected for funding.

Example projects include the following:

Preventative Controls Training for Small Alabama Fruit and Vegetable Processors subject to FSMA (COMM)

The long-term goal for this project is to prepare at least 75 percent (75%) of "small" and "very small" Alabama produce processors (required to be compliant by 2017 and 2018, respectively) for the Preventive Controls portion...

Revision And Expansion Of The Florida ‘Build Your Own Farm Food Safety Manual’ Program

Extension collaborators in Florida have been offering a Build Your Own Farm Food Safety Manual workshop since 2010 to assist small and beginning farmers develop food safety plans to improve food safety practices and expand market access through meeting third-party audit standards. In 2011, the Food Safety Modernization Act (FSMA) was signed into law which gave FDA new authority to regulate on-farm produce safety. These training materials were updated upon the initial passage of FSMA but well before the proposed Produce Safety Rule (PSR) was released and they have not undergone significant revisions since 2011. Due to the continued demand for the Florida Build Your Own Farm Food Safety Manual workshops along with the impending implementation of the PSR, there is a clear need to revise the now severely outdated curriculum to aid in the development of FSMA-compliant food safety documentation and practices. We propose to:

(1) revise the existing workshop materials and develop two training demonstration sites,
(2) deliver the revised training to expanded audiences, and
(3) develop evaluation tools and assess short- and medium-term learning and impact.

Participants will develop an improved understanding of foundational food safety principles and practices that support the production of safe food, as well as FSMA compliance, through the visualization of key food safety issues discovered through hands-on, problem-based exercises at a demonstration farm and packinghouse and they will be equipped with the framework of a personalized farm food safety plan to organize records required by the PSR and meet buyer requirements, Fiscal Year 2018. In addition to continuing to solicit pilot, community outreach and multisite projects. A stakeholder listening session was held in January, 2017 for consideration of future recommendations to the FY 2018 program priority. As a result, we intend to incorporate a technical assistance component that will provide support to small and mid-sized producers and processors.

CROP PROTECTION AND PEST MANAGEMENT

COMPETITIVE GRANTS PROGRAM

Crop Protection and Pest Management (CPPM)

FEDERAL AGENCY:
National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:
The Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2014 (H.R. 3547) provided NIFA with funding for competitive grants programs authorized under section 406 of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (7 U.S.C. 7626), including the Crop Protection and Pest Management Program. These funds are available to support integrated, multifunctional agricultural research, extension, and education activities. Subject to the availability of appropriations to carry out this program, the Secretary may award grants to colleges and universities (as defined by section 1404 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 3103)), as amended, on a competitive basis for projects that address priorities in United States agriculture and involve integrated research, education, and extension activities, determined by the Secretary in consultation with the National Agricultural Research, Extension, Education, and Economics Advisory Board., 7 U.S.C 7626.

OBJECTIVES:

CPPM was created to consolidate five previous NIFA programs with related purposes. CPPM will provide funding to address critical state, regional and national integrated pest management (IPM) needs to ensure food security and effectively respond to other major societal challenges.

The CPPM program supports projects that address high priority IPM challenges with coordinated state, regional, and national research and extension efforts. The impact of these research and extension efforts will be increased by the establishment of communication networks and stakeholder participation in setting priorities.

Effective FY 2014, the CPPM program provided support for projects to conduct applied research and development, extension implementation, and regional coordination.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants (Discretionary)

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

The new CPPM program provides support for three linked programs that emphasize research (discovery), extension (translation) of that knowledge, and enhanced coordination, collaboration and communications among related CPPM programs and grantees. The three program areas are:

- Applied Research and Development Program Area (ARDP)
- To enhance the development and implementation of innovative, ecologically-based, sustainable IPM tactics and strategies that address regional and/or national IPM priorities.
- Extension Implementation Program Area (EIP)
- To assure the implementation of IPM through extension activities and coordination with other EIP grantees and other CPPM program areas based on defined state, multi-state, regional, national, or international needs.
- Regional Coordination Program Area (RCP)
- To increase coordination and improve efficiency of IPM research and extension efforts; facilitate collaboration across states and disciplines; and promote further development and adoption of IPM through regional pest management information networks, collaborative team building and broad-based stakeholder participation. See Section 716 of the Consolidated Appropriation Act, 2014, limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, you should limit your request for the recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of your institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

When NIFA is not the cognizant Federal agency. The applicant should use the current negotiated indirect cost rate established by its cognizant Federal agency (the agency that provides the most funds). If awarded, the applicant will be required to produce a negotiated indirect cost rate agreement from the cognizant agency in order to recover indirect costs. Applicants may request (i.e., budget) indirect costs using the lesser of: (a) the negotiated rate; or (b) the maximum statutory rate stated in the Request for Application, if any. If unable to obtain a negotiated rate from its cognizant agency, the applicant is not permitted indirect cost reimbursement. Rather, the applicant may only be reimbursed for allowable direct costs. Violation of Cost Accounting Standards is not permitted when re-budgeting or charging costs to awards.

When NIFA is the cognizant Federal agency. If the applicant does not have a negotiated rate, and NIFA is the cognizant agency, the applicant must calculate an indirect cost rate in order to request indirect costs. NIFAs indirect cost website provides several sample indirect cost rate calculations. NIFAs website is found at: http://nifa.usda.gov/business/indirect_cost_process.html.

During the application process, the applicant is not required to complete the entire indirect cost package identified on NIFAs website. Rather, the applicant need only calculate an indirect cost rate to serve as a basis for requesting indirect costs. If awarded, the applicant will be required to submit a complete Indirect Cost Proposal (ICP) package as explained on NIFAs indirect cost website.

Grant funds awarded under this authority may not be used to renovate or refurbish research, education, or extension space; purchase or install fixed equipment in such space; or the plan, repair, rehabilitate, acquire, or construction of buildings or facilities. Fully discretionary.

10,200 Grants for Agricultural Research, Special Research Grants

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:
Fiscal Year 2016: Awards in Fiscal Year (FY) 2016 included projects for three (3) program areas in the Crop Protection and Pest Management Program: the Regional Coordination Program Area, the Extension Implementation Program Area, and the Applied Research and Development Program Area.

The following are examples of funded projects:

(1): Regional Coordination Program Area Award. A $1 million award, A Western IPM Center Led by California, Oregon, and Arizona, will brings together the expertise needed to successfully address high-priority pest-management issues confronting farmers, pest managers, communities, and others in the West. The Center obtains ongoing stakeholder input on IPM needs and provides extensive regional coordination for addressing IPM priorities and integrating IPM research, extension, and education in the West. The Center will continue to facilitate partnerships among researchers, pest managers, communities, and others in the West.

(2): Extension Implementation Program Area Award. A $186,000 continuation award, Crop Protection and Pest Management Extension Implementation for South Carolina to Advance Stakeholder Adoption in Key Commodities, will focus on economically important commodity and IPM priority areas for South Carolina including IPM in Agronomic Crops (corn, cotton, soybean and sorghum) and IPM in Specialty Crops (peaches, strawberries and vegetables including those produced on limited resource and minority-owned farms, and nursery crops). The main program focus will be on Extension activities to transfer scientific research and new knowledge to state stakeholders through a combination of formal and informal training methods, including field demonstrations and experiential learning.

(5): An Applied Research and Development Program Area Award. A $324,940 award, Development of Integrated Pest Management Strategies for Commercial Diaries: Formulating Dairy Total Mixed Rations that are Resistant to Bird Depredation, develop a new integrated pest management tool to mitigate invasive European starling damage in commercial dairies. Fiscal Year 2017: Awards for projects for Fiscal Year (FY) 2017 are anticipated to include projects on integrated pest management topics for the three (3) program areas in the Crop Protection and Pest Management Program: Regional Coordination Program Area, Extension Implementation Program Area, and the Applied Research and Development Program Area.

NIFA anticipates awarding the four (4) continuation awards for the Regional Coordination Program Area as described above to fund Regional Integrated Pest Management Centers at approximately $1,000,000 each. NIFA will provide pertinent data of these awards at a future date.

NIFA anticipates competitively awarding approximately 53 continuation awards for the Extension Implementation Program Area at approximately $300,000 each.

NIFA anticipates awarding 15 new competitive proposals for the Applied Research and Development Program Area for an approximate total of $4.1 million. These awards will fund integrated pest management research (single-function), research-led, or extension-led projects. Applied Research (single-function) projects will develop innovative, ecologically-based, sustainable IPM strategies and systems that address regional and/or national IPM priorities. Research-led projects enhance the adoption of innovative, ecologically-based, sustainable IPM strategies and systems. Extension-led projects extend implementation of innovative, ecologically-based, sustainable IPM strategies and systems by IPM practitioners and growers.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:
Fiscal Year 2016: For the Fiscal Year (FY) 2016 award cycle, $1,853,634 was available for grant awards.

A total of twenty (20) applications were received that requested a total of $4,870,015. A peer-review panel evaluated these applications in June, 2016. The peer panels included faculty from land grant universities and scientists from industry and a Federal laboratory.

Funds were available to support a total of eight (8) new Integrated Research and Extension Projects awards totaling $1,854,554.

The funding success rate for this program in FY 2016 was 40% for new awards.

This program seeks to improve the yield of alfalfa forage seed crops, improve persistence of production fields, reduce pest and pathogen pressure, improve germplasm by breeding, and reduce losses in harvesting and storage of the crop.

Fiscal Year 2017: For the Fiscal Year (FY) 2017 award cycle, $2,082,970 was available for grant awards.

A total of 14 applications were received that requested a total of $3,459,886. In June, 2017, a peer-review panel evaluated the applications. The peer panel included faculty from land grant universities and scientists from industry and a Federal lab.

Funds were available to support a total of eight (8) new awards as Integrated Research & Extension Projects totaling $2,083,835.

There was a 57% funding success rate for the FY 2017 program.

This program seeks to establish interdisciplinary and multi-location research and extension networks to address national priorities or regional science needs of the U.S. alfalfa forage industry. It supports the development of improved alfalfa forage and seed production systems, practices, and supporting technologies. Fiscal Year 2018: This program is subject to congressional budget approval for FY 2018. At this time, the projected funding level is Zero (0).

However, if funding is provided, it is anticipated that similar projects will be awarded.

Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

REGULATIONS, GUIDELINES, AND LITERATURE:
As an administrator of U.S. government support, NIFA works in partnership with grantees to ensure responsible stewardship of federal funds. Our grantees and partners are required to comply with all relevant rules and regulations. The following resources are provided to NIFAs partners and award recipients to support their adherence to federal regulations governing program performance:

Program Descriptions 269 October 2017
Fiscal Year 2016: 1. Impact of Microbial Inoculants on the Quality and Fermentation Stability of Alfalfa Round-bale Baleage

Alfalfa is a high protein and highly digestible forage for beef cattle producers and dairies. This project looks at microbial inoculant technologies to improve fermentation of alfalfa grass baleage to improve the appeal of alfalfa to beef and dairy producers. To date the program has successfully trained local producers on improving the establishment of alfalfa acreage as evidenced by increased skill by producers in producing high quality alfalfa and alfalfa-mixed baleage. In addition the team has trained county agents in successful management practices. Three (3) field days have been held.

2. Forage Quality Improvement in Reduced-Lignin Alfalfa Monoculture and Alfalfa-Grass Binary Mixtures

Alfalfa provides multiple ecosystems services in addition to being an important rotation crop. Reduced lignin alfalfa is a more digestibly feed and therefore will increase the value of alfalfa as a feed. This project will look at using new varieties of reduced lignin alfalfa grown in both monoculture and mixed stands. To date this study has established their plots of alfalfa in addition to mixed stand plots with orchgrass and meadow fescue. In addition, one (1) sample cutting was harvested and photos have been taken to analyze grass stands. The team has also begun doing educational extension presentations at forage specific meetings in throughout New York State.

3. Potato Leafhopper Threshold Revised for Alfalfa Host Resistance and Alfalfa Grass Mixtures

Potato Leafhopper is a pest that has a high negative impact on alfalfa crops and therefore alfalfa economics. This study will look at resistant varieties and potential mixtures that can decrease damage by leafhopper. In addition, this study will also create guidelines that establish threshold values so producers will know when it is economically advantageous to apply insecticide. This study will look at leafhopper in three (3) states: Maryland Ohio and Wisconsin. To date, the project has established field plots in all locations. Samples from the first year have been collected but no results have been attained yet.

4. Reestablishing IPM Recommendations for Aphids in Alfalfa Hay in the Low Desert

Currently aphids are a serious pest for alfalfa, but most of the time broad spectrum insecticides are used to control them. An economic threshold of aphid has never been established or alternatives looked at in the low desert. This project will establish an economic threshold and investigate the efficacy of selective insecticide management for aphids in alfalfa. Guidelines have been shared with growers and the team sees them using these management practices. Survey data showed 25% of producers are using targeted insecticides relative to broad spectrum. In addition, the team identified a natural biological control agent, and entomopathogenic fungi that infects aphids, and are starting to develop communication about this.

5. Developing Molecular Markers for Enhancing Resistance to Drought and High Salinity in Alfalfa

Alfalfa, the fourth most widely produced crop in the US, yield is limited by water. Much of the crop is irrigated and with climate change effects, adaptation to drought and salt tolerance will be beneficial traits. This project will identify germplasm with drought and salt resistance and develop populations with a high percentage of resistance. The project has identified 20 traits of interest and evaluated. Greenhouse plants were tested for four (4) traits related to salt stress: Dry weight, plant height, chlorophyll content and stomatal conductance and plant performance was assessed. 24 potential molecular markers have been identified that will be used for marker-assisted breeding in the future. Fiscal Year 2017: 1. Developing Regionally-adapted, resilient alfalfa germplasm pools

This project develops germplasm pools selected to improve various traits and targeted to Northern and Southern regions of the US. The pools give breeders access to unique genetic material. Last, the team will access this diversity and share results through field days.

2. Proximal and remote sensing of alfalfa canopies for early detection of insect stress and rapid integrated pest management decision making

This project looks at detecting alfalfa pest injury early through radiation technology. Specific focus is on the potato leafhopper. Technologies will be used to locate stress which will allow for targeted management.

3. Determining Genetic Factors that Influence Forage Quality in Alfalfa

This project uses Total Track Neutral Detergent Fiber Digestibility (TTNDFD) to determine the utilization and digestibility of hay by dairy animals. TTNDFD will be assessed on 200 selected alfalfa varieties and/or accessions from throughout the world. Quality differences in the varieties will be determined and linked to the plant genetics. Information on the best varieties will be disseminated to growers and plant breeding programs.

4. Developing an attractant for Lygus Hesperus derived from host plant volatile compounds

This project will improve alfalfa management practices by studying the chemical communication between alfalfa and an emerging pest, L. Hesperus. The project will develop alfalfa stink bug attractants by isolating a biological compound. The approach will decrease the use of pesticide used in alfalfa seed production.

5. Development of grazing recommendations and on-farm decision tools for managing alfalfa-grass mixtures in the Southeastern US

This project looks at alfalfa management in the Southeast. Strategies for grazing and decision tools to support efficient forage utilization and stand survival in mixed alfalfa pastures will be developed. Alfalfa can help producers improve efficiency without expanding acreage. Fiscal Year 2018: This program is subject to congressional budget approval for FY 2018. At this time, the projected funding level is Zero ($0). However, if funding is provided, it is anticipated that similar projects will be awarded.

Data is not yet available. Pertinent information will be provided by program at a future date once received.

10.331 FOOD INSECURITY NUTRITION INCENTIVE GRANTS PROGRAM

Food Insecurity Nutrition Incentive Program (FINI)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

The Agricultural Act of 2014 (Pub. L. 113-79) amended Section 4405 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (7 U.S.C. 7517) and established the competitive grant program, the Food Insecurity Nutrition Incentive program (FINI).

OBJECTIVES:

The Food Insecurity Nutrition Incentive (FINI) grant program is a competitive program. Projects funded under this program provide incentives to low-income consumers participating in the supplemental nutrition assistance program (SNAP) to purchase fruits and vegetables at the point of sale. The projects supported by this program have the support of State agencies and include use of effective and efficient benefit redemption technologies that can serve as a replicable model for benefit redemption.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

The FINI grant program projects will provide incentives to low-income consumers participating in SNAP to increase their purchase of fruits and vegetables. These projects will be evaluated for their success in increasing the purchase of fruits and vegetables and improving nutrition and health outcomes. Proposals must have the support of the State agency, provide incentives at the point of sale, and include effective and efficient technologies for benefit redemption systems that could be replicated.

All FINI grant program recipients will be required to participate in a comprehensive FINI program evaluation conducted by an independent evaluator and conduct a self-evaluation of their own project. The applicant shall perform a substantive portion of the project and no more than 50 percent of FINI Projects (FP), FINI Pilot Projects (FPP), and FINI Large Scale Projects (FLSP) as determined by budget expenditures, may be subawarded.

NIFA will allow applicants to indicate in their proposal if they intend to subgrant more than 50% of the award. This deviation will require NIFA approval.

Projects may divide their budget allocations between partners as it fits their work plan. (For additional knowledge or expertise that is not available within the applicant organization, funds for expert consultation may be included in the All Other Direct Costs section of the proposed budget.)

When preparing budgets, applicants should limit their request for the recovery of indirect costs to the official negotiated indirect rate or the de minimis rate of 10% of modified total direct costs (MTDC).

Any non-Federal entity that has never received a negotiated indirect cost rate may elect to charge a de minimis rate of 10% of modified total direct costs (MTDC). (2 C.F.R. 200.414(f)).

When NIFA is not the cognizant Federal agency. The applicant shall use the current negotiated indirect rate established by its cognizant Federal agency (the agency that provides the most funds). If awarded, the applicant will be required to produce a negotiated indirect cost rate agreement from the cognizant agency in order to recover indirect costs. Applicants may request (i.e., budget) indirect costs using the lesser of: (a) the negotiated rate; or (b) the maximum statutory rate stated in the RFA, if any. If unable to obtain a negotiated rate from its cognizant agency, the applicant is not permitted indirect cost reimbursement. Rather, the applicant may only be reimbursed for allowable indirect costs. Violation of Cost Accounting Standards is not permitted when re-budgeting or charging costs to awards.

When NIFA is the cognizant Federal agency. If the applicant does not have a negotiated rate, and NIFA is the cognizant agency, the applicant must calculate an indirect cost rate in order to request indirect costs. NIFAs indirect cost website provides several sample indirect cost rate calculations. NIFAs website is found at: http://nifa.usda.gov/business/indirect_cost_process.html.

During the application process, the applicant is not required to complete the entire indirect cost package identified on NIFAs website. Rather, the applicant need only calculate an indirect cost rate to serve as a basis for requesting indirect costs. If awarded, the applicant will be required to submit a complete Indirect Cost Proposal (ICP) package, as explained on NIFAs indirect cost website.

In the case of a for-profit entity, the non-Federal share of the award cannot include services of an employee, including salaries paid or expenses covered by the employer.

Applicant Eligibility:
Eligible entities include governmental agencies and nonprofit organizations.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Credentials/Documentation:
The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;

(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has compiled with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible on submitted organizational management information). REEport GRANT REPORTING:

All grant reporting must be completed using the Research, Education, and Extension project online reporting tool (REEport). Initial reporting (item a. below) is to be submitted through the REEport system. Annual progress and final reporting (items b. and c. below) also is to be done through the REEport system. Information on REEport can be found on NIFAs web site at https://nifa.usda.gov/tool/reeport and the REEport software can be found at http://portal.nifa.usda.gov.

a. Initial Documentation in the REEport Database--

3) Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

c. Final Technical Report

The Final Technical Report is required within 90 calendar days after the... expiration or termination of the award. The Final Technical Report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments made only during the final reporting segment of the project. In addition to supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:

Identify equipment purchased with any Federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

FINANCIAL REPORTING:

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: Double UP Food Bucks Flint: The Double Up Food Bucks in Flint, continues to enable any fruit, vegetable or milk purchase with Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) benefits to earn customers matching Double Up Food bucks that can be spent on additional fresh produce. The new transaction technology pioneered in Flint is allowing shoppers to carry their benefits on a Double Up card between the farmers market and participating stores in Flint. This technology is being expanded to additional sites that will launch in Flint in 2017, as well as two (2) new regions statewide. From June 1, 2016 through June 30th, 2017, in Flint, SNAP customers have brought home $277,689 worth of additional fresh fruits and vegetables. A 141% increase compared to the same time-period a year earlier. Fiscal Year 2017: The fresh checks for Fresh Produce in the Takoma/Langley Crossroads Food Insecurity Nutrition Incentive (FINI) Project aims to bring fresh fruits and vegetables to the Takoma/Langley Crossroads community, a primarily immigrant, low income area that straddles Marylands Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties just outside Washington, D.C. The goal of the project is to increase purchases of locally grown, culturally appropriate, fresh fruits and vegetables among 1,000 SNAP shoppers at the established Crossroads Farmers Market and in the markets growing Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) program through expansion of the Fresh Checks incentive program. By providing incentives to double the amount of produce low-income shoppers can buy, they will increase consumption of fruits and vegetables, leading to improved nutrition, and thereby, health.

The FARMACY Health Improvement Program will provide vouchers at a dollar per day per household member to qualifying patients at the MCHEC clinic facilities to be redeemed at local farmers markets for the purchase of fresh, locally-produced fruits and vegetables in Southeast Kentucky. In order to qualify for the program, patients will have one (1) of the following medical conditions: pregnant; juvenile onset diabetes; adult onset diabetes; hypertension; and/or obesity.

The program is also working closely with the Bell County University of Kentucky agricultural extension office. Fiscal Year 2018: Information is not yet available. Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

10.415 RURAL RENTAL HOUSING LOANS
FEDERAL AGENCY:
Rural Housing Service, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

OBJECTIVES:
To provide economically designed and constructed rental and cooperative housing and related facilities suited for rural residents.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:
DIRECT LOANS; PROJECT GRANTS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:
Loans can be used to construct, or to purchase and substantially rehabilitate rental or cooperative housing or to develop manufactured housing projects. Housing as a general rule will consist of multi-units with two or more family units and any appropriately related facilities. Funds may also be used to provide approved recreational and service facilities appropriate for use in connection with the housing and to buy and improve the land on which the buildings are to be located. Loans may not be made for nursing, special care, or institutional-type homes. Grants are in the form of rental assistance for some units within the underwritten property. The term for an initial Section 515 loan is 30 years with a 50-year amortization period. However, the term for subsequent loans and loans for special types of properties, such as manufactured housing, may be made for a shorter term based on the projects expected useful life. Each loan is made at a rate note rate established by the Agency as prescribed in RD Instruction 440.1. Borrowers approved for initial and/or subsequent loans receive interest credit, which reduces the effective interest rate for the Agency’s financing, thereby lowering the property’s rents. In return for this below-market rate financing, the borrower agrees to lease the projects rental units to income-eligible households at rents approved by the Agency. Borrowers operate on a nonprofit or limited-profit basis.

Applicant Eligibility:
Applicants may be individuals, cooperatives, nonprofit organizations, State or local public agencies, profit corporations, trusts, partnerships, limited partnerships, and be unable to finance the housing either with their own resources or with credit obtained from private sources. However, applicants must be able to assume the obligations of the loan, furnish adequate security, and have sufficient income for repayment. They must also have the ability and intention of maintaining and operating the housing for purposes for which the loan is made. Loans may be made in communities up to 10,000 people in MSA areas and some communities up to 20,000 population in non-MSA areas. Applicants in towns of 10,000 to 20,000 should check with their local Rural Development office to determine if the agency can serve them. Crop Insurance

Authorization:
The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation (FCIC) is a wholly owned government corporation created February 16, 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1501). The program was amended by Public Law (P.L.) 96-365, dated September 26, 1980, to provide for nationwide expansion of a comprehensive crop insurance plan. FCIC is administered by the Risk Management Agency (RMA), and promotes the national welfare by improving the economic stability of agriculture through a secure system of crop insurance. FCIC provides an actuarially sound risk management program that protects against agricultural production losses due to unavoidable causes such as drought, excessive moisture, hail, wind, hurricane, tornado, lightning, and insects. In addition to these causes, revenue insurance programs are available under which producers of certain crops are protected against loss of revenue stemming from low prices, poor yields, or a combination of both. Federal crop insurance is available to producers through private insurance companies that market and service policies and also share in the risk. Thus, the program delivery is a joint effort between the Federal government and the private insurance industry. Federal government subsidizes insurance premiums at a variety of levels depending on level of insurance coverage.

Applicant Eligibility:
Unless otherwise restricted by the insurance policy, owners or operators of farmland, who have an insurable interest in a crop in a county where insurance is offered on that crop, are eligible for insurance.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

In general, crops and acreage must be reported to establish insurance coverage for crop insurance and, if not eligible for crop insurance. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-110.

Award Procedure:
The insurance contract becomes effective upon issuance of a Notice of Acceptance by the insurance company. Notices of Acceptance for insurance coverage are issued upon a determination that the applicant is eligible.

The majority of the appropriated funds are distributed to eligible institutions based on a formula that considers the geographic extent, ecosystem productivity, economic contribution, and population for each state.

Since FY 2002, a small amount of these funds have been used to fund National Focus Projects which have served to expand comprehensive extension programs for forest and rangeland renewable resources on a national, regional, or multi-institutional scale through better program coordination, innovative technologies, and extension models that can be easily duplicated.

(b) Rural Health and Safety
The authority for this program is under Section 502 (i) of Title V of the Rural Development Act of 1972, as amended (7 U.S.C. 2602). The Omnibus Appropriations Act, 2009 (Pub. L. 111-8) appropriates funds under Division A, Title I. The Rural Health and Safety Education Competitive Program addresses the Individual and Family Health Education component of the authorization.

7 U.S.C. 343-349.

OBJECTIVES:
GENERAL: [As reflected in Part I.B. of the Request for Applications (RFA) or Capacity Requests for Applications (Capacity RFA)]

1. Smith-Lever (3b) & (c) Capacity Grants (formerly known as Formula Funds)

a) Cooperative Extension Programs at 1862 Land-Grant Institutions (formerly known as 3b & c Formula Funds)

These funds are used by institutions eligible to receive funds under the Act of Congress approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, entitled An Act donating public lands to the several States and Territories which may provide colleges for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts (Twelfth Statutes at Large, page five hundred and three) (1862 Land-grant Institutions), for the development of practical applications of research knowledge and giving of instruction and practical demonstrations of existing or improved practices or technologies in agriculture, uses of solar energy with respect to agriculture, home economics, and rural energy, and subjects relating thereto to persons not attending or resident in 1862 Land-grant Institutions in the several communities, and imparting information on those subjects through demonstrations, publications, and otherwise for the necessary printing and distribution of information in connection with the subjects. The purpose of this funding is to conduct agricultural extension work.

b) Cooperative Extension Programs at 1862 Land-Grant Institutions (Special Needs)

The purpose of this funding is to increase the level of agricultural extension work. These funds are used to support extension activities identified in the eligible institutions approved 5-Year Plan of Work. Special Needs funds are allocated to a State Cooperative Extension Service to fulfill a purpose or overcome a condition peculiar to the State, as compared to the country as a whole, or for a purpose not normally a part of the continuing extension program.

(c) Smith-Lever Special Needs Program

Funds support innovative extension education approaches to addressing risks, hazards and disasters. The Cooperative Extension Service (CES) has an important role in reducing the impact of disasters through extension education.
The Extension Special Needs program sponsors targeted projects that enable CES to assist in preparing for, providing an educational response to, and recovering from disasters. Education programming funded by this program will help communities, families and individuals become more self-sustaining by strengthening and increasing their resiliency to disaster. Some types of hazards and disaster related events funded in previous years include uncertainties caused by losses of economic infrastructure, severe weather or other natural disasters, security breaches, human disease, or high consequence animal diseases and plant pests.

There has been an increase in public awareness regarding the number and severity of disaster type critical incidents involving earthquakes, tsunamis, tornadoes, wildfire, drought, contagious disease, and terrorist events. The National Academy of Sciences Committee on Environment and Natural Resources and the Subcommittee on Disaster Reduction of the National Science and Technology Council have acknowledged the many effective roles that the Cooperative Extension System (CES) has played in disaster preparedness, response and remediation.

Within the states and territories, the CES has repeatedly served as the trusted community organization that has helped to enable families, communities, and businesses to successfully prepare for, respond to and cope with disaster losses and critical incidents. Once a disaster has occurred, the local extension outreach includes: 1) Communicating practical science-based risk information, 2) Developing relevant educational experiences and programs, 3) Working with individuals and communities to open new communication channels, and 4) Mitigating losses and facilitating recovery. Never was this more evident than after hurricanes Katrina, Rita and Wilma in 2005 and during the 2008 Midwestern Summer flooding. During and after these incidents, local Extension agents served as a critical communication node throughout affected urban and rural areas, particularly when traditional communication systems were temporarily overwhelmed or destroyed.

The Extension Special Needs RFA encourages proposals that specifically address one or more of the following six key target areas:

1. Education and Technical assistance through inter-disciplinary and multi-state disaster training programs and demonstration projects for problem solving, especially those which build upon already existing strengths, contribute to or expand the EDEN and/or eXtension educational materials related to disaster preparation, mitigation, response and recovery;

2. Collaboration with Federal, state and local agencies and other disaster relief organizations to support education and service activities that enhance recovery of impacted rural communities, schools, businesses and agricultural-based activities;

3. Long range family, community and regional planning projects that will enhance implementation of programs that serve public needs in preparation for, during and after emergency situations within impacted States and across impacted regions;

4. Communication delivery of key information that meets end-users needs in a timely fashion with consideration of potentially limited communication channels due to disaster situations;

5. Dissemination of credible, science-based information that is reliable and easily accessible even if electronic access is compromised; and

6. Integrated Research and Extension Planning Projects (up to $15,000) are intended to provide assistance to applicants in bringing together teams for the development of highly competitive grant proposals where extension personnel would apply for large grants (in excess of $250,000) from other grant programs (e.g., the Agriculture and Food Research Initiative and etc) and lead nationally important disaster prevention, protection and mitigation projects.

Fundable projects should support education and extension activities which:

1. Reduce risk through planning, disaster preparedness and emergency response by improving communication between the public, community leaders, state and Federal agencies;

2. Develop strategies and educational materials and/or programming in the area of emergency planning, infrastructure design and disaster recovery operation;

3. Develop community networks that provide real-time disaster education information; and/or

4. Develop or expand educational materials regarding disaster issues suitable for use and distribution by the Extension Disaster Education Network (EDEN) or the eXtension Community of Practice working with disaster planning.

The Extension Special Needs RFA encourages proposals that specifically address one or more of the key target areas.

Fundable projects should support education and extension activities which:

1. Reduce risk through planning, disaster preparedness and emergency response by improving communication between the public, community leaders, state and Federal agencies;

2. Develop strategies and educational materials and/or programming in the area of emergency planning, infrastructure design and disaster recovery operation;

3. Develop community networks that provide real-time disaster education information; and/or

4. Develop or expand educational materials regarding disaster issues suitable for use and distribution by the Extension Disaster Education Network (EDEN) or the eXtension Community of Practice working with disaster planning.

4. OTHER EXTENSION ACTIVITIES -
   Funding Restrictions:
   (a) Renewable Resources Extension Act (RREA)
   The majority of the appropriated funds are distributed to eligible institutions based on a formula that considers the geographic extent, ecosystem productivity, economic contribution, and population for each state.
   Since FY 2002, a small amount of these funds have been used to fund National Focus Fund Projects (RREA-NFF).
   NIFA does not require matching support for this program and matching resources will not be factored into the review process as evaluation criteria.
   For Fiscal Year 2017 appropriated funds, Section 713 of the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2017 (Pub. L. 114-113) stipulates that indirect costs are not to exceed 30% of total Federal Funds provided under each award.
   (b) Rural Health and Safety
   The Rural Health and Safety Education Competitive Grants Program provides funds to meet national goals for addressing the health and access needs of rural Americans.
   NIFA does not require matching or cost sharing support for this program and matching resources will not be factored into the review process as evaluation criteria.
   NIFA has determined that grant funds awarded under this authority may not be used for the renovation or refurbishment of research, education, or extension space; the purchase or installation of fixed equipment in such space; or the planning, repair, rehabilitation, acquisition, or construction of buildings or facilities.
   For Fiscal Year 2017 appropriated funds, Section 713 of the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2017 (Pub. L. 114-113) stipulates that indirect costs are not to exceed 30% of total Federal Funds provided under each award.
   (c) Extension Services at the 1994 Institutions Appropriated funds are to be awarded to the 1994 Land-Grant Institutions for Extension work and funds are to be distributed on the basis of a competitive application process.
   NIFA does not require matching support for this program, and matching resources will not be factored into the review process as evaluation criteria.
   Under the TCEP, the use of grant funds to plan, acquire, or construct a building or facility, or to acquire land, is not allowed. With prior approval, in accordance with the cost principles set forth in OMB Circular No. A-21, grant funds may be used to purchase equipment, or for improvements, alterations, renovations, or repairs to land, buildings, or equipment, deemed necessary to retrofit existing spaces and resources in order to carry out a funded project under this grant. However, requests to use grant funds for such purposes must demonstrate that such expenditures are incidental to the major purpose for which the grant request is made and no more than twenty-five percent of the project budget may be used to purchase equipment. Any equipment purchased with Federal funds is the property of the grantee or the subgrantee, as appropriate.

Indirect costs are unallowable costs, and no funds will be approved for this purpose. Costs that are a part of the institutions indirect cost pool may not be reclassified as direct costs for the purpose of making them allowable.

(d) Grants to Youth Serving Institutions (aka Rural Youth Development or RYD Grants)

This Program has not been funded for several years.

(e) Food Animal Residue Avoidance Database Program (FARAD)

Pursuant to Sec. 604 of the Agricultural research extension and Education Reform Act of 1998 (7 USC 7642(d)), applicants requesting recovery of indirect costs should limit their requests to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect costs rate or the equivalent of 19 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

(f) Federal Administration (DIRECT APPROPRIATION) - Extension Activities

For Fiscal Year 2017 appropriated funds, Section 713 of the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2017 (Pub. L. 114-113) stipulates that indirect costs are not to exceed 30 percent of total Federal Funds provided under each award.

Other pertinent details will be provided at a future date.

(g) 1890 Facilities (Section 1447):

In Fiscal Year (FY) 2009 NIFA assessed four percent (4%) of the appropriated amount for Federal Administration, distributed sixty percent (60%) of the balance equally, and distributed the remaining forty percent (40%) based on the formula found in Section 1444 of NAREPTA of 1977, as amended (Pub. L. No. 95-113).

Within each institution, the research, teaching and extension programs must each receive at least twenty percent of the annual allocation. The remaining 40 percent may be allocated based on institutional needs for research, teaching, or extension. No more than 60 percent of the total allocation should be directed to research, teaching, or extension. However, if there are unique situations in your institution which warrant a deviation from these guidelines, we will consider requests for reallocation. Such reallocations must be justified by the submission of a situation statement which describes the research, teaching, and extension facilities needs in your institution and how previously available Federal funds were utilized.

NIFA does not require matching support for this program and matching resources will not be factored into the review process as evaluation criteria.

The obligation and expenditure of funds awarded under these grants are limited to equipment, land, buildings and other related costs which are or will be used in the administration and conduct of approved research, teaching and extension activities.

In accordance with NAREPTA Section 1447 (e), funds provided for this program may not be used for the payment of any overhead costs of the eligible institutions.

Further, in accordance with Section 7129 of the Agricultural Act of 2014 (House Conference Report 113-333, to accompany H.R. 2642), Central State University has the Designation as 1890 Institution.

(h) Agriculture Risk Management Education Partnerships Grants Program (aka ARPA, ERME & RME)

For Fiscal Year 2017 appropriated funds, Section 713 of the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2017 (Pub. L. 114-113) stipulates that indirect costs are not to exceed 30% of total Federal Funds provided under each award.

Other pertinent details will be provided at a future date. Some funds are Fully Discretionary. Some funds are Mandatory. Some funds are formula-based.

Extension Programs at the State and county level are available to the general public.

Credentials/Documentation:

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;

(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA. If such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program, NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

SPECIAL NOTE: Please refer to the Capacity, Competitive, and/or Non-Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs) for further specific and pertinent details. The most current RFAs are available as follows:

Therefore, each 1862 Land-grant Institution must submit both a 5-Year Plan of Work Update (i.e., submitted each year as an update) and an Annual Report of Accomplishments and Results. Both reports were due by April 1.

States are eligible for funds appropriated under this Act according to the following formula: Out of each annual allocation, each State will be entitled to receive a sum of money equal to the sums available from Federal cooperative extension funds for the fiscal year 1962, and subject to the same requirements as to furnishing of equivalent sums by the State, except that amounts heretofore made available to the Secretary for allotment on the basis of special needs shall continue available for use on the same basis. Further, the University of Guam and the University of the Virgin Islands will receive $100,000 each in addition to the sums appropriated for the several States of the United States and Puerto Rico under the provisions of sections 3(b) and 3(c) of the Smith-Lever Act. Any appropriation made under sections 3(b) and 3(c) of the Smith-Lever Act will be allotted in the first and succeeding years on the basis of the decennial census current at the time the appropriation is first made, and as to any increase, on the basis of decennial census current at the time such increase is first appropriated.

The Secretary may waive the matching fund requirement [of 50 percent] for any fiscal year if the Secretary determines that the government of the insular area will be unlikely to meet the matching requirement for the fiscal year.

(b) Cooperative Extension Programs at 1862 Land-Grant Institutions (Special Needs):

Funds will be distributed to the institutions on a quarterly basis. See Appendix A of the Capacity Request for Applications (RFA) for the specific allocation.

Cost Sharing or Matching

1862 Land-grant Institutions in the 50 States must match 100 percent of the Special Needs funds they receive with funds from non-Federal sources such as State or county appropriations. The matching must be in the form of cash. Matching funds must be used for extension activities approved in the eligible institutions 5-Year Plan of Work.

(c) Smith-Lever Special Needs Program:

Pursuant to rules and policies governing Section 3(b) & (c) of the Smith-Lever Act, as amended through Public Law 107-293, no allotment shall be made to a State under subsection (b) or (c), and no payments from the allotment shall be made to a State, in excess of the amount that the State makes available out of non-Federal funds for cooperative extension work.

1. To comply with the matching requirements of the Special Needs Program, applicants are required to provide 100 percent matching funds from non-federal sources for all proposed federal funds sought in the application. In-kind and third party contributions are not allowed for the Smith-Lever Special Needs program. Grant awards cannot be issued until ALL required matching has been documented and verified.

2. Matching Alternative. Extension Directors may certify an offset of guaranteed non-Federal funds to your application. The signed certification of offset must be scanned and included as a PDF attachment (see Part IV.B.2.c.(1) for specific instructions).

3. Matching Exception. Insular Areas: In lieu of the matching funds requirement, the insular areas of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United States shall provide matching funds from non-Federal sources in an amount equal to not less than 50 percent of the grants awarded. The Secretary may waive this matching fund requirement for any fiscal year if the Secretary determines that the government of the insular area will be unlikely to meet the matching requirement for the fiscal year. Insular applicants may submit a waiver request as a PDF attachment to the application (see Part IV.B.2.c.(2) for specific instructions).

For all projects:

Matching: Applications shall include written verification of commitments of matching support from non-federal sources. Written verification means:

The sources and the amount of all matching support from outside the applicant organization should be summarized on a separate page and placed in the application as a part of the Budget

Include the matching amount, the budget category for the match, and detail how the matching support, from each source, will be used (e.g., salary and position supported). Additionally, all pledge agreements must be included as a PDF attachment in Field K as well.

The value of applicant contributions to the project shall be established in accordance with the applicable cost principles. Applicants should refer to OMB Circulars A-21, Cost Principles for Educational Institutions; A-87, Cost Principles for State, Local, and Tribal Governments; 2 CFR Part 215, Uniform Administrative Requirements for Grants and Agreements With Institutions of Higher Education, Hospitals, and Other Non-Profit Organizations (OMB Circular A10); for further guidance and other requirements relating to allowable costs.

All projects must report annually into REEport. An annual Progress Report is due 90 calendar days after the awards anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day of which the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period. The following information, when applicable, must be included in the Project Modifications section of the annual Progress Report:

1) A comparison of actual accomplishments with the goals established for the reporting period (where the output of the project can be expressed readily in numbers, a computation of the cost per unit of output should be submitted if the information is considered useful);

2) The reasons for slippage if established goals were not met; and

3) Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

c. Final Technical Report

The Final Technical Report is required within 90 calendar days after the expiration or termination of the award. The Final Technical Report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments made only during the final reporting segment of the project. In addition to supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:

Identify equipment purchased with any Federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

FINANCIAL REPORTING:

As outlined in 2 CFR 200.327, the recipient must submit financial status reports by the frequency required in the terms and conditions of the award. The following are the financial reporting requirements for NIFA:

Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425:

An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period.

A final Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due 90 days after the expiration date of this award. The report must be submitted to the Awards Management Division (AMD) as a pdf attachment to an email sent to awards@nifa.usda.gov.
